I object to the Remondis waste treatment facility due to the potential odour issues for the community. Any waste treatment facility I have been near omits an odour - I do not believe the odour can be fully contained.

I also object to the proposed increased traffic congestion on James Ruse Dr and Grand Ave which can be dangerous.

Building the waste treatment facility on the former James Hardie site is also a health risk to surrounding people who work, live or utilise services in the area. Asbestos contamination is a possibility if the sealed concrete cap is allowed to be breached.

Why is Western Sydney becoming the dumping ground for NSW - and if this has to be the case than why can't the facilities be located together away from the general population - Rosehill/Camellia is a built up area - why not put it out at Eastern Creek with an existing waste facility?
