My family owns a house on Cambage Street which we use often for weekend breaks. There are many small children who use this street, including my young niece and nephew and we see it as a quiet street in which they can ride their bikes and walk in relative safety from heavy traffic and high volume roads. Many members of the street utilise the street in the same way and have chosen this particular location to live and holiday for this reason.

There are no footpaths for the children to use or walk family pets and it is a no-through road. To increase traffic , including heavier vehicles, to allow access to the Abalone Farm would increase the danger to the road users including children and animals. I understand access can be provided from the main road and this appears to be a more appropriate avenue.
