P3816	Project Website Submission	21/10/2010	Online Submission from Georgia Dixon of student (support)	Splendour in the Grass. I've only attended the festival twice. My first time, it was Byron Bay, and who couldn't fall in love with the atmosphere? My second, Woodford. I like Woodfordia but it's no Byron. There is no other festival in Australia which comes close to Splendour. Being held in Byron Bay makes it so special. Yes, it's great this event creates jobs, improves the natural environment, increases tourism (greatly), etc, etc; However, it comes down to culture. Splendour is and has been consumed by a huge number of people. It is healthy consumption, it should be encouraged, it should be welcomed with open arms. I do not comprehend how it's become an issue - the pros/cons list looks horribly unbalanced to me. Did you know over 100,000 people travel to Glastonbury in the UK every year? Because its the greatest music festival in the world. Creating over 100,000 memories. Creating endless benefits for the Glastonbury community. Splendour is Australia's Glastonbury. There should not be any comparisons but, make Splendour another reason to come here. Splendour is like Byron's cool Uncle, you only see him once a year, and when you do, it's a weekend you never forget.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense. With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management. It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management. P3819	Project Website Submission	21/10/2010	Online Submission from Georgie Marks (support)	I would definitely apply for a job at the North Byron Parklands and know that it will lay my employment path out. This is the opportunity that I have always hoped Byron Bay would offer. The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understory of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understory to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures. P3820	Project Website Submission	21/10/2010	Online Submission from Charles Brookes (support)	It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region. With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals. North Byron Parklands organisation are serious about managing the ecological issues at the event site. An example of this is the fact that there have been more vegetation and flora surveys conducted at the site than housing, industrial estate, and quarries assessments. P3822	Project Website Submission	21/10/2010	Online Submission from Hollie White (support)	The Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities. The North Byron Parklands proposal has considered both indigenous and non-indigenous issues associated with the proposal. In particular, Parklands has worked closely with the local Tweed/Byron Aboriginal Land Council and has complemented a number of archaeological digs to help determine the significance of parts of the site. It is pleasing to see that certain areas of the site will become â€œout of boundsâ€ to protect identified areas of importance. From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application.

As a youth of the area I am constantly searching for ways to broaden my horizons. I believe this proposal will offer new opportunities, new jobs, new experiences and new ways to develop.

Take it back to Byron guys, it is a wonderful and stunning place for everyone to be, and it is because of the amazing experiences I have had at these festivals that I frequent Byron regularly throughout the year. People from all over Australia travel to your beautiful town for these festivals. You are getting the ultimate exposure and you should feel extremely proud to be representing Queensland.

Cheers!

Submission 21/10/2010 Online Submission from Toni
Rogers (support)

The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast.

I have attended a number of Splendour in the Grass festivals, traveling from Western Australia and each time spent at least a week enjoying a holiday in Byron Bay. Without the festival, I fear I never would have headed to Byron Bay and would be none the wiser to its beauty and fantastic holiday destination. I recommend a visit to Byron Bay and the surrounding areas to anyone considering heading that way.

Throughout all the festivals I have attended (and as a 38 year old that has been many!) Splendour was the first and has been the most visibly efficient at promoting environmental considerations.

While much is made of the Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

Byron and the Northern Rivers unemployment rate (around 8.5%) is substantially higher than the NSW average of 5.5%. We need businesses such as Parklands who can provide employment opportunities to many in our community, particularly young people.

P3825	Project Website Submission	21/10/2010	Online Submission from Daniela Sunde-Brown of QUT (support)	The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment. Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered. Byron Bay has so much beauty to offer and the North Byron Parklands is a perfect way to put it on display. It will develop opportunities that will help small businesses which will ensure the continued success of Byron Bay. With respect to the environment one of the risks that the people from North Byron Parklands have identified is the potential for road kill associated with traffic movements before, during and after an event. P3828	Project Website Submission	21/10/2010	Online Submission from Elizabeth Szabo of Elizabeth A Szabo Legal (support)	One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive. Prior to the site being acquired by Splendour the land was degraded as cattle had been grazing on it. With the new attitude and policy by the Splendour organization toward the land will consciously be developed with the flora and fauna in mind. As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive.

Let's look at the environmental initiatives that the North Byron Parklands people are proposing. Environmental auditing, sediment and erosion control, fencing to keep people in cleared areas, buffer zones to forests, inductions for workers, wildlife rescue teams during events, traffic control, no dogs, etc. The list of requirements they have placed on event operators is substantial and will result in a well protected environment.

We really need this to get the go ahead. My friends and I will go to events at North Byron Parklands. Hopefully we will be able to get jobs at events.

The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people. The employment size of businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire reflects that the majority of businesses within the Byron Shire (60%) and the Northern Rivers Region (62%) are non-employing. The majority of these businesses are sole operators and the region needs organisationâ€™s like North Byron Parklands to provide much needed jobs. The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. Itâ€™s about young people and being young. This is really important. P3830	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Elecia Douglas of Australian University Sport ()	In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

It is unlikely that there is another events venue that has the level of environmental management systems in place as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. Based on ISO14001 the environmental policies and procedures to be implemented at this venue will provide robust monitoring and mitigation measures to ensure that fauna and flora is protected. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative.

Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project.

North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

North Byron Parklands proposal is a tangible cultural asset for the youth. It seems obvious, the jobs that will come from the proposal are needed in the region. This application should be approved by local government if only for the young people in the community.

The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people.

Having read the environmental assessment report I can say without reserve that I strongly support the proposal put forward by North Byron Parklands. The application covers off on all of the important issues such as noise, traffic and ecology. It is so pleasing to see a development that has considered and responded to such a diverse range of issues. I firmly believe that the government should approve this application.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

With jobs hard to come by in regional areas such as the north coast it is really important that projects that can provide ongoing employment opportunities are considered seriously by government. I believe that North Byron Parklands is one such venture that can offer many people a job opportunity.

North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. Bring on the variety and the possibilities!

I have only been to one splendour in my life, and it was the most amazing time of my life.

i have travelled to byron bay a few times now and it would be the most ideal place for the festival to stay. One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive. Jobs are hard to come by these days. Many businesses are struggling to make ends meet. The arts and events industry has provided a lot of employment opportunities on the far north coast and North Byron Parklands should be approved because it will be a major employer in the area.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

P3835	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Brendon Rosolen (support)	My name is Brendon Rosolen and I am proud to say that I have attended every Splendour in the Grass festival in it's 10 year history. Each year I have seen it get bigger and better than the previous year and I was disheartened to see it move to Woodford for 2010. While the Woodford site was excellent and the festival itself was one of the best I have attended, it didn't feel right that Splendour in the Grass wasn't in Byron Bay. I feel that being in Byron Bay was what made Splendour so special, with it's iconic beaches and relaxed lifestyle people came from all over the world to experience it.

As a student of the Creative Industries there are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has moved. The North Byron Parklands would provide an excellent training opportunity in the area of event management. With up to twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals. Not to mention the additional tourist dollars that holding more events, or simply making Splendour in the Grass bigger, would bring to the Byron shire.

Please bring Splendour back to Byron Bay, where it belongs.

While the North Byron Parklands has some valuable forest cover it must be recognised that much of this cover resembles a patch quilt, the result of decades of agricultural use. To improve the value and function of these disparate forest blocks there is a much needed planting program similar to that proposed by the North Byron Parklands people to join and reconnect the vegetation. This one action of mass plantings will absolutely improve the environmental value across and adjacent to the proposal.

Much of the agricultural and forestry industries of the northern rivers has significantly declined over the past decade and many people have been forced into lower paid sectors such as retail and tourism. Now more than ever there is a need for diversifying the employment base and the North Byron Parklands proposal will do exactly that. With job positions projected to be more than 200 there is a very real need to approve such a project.

Tourism is a massive income generating activity for Byron Shire and the northern rivers region. The Parklands proposal will bring tens of thousands of people to the area, all of whom will need accommodation and food. It is so important that this project be approved because the positive economic impacts are so significant.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

I have attended the past three Splendour in the Grass festivals and they have been incredibly fun and amazingly well organised. If the owners hold up their side of the bargain by restoring the environment and limiting the public access to the site then they why should they not be allowed to hold 20 days of festivals?

The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements.

North Byron Parklands offers music, entertainment and culture for our locals and tourists. What a great way of putting Byron Bay more on the map.

What better way to build a community and strengthen its ties, then through music and bringing happiness to thousands of locals and fans of Byron Bay.

P3839	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Louis lederwasch (support)	Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management. The employment size of businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire reflects that the majority of businesses within the Byron Shire (60%) and the Northern Rivers Region (62%) are non-employing. The majority of these businesses are sole operators and the region needs organisationâs like North Byron Parklands to provide much needed jobs.

Our environment, events, culture and celebration is an amazing reason to go ahead with this proposal.

With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals.

Having read the North Byron Parklands submission and attended many events over the past number of years I am blown away by the level of detail and the huge range of control measures that this development offers to ensure smooth and successful events. The North Coast of NSW needs a development of this nature and it should be approved by the NSW government.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

P3842	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Josephine Gaddes (support)	In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only every using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue. Not to mention the benefits in regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning.

P3844	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ben Posetti (support)	I sincerely believe that allowing events in this region is of huge benefit to the local area and community and to cultural development in Australia in general. The conditions outlined in this proposal are reasonable beyond doubt in ensuring no environmental impact or negative community impact.

With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas.

The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. North Byron Parklands would help provide employment for many of these young people, thus giving them a reason to stay in the area.

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

The events that will be held at North Byron Parklands will bring thousands of new people to the Byron Bay area each year. This can only benefit the local businesses.

P3845	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Zoe Andrikidis (support)	The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes. The North Byron Parklands proposal has considered both indigenous and non-indigenous issues associated with the proposal. In particular, Parklands has worked closely with the local Tweed/Byron Aboriginal Land Council and has complemented a number of archaeological digs to help determine the significance of parts of the site. It is pleasing to see that certain areas of the site will become 'out of bounds' to protect identified areas of importance. The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. It's about young people and being young. This is really important. P3846	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Eswen O'Callaghan (support)	North Byron Parklands is all about hosting lots of different events, all of which require people to work in a variety of jobs. One event can employ hundreds of people for a period of time and in an area such as Byron such job opportunities are very welcome. We should be doing all we can to make this project happen. In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area. Jobs are hard to come by these days. Many businesses are struggling to make ends meet. The arts and events industry has provided a lot of employment opportunities on the far north coast and North Byron Parklands should be approved because it will be a major employer in the area.

The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesn't proceed then it's likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklands group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity.

With respect to the mapped wildlife corridor it should be pointed out that many parts of it identified as high conservation have in fact been cleared by previous land owners. The North Byron Parklands proposal has not only committed to helping restore this corridor, they have also committed to doing so in accordance with the Byron Shire Council wildlife map. This means having the opportunity to actually realise 'on-ground' what the currently inaccurate council map purports is in existence. The end result will be a greatly improved corridor that actually has some functioning capabilities.

You only have to look around the Byron community when a festival or an event takes place to see the people smiling and the excitement in the air. The North Byron Parklands proposal sure sounds like a perfect way to make sure the people keep smiling.

It is pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events.

The various Aboriginal clans in and around the proposed North Byron Parklands site have had a long history in this area and for this reason the Parklands people have spent a lot of time consulting indigenous groups and organisations to work out how best to assess the site for significance. This process was done in a cooperative framework with the results that potential sites of significance will be protected through fencing and other means. The archaeological report does not identify any aspects of the project that will have a negative impact on important cultural artefacts or values.

As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

This proposal really needs to be approved by local government. The young people in the region will support the events and attend. Some will be able to be employed by the event managers for what seems like an endless possibility of jobs, from musicians performances to fence erecting.

It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it seems to make sense to me to approve it.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

North Byron Parklands commitment to the environment and vegetation management should be applauded. I see no reason at all why this shouldn't go ahead.

The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process.

The Byron Shire Council identifies the creative industries sector as one of nine key focus areas which foster the prosperity of the shire through sustainable job creation. The shire has a long history of creative endeavours and this needs to be built on by supporting such proposals as that put forward by North Byron Parklands. Generating a large number of jobs for the area, it is extremely important that it is approved. Doing so will provide a broad spectrum of the local community with jobs that would otherwise not be available.

The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone.

It would be a shame to see this proposal turned down, it doesn't take much to see that the North Byron Parklands proposal has so much to offer.

With respect to the environment one of the risks that the people from North Byron Parklands have identified is the potential for road kill associated with traffic movements before, during and after an event. As such they have implemented a number of requirements including on site environmental inductions, speed limiting devices, signage and a wildlife rescue team. This is just one example of the sound environmental practices they are proposing.

The Byron Shire Council identifies the creative industries sector as one of nine key focus areas which foster the prosperity of the shire through sustainable job creation. I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved.

P3853	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Moana Ngawaka (support)	Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project. In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. P3854	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Anthony Murphy of Chapel St Osteopathy (support)	The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant. With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs. The environmental assessments completed for the North Byron Parklands proposal identify a number of threatened species which in the most part are winged creatures. It is most likely (based on research elsewhere) that these creatures will move away from any light and noise disturbances for no longer than for the period they occur. This is particularly true if there are specific food resources available on the North Byron Parklands site. So, once an event is finished it is more than probably that these animals will return and enjoy the quietude that will prevail at this site for the vast majority of the year. A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. That's the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Let's get it approved. Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

Hello,

I would like to submit a letter of support for Splendour in the Grass to occupy the North Byron Parklands.

I believe that the revenue raised from the three day festival will dramatically aid in the conservation of the natural parklands.

North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures.

Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

Regards,

P3857	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Chris Littler (support)	The Splendour in the Grass team have gone above and beyond to find a permanent home for this much loved festival.

As a Western Australian, I am very excited to find out about this new potential site for upcoming events. Splendour in the Grass offers a unique and dynamic event that no other national Australian festival offers, and this is why I am proud to attend year after year.

The 2010 festival was held in Queensland, due to this fact myself and my friends who I travel with year after year, postponed the trip until the event returns to Byron Bay.

I live on the coast in Perth, and have travelled extensively within Western Australia, and as much as I love my home state, The central and north coast of NSW holds a special place in my heart. The small towns dotted up the coast hold vibrancy and relaxed culture that is mirrored no where across our great country, and this is what keeps bringing me back, and hanging out in the autumn months for that first Splendour line up.

The North Byron Parklands application exceeds all expectations and must be approved. There is just so many good things that will come from North Byron Parklands proposal including environmental restoration, employment opportunities, a tourism increase, and a boost in local businessâ€™ income. There is no reason why this proposal should not be approved by state government.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parklands' environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

Apart from extensive consultation with indigenous groups and various elders the North Byron Parklands group has already established a long history of working with and employing local indigenous bush regeneration teams to plant thousands of trees across their site. This tree planting program has been a great way to involve traditional land owners in helping to restore what is currently quite a degraded site.

P3858	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Caroline Grant (support)	It is unlikely that there is another events venue that has the level of environmental management systems in place as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. Based on ISO14001 the environmental policies and procedures to be implemented at this venue will provide robust monitoring and mitigation measures to ensure that fauna and flora is protected. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative. The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people. Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing. People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved. Splendour in the grass is an amazing, peaceful, positive event, that brings together music lovers from all over the country and contributes a massive amount of money and media attention to the surrounding area. P3860	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Carly Brooks (support)	Byron and the surrounding areas relies substantially on a range of small businesses and cottage industries to employ the people that live in this community. There are not many large employers such as what North Byron Parklands would become should it be approved. I think we need to approve and support these types of projects in regional areas to ensure there are enough job choices available to people.

Positive environmental outcomes are important for any development and one very important outcome offered by the North Byron Parklands proponents is to apply a vegetation management plan across the entire site. Under this plan sections of the site will be restored back to pristine forest cover while others will be treated as managed parklands. Under this treatment very large areas will be planted with low density native trees that will provide connection points for fauna to avoid large pastoral areas and reduce the likelihood of predation during movement across the site. They are not required by law to do this, but do see it as an important environmental outcome.

I have been attending Splendour in the Grass since I was 15 in 2002 and love Byron Bay. being from Queensland, it is the one time of the year that I know I will be able to head to beautiful Byron and enjoy the gorgeous scenery, the lovely people and the adorable shops and cafes.

P3861	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Holly Finch (support)	The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

The North Byron Parklands proposal is exactly the thing we need as a society, especially for our economy. It will develop opportunities that will help small businesses which will ensure the continued success of Byron Bay.

Byron Bay is a magnificent part of the NSW coast and can be truly appreciated through a music and arts festival that brings thousands of people through to the area. It not only boosts tourism but brings recognition to this beautiful part of Australia.

P3862	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jessica Dimcevski (support)	As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive. So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account.

Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way. I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. Dear NSW Department of Planning,

I want to submit this small contribution to the fight for Splendour in the Grass' new home as I truly believe that this event has become an integral part of Australian music culture, and have faith in its abilities to contribute to the development of environmentally sustainable futures, and appreciation of our great country and its landscape.

No other event promotes awareness of environmental concerns the way Splendour does. The event provides an exciting and inspiring environment that allows people from across the country to come together and celebrate the beauty of our land, our music, our people, and in doing this facilitates a merging of new ideas and passions.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management.

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered.

I live in Perth & have only attended 2 Splendour in the Grass festivals (in 2005 & 2006), but I can honestly say that they rate among the best experiences of my life (so far)... 4 the record I am 25yo. I am a musician in a band & I also do volunteer work with Conservation Council WA, so as you can see I am passionate about both music & environmental sustainability. 1 of the main influences in me developing my sense of self & hence my current career path was the time I spent in Byron Bay in 05&06. I also study @ University where my Major is Anthropology, thus I strongly believe in cultural enrichment & dynamism. Events like Splendour in the Grass need to be held & Byron Bay is the place where Splendour needs to be held. I trust entirely in the capability of the Splendour organisation to ensure that the environmental, cultural & economic integrity of the region is not harmed but strengthened. This cannot be said for whatever other business proposals might be put to the community re the proposed Splendour site in the future. I have also attended the Glastonbury festival in the UK & the Roskilde festival in Denmark. Both of these events are cultural institutions that bring vigour & economic gain to their respective regions & leave little to no carbon &/or environmental footprint in their wake, all the while generating employment for hundreds of thousands of people. With these examples as 'business models' & the Splendour team's dedication & progressive attitude I can see no reason why the Splendour in the Grass festival returning to Byron Bay would/could/should be refused. I trust you will make the right decision & allow this extraordinary, world-class event to continue to flourish in it's cultural home. Name: Nathan Jakovich Organisation: Revolutionary Entrepreneurs

I strongly support this move. Byron is centrally placed not only for NSW, but for citizens across Australia.

North Byron Parklands proposal is a tangible cultural asset for the youth. It seems obvious, the jobs that will come from the proposal are needed in the region. This application should be approved by local government if only for the young people in the community.

At present the North Byron Parklands site is subject to significant sediment and erosion issues. Previous land practices have seen poor top soil removal and impacts on graded lands. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address these existing soil impacts and also has put in place a sediment and erosion control plan during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended.

From Tweed Heads to Evans Head most of the business activity revolves around tourism. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved.

Too many people are forced to look outside Byron for employment opportunities. The North Byron Parklands proposal offers ample opportunities and will surely make the locals very happy.

While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

I think the North Byron Parklands gives the youth of today a chance to enjoy new experiences. This is what we need to keep the youth entertained and focused.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive. Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project. The Splendour people aren't just using the area for their festival but they are also adding to the environment around it. They are offsetting to the best of their abilities any environmental effects that their festival may have.

Notably, festivals are a huge economic boost to the region they are held in helping industries such as local hospitality businesses and more.

It is a matter of seeing the opportunities for positive environmental outcomes in what are presently unexpected places. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. Those in the position to bring about such change should be encouraged, not demonised.

The events management industry is extremely competitive and only those operators who can demonstrate compliance with all facets of event management time and time again are the ones that survive. The owners of North Byron Parklands each have years of experience in bringing highly successful events to the general public. Such an outstanding track record only comes about through effective, well planned event policies and procedures.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

The current population of the Northern Rivers is approximately 294,000 people, and is anticipated to increase to approximately 376,000 people by 2036. Such an increase in population requires a suite of stable employers. North Byron Parklands can play a significant role in providing jobs to people in this region.

It is true there are a number of threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of irregular noise to such species shows that they will usually relocate and return quickly once noise ceases. This a positive result for all parties and it is good to know the species will not be disturbed some 260 days of the year.

North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it.

We really need this to get the go ahead. My friends and I will go to events at North Byron Parklands. Hopefully we will be able to get jobs at events.

With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values will be done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. The system is that comprehensive that it has even considered and regulated light spill from potable lighting towers. The proponents should be commended on such an initiative.

Most of the businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire are sole traders and do not offer any employment opportunities to the community. Bringing Splendour in the Grass festival back to Byron Bay would result in North Byron Parklands offering many new employment opportunities for the residents in the region.

As soon as I started reading about this proposal I had an instant realization of the benefits North Byron Parklands would bring to our local economy but also to my family.

It would be a shame to see this proposal turned down, it doesn't take much to see that the North Byron Parklands proposal has so much to offer.

I know many young people who would love the change to work on such a project. The government needs to take into account the generation of employment this proposal will create. North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. This means having the opportunity to actually realise 'on-ground' what the currently inaccurate council map purports is in existence. Its ridiculous that splendour is anywhere else but byron. The fact a few minority of locals want to save byron for themselves is a joke. Byorn can handle the extra people on all accounts (including sewage and water concerns) and with the incredible rent on any shop in the town, business owners need this vital extra income. This weekend not only brings people for this weekend but they return for holidays outside this period and invest more money in the area.

The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management. In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

While it is understood that business ventures such as North Byron Parklands are focussed on turning a profit, it is also really pleasing to see they have expended a fair amount of effort on protecting and enhancing the environment in which they operate. Initiatives such as light spill and noise management and inducting all staff and contractors is a great way to protect the environment and demonstrate a commitment to sustainable best practice.

North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed. North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense. North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land.

Employment opportunities are getting harder and harder for many people in rural areas to find. With so many industries moving out of rural areas we need to encourage those businesses that want to set up in these regions with as much help as possible. I understand that North Byron Parklands will provide a large number of jobs across a very broad range skill sets. Projects of this nature should be approved on this basis alone.

P3893	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Yukako Yamada of Global Village Byron Bay (support)	It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged. In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet. One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives. Being young it's important to get out there. North Byron Parklands offers us opportunities to interact on levels that promote us to look outside the square. It would be a great opportunity for us to have this venue available.

I have moved to Byron Bay from Japan for Splendour.

P3895	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from teneika jan of n/a (support)	There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses. When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land. In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken. If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

I have two children who are now young adults and have been attending Splendour for years particularly my eldest who has attended probably nearly every one and they look forward to it all year. This event is some where that they can stay local and see music and entertainment that you can't access easily in regional areas especially for kids under 18 yrs.

Kids love festivals and entertainment, we need this in our area as, don't we advertise and pride ourselves in the Byron Shire for being a creative and arty region, so lets not loose this.

Also weren't we all young once and needed somewhere to go for entertainment, so bringing Splendour back will give our kids something else to look forward to in the region.

For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â€” young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia. Most outdoor events pay little attention to the environment so it is heartening to see an organisation such as North Byron Parklands who have put a considerable effort into developing specific procedures and work instructions designed to protect the environment. These guys even have an environmental incident notification system which will document all issues and the steps taken to resolve them. Splendour in the Grass is important. P3898	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ashleigh Bernard (support)	The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant. Byron Shire and the wider northern rivers region has been a fast growing area for the creative industries sector. Huge numbers of people have moved into the region with expectations of finding work in this sector and more than ever there is a need to ensure that projects that directly and indirectly benefit this growing sector are supported. The Parklands proposal if approved will become a dominant force in expanding the creative industries sector and will provide substantial job opportunities. P3903	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Therese Holm (support)	One of the unintended effects on the environment from outdoor events is light spill. So it is pleasing to see that this issue is well addressed under the organisation's environmental standard. This standard requires lighting to be directed downwards, away from forest blocks, using low pressure sodium vapour lights where possible, and turning off light towers at a certain time of night. Such measures will greatly reduce disturbances to any localised fauna during such events. Employment is a major consideration for this proposal, bringing new hope to the people that want to stay within Byron.

The local area containing the Parklands site has an ancient meeting place for Aboriginal people to come to together for cultural purposes. The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people.

In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire.

Positive environmental outcomes are important for any development and one very important outcome offered by the North Byron Parklands proponents is to apply a vegetation management plan across the entire site. Under this plan sections of the site will be restored back to pristine forest cover while others will be treated as managed parklands. Under this treatment very large areas will be planted with low density native trees that will provide connection points for fauna to avoid large pastoral areas and reduce the likelihood of predation during movement across the site. They are not required by law to do this, but do see it as an important environmental outcome.

Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable.

I have been to many outdoor event sites over the past number of years but have never come across a venue that has taken so much effort to develop and implement so many environmental programs. When events are not being staged at North Byron Parklands, there will be reforestation and noxious weed removal activities. When there are events at this site they will need to comply with a bunch of strict environmental policies and procedures. If only other venues could take a leaf out of these guys' book.

Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project.

The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone.

I sincerely hope the NSW government will reconsider and approve this project. For many years Splendour in The Grass and Byron Bay have been thought of hand in hand. It's only natural that Byron be home to Splendour. Splendour isn't Splendour with out Byron and Byron isn't Byron with out Splendour.

P3906	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Emily Cirona (support)	At present the North Byron Parklands site is subject to significant sediment and erosion issues. Previous land practices have seen poor top soil removal and impacts on graded lands. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address these existing soil impacts and also has put in place a sediment and erosion control plan during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended.

This proposal brings in new hope to Byron Bays local economy, small businesses that currently struggle will thrive on the additional revenue.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

P3907	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from nadia rane (support)	The list of events that each of the owners of North Byron Parklands have held over the past ten years is absolutely staggering in terms of venues, numbers of patrons and dealing successfully with a range of regulatory authorities. Such experience will provide a significant edge when events are held at North Byron Parklands and will no doubt make for a succession of successful events. One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature. Byron Bay has so much beauty to offer and the North Byron Parklands is a perfect way to put it on display. I say yes, to this proposal.

Byron Bay is widely known for pushing the barrier and making things possible. We as a town have so much to offer and this new proposal will put us on the map so to speak. Itâ€™s a fantastic opportunity for us all.

As we have seen demonstrated by the woodford site it is possible to create an environmentally sustainable event venue, in which large scale events can be held without disrupting the surrounding environment, and i am sure that the owners of this land will do everything in their power to ensure that this happens at the north byron parklands.

P3909	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stephanie Parker (support)	I would like to make a submission regarding the use of the North Byron Parklands site. Under the North Byron Parklands environmental management manual there is a particular Environmental Standard that requires events being held on the site to adhere to a number of stringent environmental controls. The controls include buffer zones, environmental inductions, fencing aspects, wildlife rescue teams and lighting requirement to reduce illumination of bush blocks. I am unaware of any other outdoor event venue requiring such tight environmental controls. Parklands will certainly be moving towards Australian best practice, if not worldâ€™s best environmental practice. The North Byron Parklands project has undertaken both a high level of fauna and flora assessments and a comprehensive environmental risk assessment process. As a result they have developed a management manual that covers a range of aspects including the environment. They have even developed a standalone environmental induction form for all staff and contractors that clearly stipulates what can and cannot take place while on site. These measures are very impressive indeed. Another important point to consider is the opportunities Splendour brings to the region. As a former resident of Northern NSW (Lismore) who would love to move back, something as well planned and thought out as this event, which has the potential to not only provide employment, but bring growth to the region which provides more employment, can only be a good thing. A lot of people wish to move to regional and rural areas, however the employment situation precludes them from doing so. With so many people moving into capital cities the government needs to ensure that regional employment opportunities are secured whenever they are offered. Parklands have a project that will provide plenty of jobs for a range of people and it is super important that they jobs stay in our area.

Finally, I have been attending Splendour for 9 years and can say without a doubt that it is a well-run festival that shows the greatest concern for its surroundings. Projects such as the can recycling programs introduced a few years ago and the bin-ya-butts which have been around since the first year I attended in 2002 point to their efforts in recycling and caring for the environment, as well as the opportunity to purchase green tickets, the treeplanting project at Yelgun (which I among many people participated in) and the eco-cops to help educate people about littering. These kind of measures were not necessarily required at Belongil Fields and the cost and effort involved in setting them up probably outweighed the cost of just cleaning up afterwards (which most festivals tend to do, having just seen the results of a 1 day festival in Brisbane's Botanical Gardens, which was in no way run as well or with as much concern for the environment as Splendour, despite being held in a much more environmentally significant place than Belongil Fields). I think if the Splendour organisers and North Byron Parklands owners were to get the opportunity to use the land they have chosen for this purpose their efforts in keeping the environment pristine would continue and be on a much larger scale, given that they will have responsibility for the land the entire year, rather than just for a few days each year.

Finally, another important aspect of Splendour is the sense of community that exists. Allowing Splendour to have their own purpose-built site can only build on that and can be a wonderful opportunity for young people in the region to engage with others in their home environment and be proud of their region. An event as well-run as Splendour that shows care for the environment and the community in which it exists, which is so different from many other similar events, brings many positive benefits to the region in which it resides.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward.

The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view.

North Byron Parklands will join forces with local learning institutes like Southern Cross University and SAE (School of Audio Engineering) to further improve the areas creative industries. This alliance will provide the community with world class training and work experience opportunities.

Many people worry about financially providing for themselves and their families and rightly so. Today it is hard to find a good job outside of the larger cities. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along offering lots of jobs it is surely in the interests of working families that such a project is located in a regional area. It should be approved just on its employment capabilities let alone any other benefits it is bound to bring.

To whom it may concern,

This is a positive submission on behalf of the Splendour site at Byron Bay. I believe that if the community is behind this then there should be no issue.

While much is made about the supposed wildlife corridor in and around the North Byron Parklands site the fact is that much of the vegetation is patchy and degraded. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue.

The real question is why would North Byron Parklands proposal not be approved? I can only see positives to such a development.

Cheers, Grace

As we generally have a great relationship with these providers in Byron, it was so disheartening to hear that they suffered so much due to the loss of Splendour in the Grass.

P3914	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Suzanne Granger (support)	Splendour in the Grass is a unique music and cultural event I have been attending now for at least 5 years. I didn't go to the festival this year as I wasn't happy with the change of venue. part of the reason I go is because it is near Byron. I will miss the Belongil site but understand the festival needs to expand. Having been to several Glastonbury Festivals and seeing firsthand the successful execution of a sustainable event I am confident the Splendour organisers can achieve the same outcomes, especially as it is much smaller event, catering for around 30,000 I believe. The Splendour festival brings economic, social and cultural value to the Byron shire, it would be a shame to see it go. P3915	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Andrew Preston ()	It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged. The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. Future plantings and assisted regeneration in these areas will significantly increase opportunities for movement of terrestrial fauna. This is only one of many significant programs that will enhance the environment within and adjacent to the site.

Making new friends, learning new activities, attending new and exciting events, a place where we are all welcome and safe. Bring on North Byron Parklands.

Splendour in the Grass is a World renowned event I've attended many times and it'd be a terrible shame if it was lost to the beautiful Byron shire, both for festival attendees and the local community. In all my years of visiting Byron for Splendour the local public sentiment towards the festival has been overwhelmingly positive so I can't understand why a small but vocal section of the local community are fighting against this proposal. In economic terms alone Splendour in the Grass is incredibly important to the Byron Shire, but the list of other benefits is extensive (cultural, promotional, responsible environmental management, etc). Without North Byron Parklands it seems Splendour will be lost to the region which would be a very sad state of affairs.

Kind regards,

P3916	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lydia Pollack of n/a (support)	I believe that cultural events in our community help people grow and develop. North Byron Parklands proposed event site would create social and inspiring opportunities for our regions youth. Currently many things are conspiring against the tourism industry, particularly the very strong Australian dollar. Enticing domestic travellers to holiday in Australia rather than abroad is a huge challenge for the tourism sector. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along that proposes to attract 35,000 people per event to a region such as the North Coast of NSW, this must be given serious consideration by approving authorities. Add to the fact that a number of these large events will eventually occur each year, the economic and tourism benefits are substantial. Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire. North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Those 7,500 trees are now some metres high and thriving. Splendour in the grass is a cultural event that places australia on the map for festivals. Popularity of festivals is growing each year and therefore it would be stupid for this event to be 'homeless'. Keep our entertainment/tourism industry within australia and allow australia to shine on the map of festivals worldwide.

P3917	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Megan Currin of n/a (support)

Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations.

This proposal really needs to be approved by local government. The young people in the region will support the events and attend. Some will be able to be employed by the event managers for what seems like an endless possibility of jobs, from musicians performances to fence erecting.

I think it's important for the area to attract people from all around the country for one of australia's biggest festivals. Please keep splendour close to our home.

P3918	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Shae Jones (support)	The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

A place where people can get together and enjoy the beauty that Byron Bay has to offer.

Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management.

For many young people in the local area, getting a job has proved to be very hard. This is because other than retail and tourism there are few large employers about. Bad luck if you do not want to make a career in pouring coffee or cleaning rooms. This project will offer a whole range of people with new prospects in securing a job in the creative industries, an industry that is on the rise in this area. We really do need more substantial employers.

P3920	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lisa Nuske (support)	As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

It is a matter of seeing the opportunities for positive environmental outcomes in what are presently unexpected places. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. Those in the position to bring about such change should be encouraged, not demonised.

P3921	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nicholas Harris (support)	The site in question if not used for a sustainable cultural arts and event venue may end up being used by whoever buys it in a manner that would place greater pressure on the environment. Here we have an opportunity to hold a low impact activity that will see the land rested for some 75% of the year. Allowing such large rest times will benefit both fauna and flora across and adjacent to the site. This is a very positive outcome. Employment is a major consideration for this proposal, bringing new hope to the people that want to stay within Byron. While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive. P3922	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from trevor fleming of lesley kehoe galleries (support)	Not only have the North Byron Parklands organisation developed what must be considered worldâ™s best practice environmental management systems and processes, they are also planning to have an environmental education program folded into the mix for good measure. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure. With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals. I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. Hi NSW Department of Planning

Splendour is an awesome, environmentally friendly and community orientated event that needs a home!

I know of many businesses that rely on events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region.

From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It's a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

P3924	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Marielle Cleary (support)	It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning. When you have the combined expertise of event operators as those that make up the owners of North Byron Parklands it is quite evident that events that are proposed to be held at the Parklands site will be conducted in a successful and safe manner. With years of combined expertise these industry leaders will ensure that all events are conducted in a manner that ensures the management of all aspects of large and small events are adequately covered.

P3925	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from simone frears (support)	One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive. The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal.

Not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption.

We have family members who own a business within the byron shire who suffered significantly from the loss of splendour this year . In previous years we have enjoyed coming to byron for splendour , a beautiful part of our country . We will return to byron again when splendour in the grass does .

Yours Sincerely

Having reviewed North Byron Parkland's environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity. I have been searching for a career opportunity close to home since finishing my HSC, this proposal sounds like exactly what I am after. Please approve the North Byron Parklands.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities to the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities. Under the North Byron Parklands environmental management manual there is a particular Environmental Standard that requires events being held on the site to adhere to a number of stringent environmental controls. The controls include buffer zones, environmental inductions, fencing aspects, wildlife rescue teams and lighting requirement to reduce illumination of bush blocks. I am unaware of any other outdoor event venue requiring such tight environmental controls. 20/10/2010 Online Submission from Shannon Keays (support)

The North Byron Parklands proposal will see the largest restoration program the region has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its highly detailed vegetation management plan which will result in 1000's of trees being strategically planted around the site. The wildlife corridor has been significantly degraded over many decades due to primary production and agriculture activities. This means the corridor is currently very fragmented and in real need of revegetation.

Not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption.

Positive environmental outcomes are important for any development and one very important outcome offered by the North Byron Parklands proponents is to apply a vegetation management plan across the entire site. Under this plan sections of the site will be restored back to pristine forest cover while others will be treated as managed parklands. Under this treatment very large areas will be planted with low density native trees that will provide connection points for fauna to avoid large pastoral areas and reduce the likelihood of predation during movement across the site. They are not required by law to do this, but do see it as an important environmental outcome.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parklandâ€™s environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

Recent statistics provided by the Australian Bureau of Statistics indicate that the majority of business owners in the shire and the northern rivers area do not employ people, rather these businesses are operated by self employed people. As such it is obvious that other larger organisations and businesses are required to employ people in a are in much need of job opportunities. North Byron Parklands is one such organisation proposing to generate up to 200 full time equivalent positions. Such a project is extremely important to this area.

With so many people relying on tourism for their income on the North Coast there is an obligation on behalf of state and local governments to help facilitate any reasonable project that will increase domestic and international tourist numbers. North Byron Parklands will become the home of a number of major events with each of these events attracting thousands of people to the area. This will greatly enhance the local tourism sector.

P3934	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Pauline Nash of T2 Tea (support)

One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive.

The various Aboriginal clans in and around the proposed North Byron Parklands site have had a long history in this area and for this reason the Parklands people have spent a lot of time consulting indigenous groups and organisations to work out how best to assess the site for significance. This process was done in a cooperative framework with the results that potential sites of significance will be protected through fencing and other means. The archaeological report does not identify any aspects of the project that will have a negative impact on important cultural artefacts or values.

The North Byron Parklands proposal brings so many positive benefits to the northern rivers region that based on planning merit alone, this application must be approved. Whether one considers employment, income generation, environmental protection measures or a massive boost to the region's tourism economy, this application exceeds all expectations. On this basis this proposal should be approved by the state government.

Let's get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, let's get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people.

The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve. The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger. One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature. The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands.

So many people in the northern rivers area rely on the tourism industry for their bread and butter. These days most businesses are geared towards the tourism dollar and if past trends are anything to go by this industry sector will continue to play a key role in the region's economic fortunes. The people behind Parklands will play a dominant role in growing and sustaining the tourism industry and we should all get behind them to make this project a reality.

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process.

One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives.

If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it seems to make sense to me to approve it.

With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management.

Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal.

The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed. The events management industry is extremely competitive and only those operators who can demonstrate compliance with all facets of event management time and time again are the ones that survive. The owners of North Byron Parklands each have years of experience in bringing highly successful events to the general public. Such an outstanding track record only comes about through effective, well planned event policies and procedures. With its focus on cultural heritage management, North Byron Parklands can instill in the region a greater understanding of our local indigenous and non-indigenous ancestry. It is true there are a number of threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of irregular noise to such species shows that they will usually relocate and return quickly once noise ceases. This a positive result for all parties and it is good to know the species will not be disturbed some 260 days of the year.

In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Those 7,500 trees are now some metres high and thriving.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

Most outdoor events pay little attention to the environment so it is heartening to see an organisation such as North Byron Parklands who have put a considerable effort into developing specific procedures and work instructions designed to protect the environment. These guys even have an environmental incident notification system which will document all issues and the steps taken to resolve them.

It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management.

The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. Music and arts should be embraced in our society because of these jobs that it creates and North Byron Parklands if it is approved is set to be a big employer for the area. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support.

The North Byron Parklands Project willÂ impact the environment positively and should be supported. The preservation of ecological values in and around the Parklands site is an important aspect of North Byron Parklands proposal. The large amount of scientific assessment that has been conducted shows that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values on the site.

The establishment of the North Byron Parklands will generate additional employment opportunities for the management and maintenance of the venue and event organisations. I think this is a really important benefit for this region.

In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures.

A lot of my friends are moving outside of Byron Bay to bigger and better opportunities. It would be great if we had those opportunities offered to us closer to home.

Kind regards,

Cassandra Barratt

P3950	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Angela Tewierik of N/A (support)	Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project. North Byron Parklands commitment to the environment and vegetation management should be applauded. I see no reason at all why this shouldnâ€™t go ahead. P3951	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from mitchell Kelly (support)	Not only have the North Byron Parklands organisation developed what must be considered worldâ™s best practice environmental management systems and processes, they are also planning to have an environmental education program folded into the mix for good measure. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure. On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives. How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. P3952	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lee Riley (support)	What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations. One of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive. P3953	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Melinda Wassell of The Soft Tissue Centre (support)	The organisers of Splendour in the Grass have been very engaging with festival-goers for many years now in consulting us about issues relating to the environment and how to help them improve on such issues. As an avid festival lover in Australia and abroad for the past 12 years I have seen very few other festivals take the action that Splendour has with regards to environmental initiatives.

It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management.

P3954	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Larissa Lewis (support)	Job opportunities are a hot topic on the north coast. If North Byron Parklands is not allowed to operate in Byron Shire then these jobs will be lost to another region willing to approve this project. The creation of local jobs is a very important one. Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed. I have been to a variety of music festivals from Splendour to Pryamid to Reading in England and I can safely say that my splendour experience at Byron Bay tops the list. P3956	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Natalie Choules (support)	Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing.

The Parklands project will greatly assist the ecological integrity of the area especially for the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and the 'coast to hinterland' wildlife corridor. The project results in thousands of extra trees planted, improved habitat for wildlife and additions to the Nature Reserve. The careful scheduling of events to maximise 'downtime' will allow the Parklands site to assist the functioning of the adjoining Nature Reserve.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment.

Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project.

P3958	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rachel Inglis (support)	It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being While the economy booms in other states, NSW and in particular regional NSW continues to suffer. The likely employment opportunities that North Byron Parklands will bring to the Northern Rivers shall be substantial. Many people in this region are finding it hard to secure a job and therefore we need as many of these innovative projects as possible. Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations.

North Byron Parklands commitment to the environment and vegetation management should be applauded. I see no reason at all why this shouldnâ€™t go ahead.

P3959	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Skye Thomas (support)	Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire. From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. Itâ€™s a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us. P3960	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alexander Howes (support)	With respect to the environment one of the risks that the people from North Byron Parklands have identified is the potential for road kill associated with traffic movements before, during and after an event. As such they have implemented a number of requirements including on site environmental inductions, speed limiting devices, signage and a wildlife rescue team. This is just one example of the sound environmental practices they are proposing. Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, â€œI learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a communityâ™. (Donna Sue Sanders â Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

With respect to the mapped wildlife corridor it should be pointed out that many parts of it identified as high conservation have in fact been cleared by previous land owners. The North Byron Parklands proposal has not only committed to helping restore this corridor, they have also committed to doing so in accordance with the Byron Shire Council wildlife map. This means having the opportunity to actually realise âœon-groundâ what the currently inaccurate council map purports is in existence. The end result will be a greatly improved corridor that actually has some functioning capabilities.

The events that will be held at North Byron Parklands will bring thousands of new people to the Byron Bay area each year. This can only benefit the local businesses.

Please allow the use of these park lands for Splendour in the Grass.

P3965	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from john roberts (support)	In relation to environmental management one of the biggest impacts on fauna in this region is dogs. It is pleasing to note that the environmental, health and safety management manual strictly prohibits dogs from entering the site. Just this on initiative will help to reduce pressure on the environment, not to mention the host of other excellent environmental programs they have documented. Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events.

North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it.

The arts and events industry has provided a lot of employment opportunities on the far north coast and North Byron Parklands should be approved because it will be a major employer in the area.

Letâ€™s look at the environmental initiatives that the North Byron Parklands people are proposing. Environmental auditing, sediment and erosion control, fencing to keep people in cleared areas, buffer zones to forests, inductions for workers, wildlife rescue teams during events, traffic control, no dogs, etc. The list of requirements they have placed on event operators is substantial and will result in a well protected environment.

P3970	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Sarah Olson of Splendor (support)	Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged. There needs to be a dedicated area for the youth to gather together and celebrate life. Young people will organise parties and have a good time no matter if there is large event venues or not. It is up to the adult members of the community to carry the youth by supporting venues designed for the youth. P3971	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Erin McInnes ()	One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land. Currently many things are conspiring against the tourism industry, particularly the very strong Australian dollar. Enticing domestic travellers to holiday in Australia rather than abroad is a huge challenge for the tourism sector. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along that proposes to attract 35,000 people per event to a region such as the North Coast of NSW, this must be given serious consideration by approving authorities. Add to the fact that a number of these large events will eventually occur each year, the economic and tourism benefits are substantial.

The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. It's about young people and being young. This is really important.

As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impres

P3972	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rebecca Searle (support)	To Whom it May Concern The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesn't proceed then it's likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklands? group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity. With such high unemployment rates in the Northern Rivers I am sure that the government is aware just how important it is to approve such a project as North Byron Parklands. I know many young people who would love the change to work on such a project. The government needs to take into account the generation of employment this proposal will create. The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understory of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understory to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures. There's not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

P3974	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Roisin Carson (support)	In relation to environmental management one of the biggest impacts on fauna in this region is dogs. It is pleasing to note that the environmental, health and safety management manual strictly prohibits dogs from entering the site. Just this on initiative will help to reduce pressure on the environment, not to mention the host of other excellent environmental programs they have documented. With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

Byron Bay is a tourist town that relies heavily on tourists to generate revenue. Our high season is summer but letâ€™s create a high season in winter too by utilising North Byron Parklands!

P3975	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Julia Balid (support)	Splendour in the Grass is a world renown festival which consistently delivers amazing arts and musical acts, a great vibe and a special community spirit. In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives.

The North Byron Parklands proposal sounds amazing, exactly what Byron and its community needs.

To Whom it May Concern,

I am a 25 year old Health Professional living near Wollongong. I have attended many festivals over the years and one beyond belief that has a great reputation in both Australia and Overseas is Splendour in the Grass. The festival is a plethora of cultural and music interest. It would be great to have a site that is both environmentally conscious and easily accessible.. Thousands of people buy out every rental property across the Byron Shire with countless dollars spent across the tourist attractions and local community markets.

Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing.

The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands.

There has to be a lot of consideration to ensure there is no risks or possible damage to the local area where the new location would be held. But I am sure the organisers are more than competent at planning these events and have one of the most successful festivals Australia has seen.

P3977	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Maia Ryall (support)	From Tweed Heads to Evans Head most of the business activity revolves around tourism. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved. Many small local businesses in local towns such as Nimbin, have suffered greatly from the loss of Splendour this year. If faced with losing 10's of thousands of dollars every year due to lack of tourists coming through because Splendour has changed location, these businesses will be faced with closure.

Please, bring Splendour back! It belongs in the Byron Shire! We are it's home! the locals and businesses need, want and welcome Splendour in the Grass. Bring it Back!

P3978	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rebecca martin (support)	To whom it concerns, Splendour in the Grass is quite possibly one of the best music festivals around, and there is something about it that makes it quissentially 'Byron'. A move to another area, would not only change the iconic festivals spirit, but would have a negative impact on the local Byron economy! The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view. We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it seems to make sense to me to approve it.

I truly hope you consider, favourably the proposition of continuing Spendour at Byron

P3979	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stephanie Pembroke (support)	North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved. There is currently approximately 294,00 people living on the Northern Rivers and this number is said to increase to approximately 376,000 residents by 2036. This huge increase in the next 26 years requires action to create employment opportunities in the region. North Byron Parklands can offer an array of employment opportunities in the future to tackle this population increase.

If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably.

In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area.

The employment size of businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire reflects that the majority of businesses within the Byron Shire (60%) and the Northern Rivers Region (62%) are non-employing. The majority of these businesses are sole operators and the region needs organisation?s like North Byron Parklands to provide much needed jobs.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parkland's environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

P3982	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Roanne Maxwell (support)	I strongly believe the Splendour in the Grass festival is a hugely positive event for the Byron Bay area. The projected visitor nights generated by the North Byron Parklands in its fifth year of operation is in the order of 97,000. This is a massive accommodation boon for hotels, motels, apartments and camping facilities in the region and does not even take into account the other forms of tourism expenditure that such visitors will make. Tourism is a key industry in northern NSW and should be supported in order to maintain and grow the sector into the future. The North Byron Parklands proposal will see the largest restoration program the region has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its highly detailed vegetation management plan which will result in 1000's of trees being strategically planted around the site. The wildlife corridor has been significantly degraded over many decades due to primary production and agriculture activities. This means the corridor is currently very fragmented and in real need of revegetation.

One of the unintended effects on the environment from outdoor events is light spill. So it is pleasing to see that this issue is well addressed under the organisation's environmental standard. This standard requires lighting to be directed downwards, away from forest blocks, using low pressure sodium vapour lights where possible, and turning off light towers at a certain time of night. Such measures will greatly reduce disturbances to any localised fauna during such events.

North Byron Parklands is proposing a sustainable arts and music venue that will provide significant employment opportunities to a range of people in the Byron and Northern Rivers region. Many of the jobs will suit our younger people and with an aging demographic this is vital to ensuring that there is an opportunity to up skill our youth in a growing and profitable sector. Jobs are very important.

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

North Byron Parklands proposal is a tangible cultural asset for the youth. It seems obvious, the jobs that will come from the proposal are needed in the region. This application should be approved by local government if only for the young people in the community.

Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc.

North Byron Parklands will join forces with local learning institutes like Southern Cross University and SAE (School of Audio Engineering) to further improve the areas creative industries. This alliance will provide the community with world class training and work experience opportunities.

North Byron Parklands will be a great addition to the Norther New South Wales coast and will have a significantly positive impact on the local area. Not only are they doing their upmost to preserve the natural environment, but such such major cultural events (such as Splendour in the Grass) will also and a great economic impact on the local community, bringing thousands of people from across australia and overseas to the area and therefore increasing sales in the food, hospitality and many other areas of the economy. On top of this, socially it will also have a positive impact, giving the area a great vibe during festival times and giving people a much more spacious area to enjoy cultural festivals with better facilities and such. It would be great to see the North Byron Parklands approved, particularly to host Splendour in the Grass, but also for the benefit of the local environment and community.

I would also like to note that:

North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures.

Many people worry about financially providing for themselves and their families and rightly so. Today it is hard to find a good job outside of the larger cities. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along offering lots of jobs it is surely in the interests of working families that such a project is located in a regional area. It should be approved just on its employment capabilities let alone any other benefits it is bound to bring.

How many fantastic cultural events and opportunities has NSW lost to other states, particularly to Queensland and Victoria over the past decade. Lets not make the same mistake again by letting the North Byron Parklands project slip through our fingers. They have the necessary controls, they have an amazing cultural vision and they stand to tip the artistic balance back into the favour of this State. We should all get behind it.

Thank you.

While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. Itâ€™s a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

Splendour in the Grass is more than just a music festival. It's an event which brings together people of all ages and all walks of life, connecting them through a mutual love of musical talent. Everyone I know who has attended Splendour in the Grass describe their experiences with words such as 'indescribable' 'surreal' 'immense' 'you couldn't understand unless you were there'. I have never met a person dissatisfied with their Splendour experience. It is such a spiritual and holistic experience, it is incomparable to anything else I've ever experienced. To deny Splendour a permanent home would be to deny an Australian event which has the potential to become the biggest Australian cultural event to exist. Not only does Splendour provide this gob-smacking spiritual atmosphere, but it teaches conservation and provides local businesses with a surge of profit.

Splendour is beautiful. Let's keep it in a beautiful place =D

P3990	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kate Hogan (support)	With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values, I beleive, will result in them being done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. The system is that comprehensive that it has even considered and regulated light spill from potable lighting towers. The proponents should be commended on such an initiative.

With thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses.

Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project.

The North Byron Parklands project has undertaken both a high level of fauna and flora assessments and a comprehensive environmental risk assessment process. As a result they have developed a management manual that covers a range of aspects including the environment. They have even developed a standalone environmental induction form for all staff and contractors that clearly stipulates what can and cannot take place while on site. These measures are very impressive indeed.

The events that will be held at North Byron Parklands will bring thousands of new people to the Byron Bay area each year. This can only benefit the local businesses.

I am a recent graduand of the Australian Institute of Music and am currently employed at the Oxford Art Factory venue in Sydney. As someone in the music industry I see the Splendour in the Grass festival as playing a huge part in the development, circulation and promotion of music in Australia. I have worked for various festivals including Homebake, Good Vibes, Field day and the Big Day Out since 2007, and have been extremely impressed by the quality of Splendour in the Grass. Besides providing Australia with an amazing weekend of entertainment and providing business and exposure for those involved in the festival and those surrounding the site, Splendour in the Grass is run with an impressive respect for the environment and it's patrons.

Please give Splendour in the Grass a home. It is a crucial factor in Australia's entertainment!

P3993	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Catherine Godwin of WDA Group (support)	One of the unintended effects on the environment from outdoor events is light spill. So it is pleasing to see that this issue is well addressed under the organisation's environmental standard. This standard requires lighting to be directed downwards, away from forest blocks, using low pressure sodium vapour lights where possible, and turning off light towers at a certain time of night. Such measures will greatly reduce disturbances to any localised fauna during such events.

In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire.

From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It's a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

I have been travelling to Byron Bay for many years to holiday. I have a very healthy respect for the people of the region and believe that this festival is so very important for their local economy.

As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. Bring on the variety and the possibilities!

The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered. In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. P3997	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Hayley Bell (support)	The establishment of the North Byron Parklands will generate additional employment opportunities for the management and maintenance of the venue and event organisations. I think this is a really important benefit for this region. I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This as far as I understand is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people. Youth events are not just about getting drunk and partying. Cultural events are very important for young people, they help develop social skills, they encourage creative thinking, and create a sense of community.

While the North Byron Parklands has some valuable forest cover it must be recognised that much of this cover resembles a patch quilt, the result of decades of agricultural use. To improve the value and function of these disparate forest blocks there is a much needed planting program similar to that proposed by the North Byron Parklands people to join and reconnect the vegetation. This one action of mass plantings will absolutely improve the environmental value across and adjacent to the proposal.

Having read the North Byron Parklands submission and attended many events over the past number of years I am blown away by the level of detail and the huge range of control measures that this development offers to ensure smooth and successful events. The North Coast of NSW needs a development of this nature and it should be approved by the NSW government.

People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. The North Byron Parklands is the very thing that our locals would love.

Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward.

The North Byron Parklands proposal is a fantastic idea offering various ways to boost and maximize our local economy.

North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. Future plantings and assisted regeneration in these areas will significantly increase opportunities for movement of terrestrial fauna. This is only one of many significant programs that will enhance the environment within and adjacent to the site.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

In summing, I would like to say that some of the best times of my life have been shared with my friends at Splendour in the Grass. Please allow the festival to return to its rightful home.

While much is made of the Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

There is currently approximately 294,00 people living on the Northern Rivers and this number is said to increase to approximately 376,000 residents by 2036. This huge increase in the next 26 years requires action to create employment opportunities in the region. North Byron Parklands can offer an array of employment opportunities in the future to tackle this population increase.

Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing.

The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment.

P4001	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Britte Mulcahy of Byron local (support)

Splendour is one of the best cultural and musical events this country has to offer, an it needs a good home. It not only keeps the music industry alive, it generates income and inspiration to the people. It encourages employment in an area where it is needed. The management are incredibly respectful and considerate people who give back to the community. I have personally witnessed this over the years. It would be incredibly sad for the Byron Shire to lose this amazing asset.

One of the strengths of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the flow on benefits it will provide to the tourism industry. Still picking itself up after the recent financial crisis the tourism industry stands to be the big winner from this proposal. With massive visitor generating capacity this proposal will singlehandedly attract hundreds of thousands of people to the region, all of whom need accommodation and other services once they arrive.

In NSW and particularly regional areas such as Byron and the wider northern rivers area securing a job is becoming very difficult. While other states prosper, NSW has fallen behind and the people are the ones suffering. The NSW Government needs to approval projects such as North Byron Parklands because it will create employment and this in turn is good for our state economy.

It is unlikely that there is another events venue that has the level of environmental management systems in place as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. Based on ISO14001 the environmental policies and procedures to be implemented at this venue will provide robust monitoring and mitigation measures to ensure that fauna and flora is protected. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative.

I am assured The North Byron Parklands site has undergone a number of detailed assessments to assure the site is enhanced to be able to become a 'sustainable' site for cultural events in the area. It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site. I am also aware that regional centers depend of events such as these to generate revenue in the local area. I am sure this applies to Splendour as well. With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management. Please keep Splendour in Byron, it is a simply beautiful part of the world and I love getting to travel there yearly. Great tunes in a beautiful place, who could ask for more? P4003	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Eric Chapman (support)	The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes. The various Aboriginal clans in and around the proposed North Byron Parklands site have had a long history in this area and for this reason the Parklands people have spent a lot of time consulting indigenous groups and organisations to work out how best to assess the site for significance. This process was done in a cooperative framework with the results that potential sites of significance will be protected through fencing and other means. The archaeological report does not identify any aspects of the project that will have a negative impact on important cultural artefacts or values. What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

The Splendour in the Grass Festival is an international festival that is recognised and loved not only by all the business owners and residents I know in the the Byron Shire but by the international community. People I know have invested in this town because of its festivals and its creative atmosphere that is being stifled by a very small minority. Splendour in Byron is one of our major attractions of the year and to lose it to Woodford would be detrimental to the quality of life Byron Bay has to offer to the larger community.

We once were proud of our artists, musicians and the people these arts drew into our town. To throw it all away based on the opinions of pub owners and developers is against everything this town used to stand for.

P4005	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ashlee Garlick (support)	Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

How many fantastic cultural events and opportunities has NSW lost to other states, particularly to Queensland and Victoria over the past decade. Lets not make the same mistake again by letting the North Byron Parklands project slip through our fingers. They have the necessary controls, they have an amazing cultural vision and they stand to tip the artistic balance back into the favour of this State. We should all get behind it.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

If Woodfordia in Queensland can be highly respected as an enviro-friendly venue which hosts a number of festivals with large crowds, then surely North Byron Parklands can achieve the same level of acceptance and respect if given the chance.

P4006	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from joel morris of Nine Lives Gallery Brisbane (support)	One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed.

The events management industry is extremely competitive and only those operators who can demonstrate compliance with all facets of event management time and time again are the ones that survive. The owners of North Byron Parklands each have years of experience in bringing highly successful events to the general public. Such an outstanding track record only comes about through effective, well planned event policies and procedures.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only every using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

The local area containing the Parklands site has an ancient meeting place for Aboriginal people to come to together for cultural purposes. The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people.

Most of the jobs on the North Coast rely on industries such as tourism and retail trade. To help expand the employment base there is a strong need to nurture an array of other industries such as artistic and creative industries. North Byron Parklands is a project that will greatly assist in providing a diversity in job prospects and on this basis should be actively supported by government and the wider community.

With a very large number of people reliant on the tourism industry for their income, whether they are an employee or an owner-operator, the North Byron Parklands project represents a potentially substantial increase in business for these people. If you consider just the sheer number of punters the proposal will attract one can start to see the economic benefits which will flow to the region. I think most businesses would view this proposal in a positive light.

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

P4009	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Thomas Baldrige (support)	Good afternoon, I write to you today in support bringing Splendour in the Grass back to Byron Shire. I have researched the proposal for a dedicated festival site and I am of the belief that this is the best option, in the best place, and will be managed by the best people. Not allowing this would be a very stupid decision. I completely support the move to allow Splendour in the Grass to come home to NSW and Byron Shire. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations. North Byron Parklands proposal is a tangible cultural asset for the youth. P4011	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jamie Sceney of sceney and smith Pty Ltd (support)	To whom it concerns, I would like to strongly add my support to the proposal for the developement of the North Byron Parklands site. The local area severely lacks a significant venue capable of supporting the local arts and music community, and it would mean so much to the local economy. The level of detail undertaken in the identification and assessment of likely impacts on fauna and flora across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site is impressive. There is unlikely to be many (if any) other types of development north coast that have gone to this level of detail and thoroughness. The commitments listed to preserve and enhance the ecology certainly help to put this development into the 'sustainable' development basket.

One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature.

If Woodfordia in Queensland can be highly respected as an enviro-friendly venue which hosts a number of festivals with large crowds, then surely North Byron Parklands can achieve the same level of acceptance and respect if given the chance.

When you have the combined expertise of event operators as those that make up the owners of North Byron Parklands it is quite evident that events that are proposed to be held at the Parklands site will be conducted in a successful and safe manner. With years of combined expertise these industry leaders will ensure that all events are conducted in a manner that ensures the management of all aspects of large and small events are adequately covered.

Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. P4013	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Will Watts (support)	While the North Byron Parklands has some valuable forest cover it must be recognised that much of this cover resembles a patch quilt, the result of decades of agricultural use. To improve the value and function of these disparate forest blocks there is a much needed planting program similar to that proposed by the North Byron Parklands people to join and reconnect the vegetation. This one action of mass plantings will absolutely improve the environmental value across and adjacent to the proposal. The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast. P4014	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Tyrone Thorn of none (support)	When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve. If you were to analysis the professional event management of such festivals as Splendour in the Grass, Parklife, Shore Thing and Sunset Suns one could only come to the conclusion that these event operators are up there with the most successful an well managed events in Australia. Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way. With so many people relying on tourism for their income on the North Coast there is an obligation on behalf of state and local governments to help facilitate any reasonable project that will increase domestic and international tourist numbers. North Byron Parklands will become the home of a number of major events with each of these events attracting thousands of people to the area. This will greatly enhance the local tourism sector. In NSW and particularly regional areas such as Byron and the wider northern rivers area securing a job is becoming very difficulty. While other states prosper, NSW has fallen behind and the people are the ones suffering. The NSW Government needs to approval projects such as North Byron Parklands because it will create employment and this in turn is good for our state economy.

All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector.

An example of this is the fact that there have been more vegetation and flora surveys conducted at the site than housing, industrial estate, and quarries assessments. Byron and the Northern Rivers unemployment rate (around 8.5%) is substantially higher than the NSW average of 5.5%. P4018	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kathryn Terrill (support)	As a Byron Shire resident, I wish to see the Splendour in the Grass festival return to the region. It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire. Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue. Too many people are forced to look outside Byron for employment opportunities. The North Byron Parklands proposal offers ample opportunities and will surely make the locals very happy. The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parkland's environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area. Imagine an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.?????

I have been to many outdoor event sites over the past number of years but have never come across a venue that has taken so much effort to develop and implement so many environmental programs. When events are not being staged at North Byron Parklands, there will be reforestation and noxious weed removal activities. When there are events at this site they will need to comply with a bunch of strict environmental policies and procedures. If only other venues could take a leaf out of these guy's book.

P4022	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from greg wade (support)	On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives.

Most businesses that operate in Northern NSW do not have anywhere near the level of sophisticated environmental strategies, controls and procedures that North Byron Parklands is preparing to put in place. It seems that every aspect of flora and fauna management has been considered and with a robust environmental auditing component I think we will see some excellent environmental outcomes arising from this development. I am very supportive of their approach.

With the documenting of environmental requirements through the North Byron Parklands management manual it is clear that a very high level of commitment has been made to protect and enhance the environment. Take for example the requirement to have a 30 metre buffer between the car park and adjoining nature reserve. This initiative will protect the nature reserve and will allow for the buffer area to slowly regenerate back to its former bushland status.

How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. Great job parklands.

This proposal really needs to be approved by local government. The young people in the region will support the events and attend. Some will be able to be employed by the event managers for what seems like an endless possibility of jobs, from musicians performances to fence erecting.

Splendour in the grass is one of the best weekends of year to enjoy both music and culture, and has been especially awesome at its location at belongil fields in byron bay, so it would be great for the festival to have a permanent location at The North Byron Parklands.

P4024	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from karina kern (support)	It is unlikely that there is another events venue that has the level of environmental management systems in place as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. Based on ISO14001 the environmental policies and procedures to be implemented at this venue will provide robust monitoring and mitigation measures to ensure that fauna and flora is protected. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative. Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy. North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

Hi,

I've personally thoroughly enjoyed 4 Splendour in the Grass events. 3 which were held in Byron Bay and last years festival held in Woodfordia.

Although I has a ball at last years festival, the expierence of Splendour in the Grass in beautiful Byron Bay is unsurpassible.

Here's why -

The Splendour in the Grass festival itself only accounts for a part of my whole weekends experience. The Arts and crafts and specialty stores which are unique only to Byron Bay are a favourite of mine. I make sure each time I visit Byron for Splendour that I bring a few things home with me to decorate my house and buy gifts for my family and friends which they love. I enjoy the stylish cafe's for breakfast and a morning coffee before heading to the festival, And the amazing restaurants and nightlife. With thousands of likeminded people attending Byron Bay for the weekend, this is sure to be a welcomed boost for the local economy. And for the local Byron Bay youngsters in need of work? I know that the festival's organisers give priority to the local's so I've no doubt they'd be in favour of seeing their festival come home.

I also know the effort and commitment that the organisers of Splendour in the Grass put into environmental factors and making sure their footprint is virtually erased. With 12 days of major activity on the site per year (splendour contributing to only one quarter of that number), the environmental controls engaged to limit damage and the residual efforts to regenerate the site, the organisers of the festival have an obvious passion for making sure everybody has a great time with the least environmental impact possible. In fact their efforts in environmental preservation is very well known amongst festival punters and should be noted.

I'm certainly in favour of seeing my favo

P4027	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Simon Grigg (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has undergone a number of detailed assessments to assure the site is enhanced to be able to become a "sustainable" site for cultural events in the area. It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site.

North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. Future plantings and assisted regeneration in these areas will significantly increase opportunities for movement of terrestrial fauna. This is only one of many significant programs that will enhance the environment within and adjacent to the site.

P4028	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stephanie Cross (support)	The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment. There is currently approximately 294,00 people living on the Northern Rivers and this number is said to increase to approximately 376,000 residents by 2036. This huge increase in the next 26 years requires action to create employment opportunities in the region. North Byron Parklands can offer an array of employment opportunities in the future to tackle this population increase. A place where people can get together and enjoy the beauty that Byron Bay has to offer. P4030	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ben Towner of Student (support)	One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed. The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. Itâ€™s about young people and being young. This is really important. Name: Ben Towner Organisation: Student Address:

P4031	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alex Hyles (support)	One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land.

P4032	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Briana Davis (support)	One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives. I believe that cultural events in our community help people grow and develop. North Byron Parklands proposed event site would create social and inspiring opportunities for our regions youth. This proposal has endless opportunities including networking with Southern Cross University and SAE, furthering our regions creativeness, training and work experiences. P4033	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Bianca Merrick (support)	At present the North Byron Parklands site is subject to significant sediment and erosion issues. Previous land practices have seen poor top soil removal and impacts on graded lands. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address these existing soil impacts and also has put in place a sediment and erosion control plan during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended. North Byron Parklands is proposing a sustainable arts and music venue that will provide significant employment opportunities to a range of people in the Byron and Northern Rivers region. Many of the jobs will suit our younger people and with an aging demographic this is vital to ensuring that there is an opportunity to up skill our youth in a growing and profitable sector. Jobs are very important. In a coastal region such as the Byron and Tweed areas tourism businesses are the financial lifeblood for so many people. Ensuring we attract businesses such as North Byron Parklands who will be responsible for bringing significant numbers of visitors to the region is vital if we are to maintain the viability of this critical sector. Government agencies should be approving projects of this nature. Overall, Splendour is a beautiful festival, filled with beautiful people which you will bring many smiles to their faces when you bring Splendour home to Byron. I think this is such a fantastic opportunity for Splendour and I am proud to support it. Thankyou Name: Bianca Merrick Address: 11 Stanner Close Woolgoolga

North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

If employment growth in regional areas is a key concern of the NSW state government then approving this project makes sound economic sense. There is a real need to support organisations that can provide such large numbers of jobs in an area where finding a good job can be very difficult. It seems to me that approving this project will have lasting long term benefits for job prospectors in this rural region.

Having been involved in many tourist related businesses, one is very aware of the seasonal fluctuation of visitors. Any proposal that plans to attract tens of thousands of visitors to a given region must be seriously considered and North Byron Parklands is one such project. With plans for a number of multiple large events, some scheduled in traditional low seasons such as winter is very beneficial for this industry.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

P4036	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jessica Jedynek (support)	North Byron Parklands is likely to be the first arts and music venue that has prepared an environmental, health and safety management manual to manage interactions with the environment. The environmental standard from this manual provides a range of measures designed to protect the environment. Given that the activity in question is low impact the environmental management of the site will easily achieve positive benefits for the environment. The events management industry is extremely competitive and only those operators who can demonstrate compliance with all facets of event management time and time again are the ones that survive. The owners of North Byron Parklands each have years of experience in bringing highly successful events to the general public. Such an outstanding track record only comes about through effective, well planned event policies and procedures.

All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector.

One of the unintended effects on the environment from outdoor events is light spill. So it is pleasing to see that this issue is well addressed under the organisation's environmental standard. This standard requires lighting to be directed downwards, away from forest blocks, using low pressure sodium vapour lights where possible, and turning off light towers at a certain time of night. Such measures will greatly reduce disturbances to any localised fauna during such events.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

From Tweed Heads to Evans Head most of the business activity revolves around tourism. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved.

The North Byron Parklands sounds really interesting and exciting.

North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

P4039	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kristie Keats (support)	I just want a nice place for Splendour to be held. Woodfordia was great but I feel North Byron Parklands would be just as good. The major benefit for me is that its closer to home and accomodation choices would be easier. From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive. The potential adverse impact of the Parklands usage on flora and fauna has been largely mitigated by virtue of the event site occupying only existing grassland areas of the site and avoiding vegetated parts of the site. Further, the significant increase in habitat afforded by the additional 11.1 ha of revegetation and 48.1 ha of additional plantings also mitigates against adverse impact upon flora and fauna species. Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered.

Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project.

Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project.

The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regions? economies. The proposed North Byron Parklands project will result in a massive increase in the number of domestic visitors to the area and to a lesser degree, will also attract many overseas visitors. As this industry is so important to the region it makes good sense for this project to proceed.

The North Byron Parkland proposal sounds very beneficial to our youth, elderly and families.

With the documenting of environmental requirements through the North Byron Parklands management manual it is clear that a very high level of commitment has been made to protect and enhance the environment. Take for example the requirement to have a 30 metre buffer between the car park and adjoining nature reserve. This initiative will protect the nature reserve and will allow for the buffer area to slowly regenerate back to its former bushland status.

The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands.

In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area.

I think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me.

One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land.

If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc.

The North Byron Parklands proposal sounds amazing, exactly what Byron and its community needs.

The North Byron Parklands will see the subject site have the opportunity to maintain low impact activity that will see the site unoccupied for some 75% of the year. By allowing the sites land to rest both fauna and flora growth will be encouraged across and adjacent to the site. This restoration will be a positive outcome for the local environment.

Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, “I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a community”. (Donna Sue Sanders “ Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management.

Making new friends, learning new activities, attending new and exciting events, a place where we are all welcome and safe. Bring on North Byron Parklands.

Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. Splendour in the Grass takes place at a time of year which, I believe, would probably otherwise be very quiet in terms of tourist numbers. If I lived and worked or had a business in the Shire, I would be very concerned about the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project.

If employment growth in regional areas is a key concern of the NSW state government then approving this project makes sound economic sense. There is a real need to support organisations that can provide such large numbers of jobs in an area where finding a good job can be very difficult. It seems to me that approving this project will have lasting long term benefits for job seekers in this rural region.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that I understand have been driven out of the shire in the last few years. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive. Most outdoor events pay little attention to the environment so it is heartening to see an organisation such as North Byron Parklands who have put a considerable effort into developing specific procedures and work instructions designed to protect the environment. These guys even have an environmental incident notification system which will document all issues and the steps taken to resolve them.

It would be a shame to see this proposal turned down, it doesn't take much to see that the North Byron Parklands proposal has so much to offer.

North Byron Parklands is proposing a sustainable arts and music venue that will provide significant employment opportunities to a range of people in the Byron and Northern Rivers region. Many of the jobs will suit our younger people and with an aging demographic this is vital to ensuring that there is an opportunity to up skill our youth in a growing and profitable sector. Jobs are very important.

Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

P4052	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Graham Jarrett (support)	The North Byron Parklands will be the 1st proposed land use that will see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for the site. For many years the North Byron Parklands site has been used for intensive agricultural activities and land clearing, impacting on the site dramatically. North Byron Parklands has planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year to restore the site. This has to be seen as a great result for the local environment. While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive. The Byron region can market itself as a hub for events and creativity if this proposal is approved. They would be very fortunate indeed to have the training and skills benefits of such a proposal. Splendour was the best festival I've been to . Full Stop. I've been a serious festival go-er for 15 years now, and have never seen such an amazing show put on. The talent, The food, the music. All so brilliantly pulled of. I want to keep coming for many years to come, along with everyone I went with, we all agree, this must be continued. Byron Bay is the home of Splendour, lets keep it that way. Job opportunities are a hot topic on the north coast. If North Byron Parklands is not allowed to operate in Byron Shire then these jobs will be lost to another region willing to approve this project. The creation of local jobs is a very important one.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should also be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

It is of great importance that Australia's cultural identity is maintained and that live music continue to be supported. Splendour in the Grass remains the safest and most responsible music event Australia has to offer and its organisers truly deserve all the support they can get.

Bring on North Byron Parklands. So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account. The people behind North Byron Parklands are professional event operators with decades of combined experience in hosting successful events. Having sold millions of tickets to the dozens of events they have held, it is extremely beneficial that such experienced personnel will be available to guide and manage events proposed for North Byron Parklands. North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project.

The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understorey of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understorey to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures.

Byron Bay has so much beauty to offer and the North Byron Parklands is a perfect way to put it on display. I say yes, to this proposal.

All in all this proposal seems to be a balanced response to the need for development in regional areas while ensuring environmental values are maintained.

The majority of the time the site isn't used at all. This land use also seems to be a lot more in tune with the environment in the area as opposed to the traditional land use of farming, which would have a much more significant impact on the environment.

If the project isn't approved the land will most likely be returned for use as farmland and the ecological value inherent will be degraded because of it.

It's no good conserving these areas if no one can use them or appreciate the aesthetic value of it. There must be a balance between human use and the needs of the environment.

This event brings millions of dollars into the local regional economy of this area at a time when business is very slow.

North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures.

Byron and the Northern Rivers unemployment rate (around 8.5%) is substantially higher than the NSW average of 5.5%. We need businesses such as Parklands who can provide employment opportunities to many in our community, particularly young people.

With so many people relying on tourism for their income on the North Coast there is an obligation on behalf of state and local governments to help facilitate any reasonable project that will increase domestic and international tourist numbers. North Byron Parklands will become the home of a number of major events with each of these events attracting thousands of people to the area. This will greatly enhance the local tourism sector.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

Thanks

To whom it may concern

I write this as both a conservationist (Park Ranger) and a loyal Splendour in the Grass fan.

I've attended six Splendours over the last seven years, and I would have to say that no other festival in Australia commits to the local community in the way that splendour does. You only need to look at its environmental focus with eco-cop engagement and commitment to flora and fauna conservation shown to realise it's environmental credentials. And the recycling, well I'm not sure how many tonnes each year but the total is nothing short of incredible.

From a conservation point of view, Splendour achieves something many conservation groups cannot seem to grasp. It manages to engage the youth of Australia in environmental issues, something this country seems to struggle with. Any help we can get to develop an intrinsic relationship and respect for country should be encouraged.

I understand the level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

Splendour is a major economic stimulator for Byron and the surrounding communities, having lived in Lennox Head for many years whilst studying at Southern Cross University, the influx of people to the community was really appreciated at a time of year when it is usually very quiet in these small communities. Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. Great job parklands. In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet.

North Byron Parklands is likely to be the first arts and music venue that has prepared an environmental, health and safety management manual to manage interactions with the environment. The environmental standard from this manual provides a range of measures designed to protect the environment. Given that the activity in question is low impact the environmental management of the site will easily achieve positive benefits for the environment.

I would like to support the approval of the North Byron Parklands Project for environmental, economic and cultural reasons.

The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant.

As a Queenslander, myself and numerous friends have often travelled to Byron Bay for Splendor in the Grass festival. Spending in excess of $5000 each time on accommodation, eating out, at the festival itself and on adventure activities in the area. The economic benefits for the Northern New South Wales community is another great reason to support a permanent home for the festival.

Splendor in the Grass is a great event promoting music, the arts and community. It encourages youth creativity, culture and positivity engaging in their community promoting positive youth mental health. From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It's a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

With a permanent home, the Splendor in the Grass team are able to take on long term initiative to enable the environmental sustainability of the land and it's biodiversity. It also enables them to constantly improve the festival set-up ensuring a safe environment for festival goers. Managing risks is much easier when in a known environment than the unknown.

Thank you for taking the time to read my submission, please consider it's contents.

On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives. I have seen what a range of other industry developments have offered up to protect the environment. In all cases their activities intrinsically contain much greater environmental risks compared to North Byron Parklands, yet their environmental controls are not even remotely as advanced or detailed. It is obvious that this proponent has thought long and hard about managing its activities in an environmentally and sustainable manner. Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project.

Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered.

Byron Bay is widely known for pushing the barrier and making things possible. We as a town have so much to offer and this new proposal will put us on the map so to speak. It's a fantastic opportunity for us all.

Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal.

Jobs are hard to come by these days. Many businesses are struggling to make ends meet. The arts and events industry has provided a lot of employment opportunities on the far north coast and North Byron Parklands should be approved because it will be a major employer in the area.

A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. Thatâ€™s the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Letâ€™s get it approved.

The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this.

Yours faithfully

In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp.

In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Bottom line is - the Splendour crew are the most environmentally sensitive of any of the major Australian Festivals and have been for years.

Bring them home to Byron, the town also relies heavily on the injection of the tourist dollar during its winter months.

Cheers,

Muz.

Unfortunately none of these groups have actually converted their words into action by helping to repair this partially degraded site. The local indigenous bush regeneration team on the other hand has been responsible for planting thousands of trees in key locations and is another example of the Parklands group working with its community. P4072	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Madison Lloyd (support)	While it is understood that business ventures such as North Byron Parklands are focussed on turning a profit, it is also really pleasing to see they have expended a fair amount of effort on protecting and enhancing the environment in which they operate. Initiatives such as light spill and noise management and inducting all staff and contractors is a great way to protect the environment and demonstrate a commitment to sustainable best practice.

Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward.

The real question is why would North Byron Parklands proposal not be approved? I can only see positives to such a development.

I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This, as far as I understand, is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported.

Apart from extensive consultation with indigenous groups and various elders the North Byron Parklands group has already established a long history of working with and employing local indigenous bush regeneration teams to plant thousands of trees across their site. This tree planting program has been a great way to involve traditional land owners in helping to restore what is currently quite a degraded site.

P4074	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Camille McLachlan (support)	The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view. In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area. We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal. P4076	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Tim Tarjani of tradesman (support)	It is unlikely that there is another events venue that has the level of environmental management systems in place as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. Based on ISO14001 the environmental policies and procedures to be implemented at this venue will provide robust monitoring and mitigation measures to ensure that fauna and flora is protected. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative. The opportunity to showcase the stunning nature in the Byron region through a sustainable event venue is surely a wonderful proposition. Outdoor events bring people closer together, let?s show the way Australia. Bring Splendour home! In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA?s expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures. The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment.

What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual. Tourism is one of the biggest employers in the northern rivers area and the North Byron Parklands proposal is projecting that it will bring thousands of people to the area each year. Increasing visitor numbers to the area is the surest way to help grow these tourism businesses particularly when the proposal shall bring large numbers of people to the area in traditionally slow times. Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations.

Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire.

Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported. With such high unemployment rates in the Northern Rivers I am sure that the government is aware just how important it is to approve such a project as North Byron Parklands. I know many young people who would love the change to work on such a project. The government needs to take into account the generation of employment this proposal will create. Byron Bay is known for its culture and events. Don't deprive our town of such a tremendous opportunity. Business will thrive, local tourism will benefit and our accommodation facilities will be bulging. Sounds ideal! Andrew Cahill

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only every using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

You only have to look around the Byron community when a festival or an event takes place to see the people smiling and the excitement in the air. The North Byron Parklands proposal sure sounds like a perfect way to make sure the people keep smiling.

The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. Music and arts should be embraced in our society because of these jobs that it creates and North Byron Parklands if it is approved is set to be a big employer for the area. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support.

One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature.

To whom it may concern,

I am writing in support of the proposal to bring Splendour in the Grass back to the Byron Shire, and to grant planning permission to hold the festival at the North Byron Parklands site.

While I do not live in the Byron shire I do have family that reside there, and have been associated with the area for over 10 years. Throughout that time I have appreciated the beauty and unique culture that is distinct to the Byron Shire. It is this 'Byron Culture' that is epitomised in the Splendour in the Grass experience.

The Splendour in the Grass festival is undoubtedly the greatest music festival in Australia. The primary element that distinguishes this festival is its location and surrounding environment. While the festival was held at Belongil Fields it benefited from the uniqueness that Byron Bay has to offer. I implore the NSW planning department to allow this festival to continue in the Byron Shire, and appreciate the numerous benefits this festival brings the Shire.

The Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities.

While the economy booms in other states, NSW and in particular regional NSW continues to suffer. The likely employment opportunities that North Byron Parklands will bring to the Northern Rivers shall be substantial. Many people in this region are finding it hard to secure a job and therefore we need as many of these innovative projects as possible.

In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

Kind Regards,

David Thorpe

We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal.

The culture of Byron Bay is fantastic and eye opening. This proposal will share our culture with all.

If you were to analysis the professional event management of such festivals as Splendour in the Grass, Parklife, Shore Thing and Sunset Suns one could only come to the conclusion that these event operators are up there with the most successful an well managed events in Australia. Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way.

P4085	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Roderick Kempton of Cheersquad (support)	It is a matter of seeing the opportunities for positive environmental outcomes in what are presently unexpected places. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. Those in the position to bring about such change should be encouraged, not demonised. When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land. The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regionsâ€™ economies. The proposed North Byron Parklands project will result in a massive increase in the number of domestic visitors to the area and to a lesser degree, will also attract many overseas visitors. As this industry is so important to the region it makes good sense for this project to proceed.

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This as far as I understand is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported.

This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

To whom it may concern,

Splendour In the Grass is part of the Australian youth culture. It was one of the few Australian festivals that can bring huge international acts to one stage at an affordable price. Each year thousands flock to Splendour from all over Australia. The festival needs to be accessible to large number of people wishing to attend and Byron is central to most of the east coast. It is also easy to get too for most punters which reduces the cost to the environment instead of having the festival somewhere which requires a long flight and an even longer bus/car trip. An addition, festival goers care about their environment and strive to clean up their campsite prior to exiting the site.

The suggested location, close to alternative accomodation could reduce the numbers of campers, and therefore reduce the amount of land required for use, and boost the local economy.

It is true there are a number of threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of irregular noise to such species shows that they will usually relocate and return quickly once noise ceases. This a positive result for all parties and it is good to know the species will not be disturbed some 260 days of the year.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

NB: I would not like my name displayed on the Department's website. Thanks

The North Byron Parklands site has undergone a number of detailed assessments to assure the site is enhanced to be able to become a "sustainable" site for cultural events in the area. It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site.

Let's look at the environmental initiatives that the North Byron Parklands people are proposing. Environmental auditing, sediment and erosion control, fencing to keep people in cleared areas, buffer zones to forests, inductions for workers, wildlife rescue teams during events, traffic control, no dogs, etc. The list of requirements they have placed on event operators is substantial and will result in a well protected environment.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

Splendour In the Grass has been a great success for the years it was held in Byron Bay and should be allowed to return to its home town but at a new location further from the metro.

Splendour in the Grass is the most environmentally concious music festival in australia if not the world even though it attracts so many attendees through carbon offsets amongst other things.

The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements.

With a very large number of people reliant on the tourism industry for their income, whether they are an employee or an owner-operator, the North Byron Parklands project represents a potentially substantial increase in business for these people. If you consider just the sheer number of punters the proposal will attract one can start to see the economic benefits which will flow to the region. I think most businesses would view this proposal in a positive light.

It deserves to be allowed to be held in Byron Bay again so why deny what the people want?

To Whim it may concern,

The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp.

The potential adverse impact of the Parklands usage on flora and fauna has been largely mitigated by virtue of the event site occupying only existing grassland areas of the site and avoiding vegetated parts of the site. Further, the significant increase in habitat afforded by the additional 11.1 ha of revegetation and 48.1 ha of additional plantings also mitigates against adverse impact upon flora and fauna species.

While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

The Byron region can market itself as a hub for events and creativity if this proposal is approved. They would be very fortunate indeed to have the training and skills benefits of such a proposal.

I have always enjoyed my time in the Byron area it has always been welcoming and rewarding, from the people and from nature.

Take for example the requirement to have a 30 metre buffer between the car park and adjoining nature reserve. This initiative will protect the nature reserve and will allow for the buffer area to slowly regenerate back to its former bushland status. For many young people in the local area, getting a job has proved to be very hard. This is because other than retail and tourism there are few large employers about. Bad luck if you do not want to make a career in pouring coffee or cleaning rooms. This project will offer a whole range of people with new prospects in securing a job in the creative industries, an industry that is on the rise in this area. We really do need more substantial employers. The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. The permanent site will help to boost our economy and create jobs for an area where so many youth cannot find work in their own community. The proposed events will also provide opportunities for local artists/musicians to be seen and heard. From what i can tell the planning and commitment to protect and enhance the environment through the proposed site is a priority to the parklands management. Take for example the requirement to have a 30 metre buffer between the car park and adjoining nature reserve. This initiative will protect the nature reserve and will allow for the buffer area to slowly regenerate back to its former bushland status. i feel they have more than adequately investigated and addressed the concerns of those protesting against the site on environmental grounds As a 20 something year old who has grown up in this area i know how great the need for a dedicated area for the youth to gather together and celebrate life. Young people will organise parties and have a good time no matter if there is large event venues or not. It is up to the adult members of the community to carry the youth by supporting venues designed for the youth. A dedicated site with cultural events might just help to lower binge drinking and crime by youth by giving them something interesting and constructive to do in their free time. If a site like this existed while i was growing up i feel i would have been able to realise and put to good use my creative mind instead of attending parties and drinking. Byron Bay has so much beauty to offer and the North Byron Parklands is a perfect way to put it on display. I say yes, to this proposal.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas.

The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesn't proceed then it's likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklands group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity.

I would definitely apply for a job at the North Byron Parklands and know that it will lay my employment path out. This is the opportunity that I have always hoped Byron Bay would offer.

As soon as I started reading about this proposal I had an instant realization of the benefits North Byron Parklands would bring to our local economy but also to my family.

North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

When you have the combined expertise of event operators as those that make up the owners of North Byron Parklands it is quite evident that events that are proposed to be held at the Parklands site will be conducted in a successful and safe manner. With years of combined expertise these industry leaders will ensure that all events are conducted in a manner that ensures the management of all aspects of large and small events are adequately covered.

North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

If Woodfordia in Queensland can be highly respected as an enviro-friendly venue which hosts a number of festivals with large crowds, then surely North Byron Parklands can achieve the same level of acceptance and respect if given the chance.

In NSW and particularly regional areas such as Byron and the wider northern rivers area securing a job is becoming very difficulty. While other states prosper, NSW has fallen behind and the people are the ones suffering. The NSW Government needs to approval projects such as North Byron Parklands because it will create employment and this in turn is good for our state economy.

From Tweed Heads to Evans Head most of the business activity revolves around tourism. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved.

Being young it's important to get out there. North Byron Parklands offers us opportunities to interact on levels that promote us to look outside the square. It would be a great opportunity for us to have this venue available.

P4101	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jessica Holton (support)	North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it. North Byron Parklands will join forces with local learning institutes like Southern Cross University and SAE (School of Audio Engineering) to further improve the areas creative industries. This alliance will provide the community with world class training and work experience opportunities. Too many people are forced to look outside Byron for employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Those 7,500 trees are now some metres high and thriving.

Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered.

Whatâ€™s important for Byron is the culture and celebration, its very important to our community. The North Byron Parklands proposal will provide security and ensure that Byron continues to offer this.

North Byron Parklands is likely to be the first arts and music venue that has prepared an environmental, health and safety management manual to manage interactions with the environment. The environmental standard from this manual provides a range of measures designed to protect the environment. Given that the activity in question is low impact the environmental management of the site will easily achieve positive benefits for the environment.

The North Byron Parklands proposal has considered both indigenous and non-indigenous issues associated with the proposal. In particular, Parklands has worked closely with the local Tweed/Byron Aboriginal Land Council and has complemented a number of archaeological digs to help determine the significance of parts of the site. It is pleasing to see that certain areas of the site will become "out of bounds" to protect identified areas of importance.

While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It's a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

Bring it home! a home for festivals such as Splendour is big step in the right direction :) it gives the festivals a chance to increase its safety & security each year which is very very important.

much love, Caleb.

I attended Splendour in the Grass at Woodford this year with my teenage son. I found the Festival extremely well run, providing entertainment for young people in a safe and well regulated environment. The size of the crowd that attended demonstrated the demand for such events and I believe that it is essential that they remain available for young people to attend. It is part of a community's responsibility to provide venues for young people to gather and enjoy themselves and Splendour in the Grass does this very well.

The proposed new site has been carefully planned to minimise impact on the environment during festival times and will in fact provide a ppsitive impact on the environment by providing extensions to wildlife corridors and additional buffer zones to adjacent national park. The festival will also provide employment and income to local businesses and I strongly support the move of Splendour in the Grass to the North Byron Parklands site.

This is one of Australia's premier festivals and I've noticed Splendour are now offering carbon offset tickets, in which the excess price in tickets goes towards planting trees, etc. I'm sure as the years go on this site will only get greener because of the fact Splendour now owns the site I'm sure they will be happy to put some time and money back into the land, eg: grey toilets, etc. As opposed to spending and building infrastructure on land they don't own. Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy.

Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

I wish for my private details to be withheld from the authorities and public

This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing.

It is true there are a number of threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of irregular noise to such species shows that they will usually relocate and return quickly once noise ceases. This a positive result for all parties and it is good to know the species will not be disturbed some 260 days of the year.

I have been attending Splendour ever since it kicked off in Byron.

Every year when the time for splendour approaches there is a buzz about the town, this buzz is full of excitement, fresh people, money being spent in the town (every single form of accomodation ranging from backpackers to fancy hotels are totally booked out months in advance, not just in byron but in bangalow, brunswick heads, lennox and ballina.). I've lived in and around Byron my enitre life and splendour has always been a vital part of the festive season.

Of course there are people who complain about the ammount of people and traffic comming into byron, but having this new site at the North Byron Parklands is genius. People will still be spending their money on byron and its products but the festival will be far away enough that the locals arnt kept awake to the sounds of the music.

The local government have realised how much the town DIDN'T benefit when splendour was at woodford this year. The fact being that local businesses can make the equivalent ammount of money over the splendour weekend as what they would make over the summer holidays, this is enough to bring splendour home.

Its not only about the money. Splendour is known to be in byron, the locals get so excited when the lineup is released and the ammount of pure talent comes to our little home by the sea.

To not bring splendour home is possibly one of the most stupid mistakes the council could make.

I agree with the submissions below.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is ser

The opportunity to showcase the stunning nature in the Byron region through a sustainable event venue is surely a wonderful proposition. Outdoor events bring people closer together, letâ€™s show the way Australia. Bring Splendour home!

The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understory of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understory to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures.

This is good for people and the planet. This proposal has endless opportunities including networking with Southern Cross University and SAE, furthering our regions creativeness, training and work experiences. How many fantastic cultural events and opportunities has NSW lost to other states, particularly to Queensland and Victoria over the past decade. Lets not make the same mistake again by letting the North Byron Parklands project slip through our fingers. They have the necessary controls, they have an amazing cultural vision and they stand to tip the artistic balance back into the favour of this State. We should all get behind it. Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia. I am the fifth generation of my family to have been born in the Byron Shire, and as such have heard about and personally experienced so much change to our town and lifestyle. I personally feel that if we were to lose such massive cultural events including music festivals such as Splendour In The Grass, it would be a great tragedy and a notable loss of the Byron Bay identity. Every year these events bring the world's greatest and most inspirational artists to our humble and gorgeous shores, providing our community, as well as the rest of Australia, with a chance to get up close and personal and experience such life changing moments that no words can truly describe. Please, please, please do not take these events away from us. Approve the establishment of a cultural site at the North Byron Parklands and ensure the continuation of the greatest

The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands.

Most businesses that operate in Northern NSW do not have anywhere near the level of sophisticated environmental strategies, controls and procedures that North Byron Parklands is preparing to put in place. It seems that every aspect of flora and fauna management has been considered and with a robust environmental auditing component I think we will see some excellent environmental outcomes arising from this development. I am very supportive of their approach.

The people behind North Byron Parklands are professional event operators with decades of combined experience in hosting successful events. Having sold millions of tickets to the dozens of events they have held, it is extremely beneficial that such experienced personnel will be available to guide and manage events proposed for North Byron Parklands.

Tourism is one of the biggest employers in the northern rivers area and the North Byron Parklands proposal is projecting that it will bring thousands of people to the area each year. Increasing visitor numbers to the area is the surest way to help grow these tourism businesses particularly when the proposal shall bring large numbers of people to the area in traditionally slow times.

The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment.

It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment.

The Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

Firstly just to clarify, although many would have already. Splendour in the grass is unlike anyother festival our country holds. It is a whole other world, an experience like no other. No big day out or future music can ever compare to Splendour. I go to many festivals each year because of my love for music and the atmospher that surrounds you, but nothing compares to Splendour. It would have to be the cleanest festival, the most caring to the surrounding environments. Splendour punters differ from the regular festival goer, because every single person who walks through those gates has a love and respect for the festival. We treat Splendour like a home away from home! I look forward to Splendour more than any other event every year, it's better than any birthday or Christmas, and Splendour needs a home!! Please give Splendour this wonderfull site to call home! We are only there 3 days a year and it's the most important 3 days out of my year as well as many others would agree! The town of Byron wants us back and they are loosing business without us! We won't let u down I can promise you that! This is something you will never regret! I hope whoever involved in making this decision can one day attend Splendour and you will see and experience first hand how magnificent this festival is! So many people put their blood sweat and tears into the organisation of Splendour and I'm sure for them to see a permanant home for their 'baby' would mean too much for words! I hope I have made some sense into what I have said, I'm writing on my iPhone on my break at work. Anyway please please please give Splendour in the grass it's well deserved home!!

P4118	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Danique Hanson (support)	The level of detail undertaken in the identification and assessment of likely impacts on fauna and flora across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site is impressive. There is unlikely to be many (if any) other types of development north coast that have gone to this level of detail and thoroughness. The commitments listed to preserve and enhance the ecology certainly help to put this development into the "sustainable" development basket.

If you look at the multitude of government regional growth forecasts for areas such as the northern rivers it is plain to see that with a rapidly expanding population there is a strong need for a diverse and stable employment base. Jobs will be critical to the longer term sustainability of the region and therefore when projects such as North Byron Parklands come along they should be embraced and assisted by state and local governments.

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

I believe the submission for the cultural events site at Yelgun would be beneficial for the local economy, as well as having little impact on the environment. The site's location would cause minimal disruption to local residents and will be easily accessible for audiences attending events like Splendour in the Grass. I therefore whole-heartedly support this application.

While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retirees aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

A lot of my friends are moving outside of Byron Bay to bigger and better opportunities. It would be great if we had those opportunities offered to us closer to home.

Kindest Regards,

Amelia

If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably.

In the northern rivers area more and more people have been moving into the creative industries sector because of the interesting and fulfilling work that can be undertaken. There is a very real need to continue growing this sector to provide people with more job opportunities. North Byron Parklands is a proposal that will truly make a big impact in job availability in the region and will be a very positive economic force.

While much is made about the supposed wildlife corridor in and around the North Byron Parklands site the fact is that much of the vegetation is patchy and degraded. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue.

P4122	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from kate funnell (support)	I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

I have seen what a range of other industry developments have offered up to protect the environment. In all cases their activities intrinsically contain much greater environmental risks compared to North Byron Parklands, yet their environmental controls are not even remotely as advanced or detailed. It is obvious that this proponent has thought long and hard about managing its activities in an environmentally and sustainable manner.

The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. North Byron Parklands can be a showcase for our local talents.

The North Byron Parklands proposal brings so many positive benefits to the northern rivers region that based on planning merit alone, this application must be approved. Whether one considers employment, income generation, environmental protection measures or a massive boost to the region's tourism economy, this application exceeds all expectations. On this basis this proposal should be approved by the state government.

To Whom it may concern,

Splendour is incredibly important for youth all over Australia and especially in Byron Bay.

With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas.

I know of many businesses that rely on events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals.

P4126	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Sophie Champtaloup of none (support)	The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment. How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. Great job parklands. P4127	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Gemma Bosworth (support)	Many supposed local environmental groups have been invited to visit the North Byron Parklands and to participate in the public tree planting days that have been held over the past few years. Unfortunately none of these groups have actually converted their words into action by helping to repair this partially degraded site. The local indigenous bush regeneration team on the other hand has been responsible for planting thousands of trees in key locations and is another example of the Parklands group working with its community. With a very large number of people reliant on the tourism industry for their income, whether they are an employee or an owner-operator, the North Byron Parklands project represents a potentially substantial increase in business for these people. If you consider just the sheer number of punters the proposal will attract one can start to see the economic benefits which will flow to the region. I think most businesses would view this proposal in a positive light. Why not? P4128	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Steve Barry of Heluva Pty Ltd (support)	In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. P4130	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rebecca Tinyow (support)	It is pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events. In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire.

With so many people relying on tourism for their income on the North Coast there is an obligation on behalf of state and local governments to help facilitate any reasonable project that will increase domestic and international tourist numbers. North Byron Parklands will become the home of a number of major events with each of these events attracting thousands of people to the area. This will greatly enhance the local tourism sector.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

P4133	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Melissa Greely` (support)	Having been involved in many tourist related businesses, one is very aware of the seasonal fluctuation of visitors. Any proposal that plans to attract tens of thousands of visitors to a given region must be seriously considered and North Byron Parklands is one such project. With plans for a number of multiple large events, some scheduled in traditional low seasons such as winter is very beneficial for this industry. Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project. Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

While the North Byron Parklands has some valuable forest cover it must be recognised that much of this cover resembles a patch quilt, the result of decades of agricultural use. To improve the value and function of these disparate forest blocks there is a much needed planting program similar to that proposed by the North Byron Parklands people to join and reconnect the vegetation. This one action of mass plantings will absolutely improve the environmental value across and adjacent to the proposal.

Letâ€™s look at the environmental initiatives that the North Byron Parklands people are proposing. Environmental auditing, sediment and erosion control, fencing to keep people in cleared areas, buffer zones to forests, inductions for workers, wildlife rescue teams during events, traffic control, no dogs, etc. The list of requirements they have placed on event operators is substantial and will result in a well protected environment.

The North Byron Parkland proposal sounds very beneficial to our youth, elderly and families.

To whom it may concern,

I wish to submit in writing my support for the North Byron Parklands team. They have the interest of the land and community at heart in their location choice and planning of events to be held in the area proposed.

Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

The Splendour in the Grass festival is an important event for people of all ages wishing to experience live music in a fantastic environment with other like minded individuals, and has become an integral part of youth culture. Patrons are very appreciative and respectful of the surrounds they are granted access to. The Byron Shire and proposed site would set an amazing backdrop for such a splendid initiative.

Thank you for your time,

P4136	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Scottie Shirbin of No where (support)	North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

The environmental assessments completed for the North Byron Parklands proposal identify a number of threatened species which in the most part are winged creatures. It is most likely (based on research elsewhere) that these creatures will move away from any light and noise disturbances for no longer than for the period they occur. This is particularly true if there are specific food resources available on the North Byron Parklands site. So, once an event is finished it is more than probably that these animals will return and enjoy the quietude that will prevail at this site for the vast majority of the year.

We have heard it many times before that living in a community which has locally based jobs provides for a health and sustainable society. Jobs in the north of New South Wales are hard to come by at the best of times so when a project comes along which will create new jobs for people it is important to support it. That is a key reason why I support the approval of the North Byron Parklands project.

North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

P4137	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ngoc Pham (support)	Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal.

The North Byron Parklands proposal is exactly the thing we need as a society, especially for our economy. It will develop opportunities that will help small businesses which will ensure the continued success of Byron Bay.

I am currently studying my final years of a Bachelor of Planning at the University of New South Wales. I believe that allowing Splendour In The Grass to operate annually and permanently in one location has an overall positive impact on the land and its surroundings. I recently attended Splendour In The Grass at Woodford and had an overwhelmingly positive experience. Over the span of a week, the event brought the town's local shops great economic activity, camping grounds were kept consistently clean by campers and there I witnessed a high level of respect from all festival goers for the fellow punters and the surrounding environment.

With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas.

Allowing the organisers of Splendour In The Grass to hold the festival at the Parklands will consequently bring awareness of the area and strengthen the local area's economy. Organisers are aware of the environmental impacts and as long as there is minimum to no use of the Parklands other than during the festival, I believe Splendour In The . Grass is highly deserving of holding its event at the North Byron Parklands.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only every using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

All factors considered, Splendour has taken into account the environmental impacts of the site and its effect on the community. I think that it would be beneficial for the North Byron Parklands to be the home of Splendour.

P4139	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ashley Hartge (support)	All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector. This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people. Having previously lived in the Northern Rivers region, and attended splendour several times - losing this event, as well as others would be a huge loss for the region and a loss of another great festival. P4140	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jocelyn Roberts of Universal Music Australi (support)	Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people. It is pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events. P4141	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Scott Hayes of None (support)	Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward. The opportunity to showcase the stunning nature in the Byron region through a sustainable event venue is surely a wonderful proposition. Outdoor events bring people closer together, letâ€™s show the way Australia. Bring Splendour home!

With respect to the mapped wildlife corridor it should be pointed out that many parts of it identified as high conservation have in fact been cleared by previous land owners. The North Byron Parklands proposal has not only committed to helping restore this corridor, they have also committed to doing so in accordance with the Byron Shire Council wildlife map. This means having the opportunity to actually realise â€œon-groundâ€ what the currently inaccurate council map purports is in existence. The end result will be a greatly improved corridor that actually has some functioning capabilities.

People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. The North Byron Parklands is the very thing that our locals would love.

P4142	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Maddy Bowditch (support)	This proposal brings in new hope to Byron Bays local economy, small businesses that currently struggle will thrive on the additional revenue. The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous. It would be a shame to see this proposal turned down, it doesn't take much to see that the North Byron Parklands proposal has so much to offer. Woodford is just too far! The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process.

I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal.

The North Byron Parklands proposal brings so many positive benefits to the northern rivers region that based on planning merit alone, this application must be approved. Whether one considers employment, income generation, environmental protection measures or a massive boost to the region's tourism economy, this application exceeds all expectations. On this basis this proposal should be approved by the state government.

Cultural arts and music festivals are enjoyed by many people in Byron. People travel from near and far to attend. It would be such a shame to not offer this anymore.

Pleeeeeease, pleeeeee please: give us back our byron splendour.

P4144	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nathan Dalzell (support)	North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

Our environment, events, culture and celebration is an amazing reason to go ahead with this proposal.

P4145	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Elizabeth Bennett of Somerset College (support)	With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management. North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures. P4146	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Paulette Reardon (support)	Apart from extensive consultation with indigenous groups and various elders the North Byron Parklands group has already established a long history of working with and employing local indigenous bush regeneration teams to plant thousands of trees across their site. This tree planting program has been a great way to involve traditional land owners in helping to restore what is currently quite a degraded site. You only have to look around the Byron community when a festival or an event takes place to see the people smiling and the excitement in the air. The North Byron Parklands proposal sure sounds like a perfect way to make sure the people keep smiling.

In the Byron and northern rivers areas tourism is subject to busy times and quiet times. It is planned that a number of events will occur at the North Byron Parklands site each year and one of these takes place in winter when tourism businesses are struggling to cover costs. Building a dedicated events venue in the Byron Shire will have a number of very positive benefits for the tourism industry which is a good thing.

In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

P4147	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Charlotte Ross-Harris of The University of Melbourne (support)	As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

Also, what is the difference between using the parklands in Byron to the ones at Woodfordia? In terms of environmental impact it seems that if this proposal got through it would create the most environmentally friendly option for everyone as the Splendour in the Grass committee will ensure its protection.

And Byron thrives on tourism. This is another opportunity for those managing businesses in Byron to succeed.

Please bring splendour back to its rightful home of Byron Bay.

P4148	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rob Ewing (support)	Byron Bay is known for its culture and events. Don't deprive our town of such a tremendous opportunity. Business will thrive, local tourism will benefit and our accommodation facilities will be bulging. Sounds ideal! With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values will be done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. The system is that comprehensive that it has even considered and regulated light spill from potable lighting towers. The proponents should be commended on such an initiative. Having been to Splendour for the past 2 years I feel our biggest and best festival's home is Byron. Woodford was great but Byron is Byron. The fact that it offers much more other than the festival itself is brilliant. I don't want this great gathering of people, music, arts and culture disappear because of a couple of grumpy locals. Splendour has its own identity within Australian music and it is hands down the most ultimate experience because only true lovers of music make the trip. No wankers who go just to get fucked. Personally I have found that it brings people together like no other event. I and my friends have "splendour friends" which we rarely see unless at Splendour. P4151	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Joe Taylor (support)	North Byron Parklands is likely to be the first arts and music venue that has prepared an environmental, health and safety management manual to manage interactions with the environment. The environmental standard from this manual provides a range of measures designed to protect the environment. Given that the activity in question is low impact the environmental management of the site will easily achieve positive benefits for the environment.

The Parklands project will greatly assist the ecological integrity of the area especially for the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and the ?€˜coast to hinterland?€™ wildlife corridor. The project results in thousands of extra trees planted, improved habitat for wildlife and additions to the Nature Reserve. The careful scheduling of events to maximise ?€˜downtime?€™ will allow the Parklands site to assist the functioning of the adjoining Nature Reserve.

One of the strengths of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the flow on benefits it will provide to the tourism industry. Still picking itself up after the recent financial crisis the tourism industry stands to be the big winner from this proposal. With massive visitor generating capacity this proposal will singlehandedly attract hundreds of thousands of people to the region, all of whom need accommodation and other services once they arrive.

Having Splendour in Byron is great for everybody and when I attend I can guarantee that I would look after the place as if it were my own by disposing of my litter appropriately, respecting the site, surroundings and their neighbours. I will leave only footprints and tears of joy.

The North Byron Parklands proposal sounds amazing, exactly what Byron and its community needs.

As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

P4154	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Mason Gillian (support)	It is a matter of seeing the opportunities for positive environmental outcomes in what are presently unexpected places. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. Those in the position to bring about such change should be encouraged, not demonised. The events management industry is extremely competitive and only those operators who can demonstrate compliance with all facets of event management time and time again are the ones that survive. The owners of North Byron Parklands each have years of experience in bringing highly successful events to the general public. Such an outstanding track record only comes about through effective, well planned event policies and procedures. I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved.

People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. The North Byron Parklands is the very thing that our locals would love.

P4156	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Cassie Varian (support)	North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast.

We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal.

P4157	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Mia Verrier (support)	The Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities. Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a 'resource centre' where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say. North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities. P4158	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Matthew Donovan (support)	North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

Byron Bay has so much beauty to offer and the North Byron Parklands is a perfect way to put it on display. I say yes, to this proposal.

The North Byron Parklands people have obviously spent a lot of time developing up systems and processes to manage the environment in which they operate. It is impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment?

Currently many things are conspiring against the tourism industry, particularly the very strong Australian dollar. Enticing domestic travellers to holiday in Australia rather than abroad is a huge challenge for the tourism sector. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along that proposes to attract 35,000 people per event to a region such as the North Coast of NSW, this must be given serious consideration by approving authorities. Add to the fact that a number of these large events will eventually occur each year, the economic and tourism benefits are substantial.

P4161	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Isabella Martin (support)	At the moment the average household income per year in the Byron shire and the Northern Rivers is much lower than the rest of NSW. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers average annual income is aprox. $55,000 compared to NSW's average annual income of $71,000. Bringing Splendour home to Byron Bay to the North Byron Parklands site would open up many opportunities of employment to a community in real need. I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

I believe all this to be true. Secondly I would like to see Splendour returned to it's rightful home...NSW!

We need it more than Queensland...

I went to this years Splendour at Woodford, and although it was a fantastic 4 days it was a long way to travel from Sydney.

I would love to see Splendour back at Byron Bay because it so much more convenient for us Sydneysiders. If Splendour benefitted Byron Bay residents.

Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area. Being from Sydney, I see and understand how local businesses can benefit from such events. Local business double, triples and quadruples during major events and this is often the case in Byron. More business should never be a to deal with... More is better than none. Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues. The North Byron Parklands will be the 1st proposed land use that will see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for the site. For many years the North Byron Parklands site has been used for intensive agricultural activities and land clearing, impacting on the site dramatically. North Byron Parklands has planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year to restore the site. This has to be seen as a great result for the local environment.

Jobs are hard to come by these days. Many businesses are struggling to make ends meet. The arts and events industry has provided a lot of employment opportunities on the far north coast and North Byron Parklands should be approved because it will be a major employer in the area.

While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

North Byron Parklands commitment to the environment and vegetation management should be applauded. I see no reason at all why this shouldn't go ahead.

Many supposed local environmental groups have been invited to visit the North Byron Parklands and to participate in the public tree planting days that have been held over the past few years. Unfortunately none of these groups have actually converted their words into action by helping to repair this partially degraded site. The local indigenous bush regeneration team on the other hand has been responsible for planting thousands of trees in key locations and is another example of the Parklands group working with its community.

The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only ever using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

The real question is why would North Byron Parklands proposal not be approved? I can only see positives to such a development.

While visisting byron recently, I overheard many conversations conducted by retailers expressing their disappointment at the economic down turn that had resulted from the shift of venue of spendour in the grass. I beleive that the organizers and North Byron Parklands, plus the visiting public are well aware of the impact a festival has to the delicate social and enviromental region, and are working towards an amicable balance of sustainability as well as profitablilty.

I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal.

Previous land practices have seen poor top soil removal and impacts on graded lands. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address these existing soil impacts and also has put in place a sediment and erosion control plan during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended. Businesses like North Byron Parklands generate much needed jobs for our area. A lot of people I speak to are concerned about the lack of employment opportunities both within the shire and the northern rivers region. Any business that provides jobs to locals should be approved to operate. If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. P4171	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nathan Broome (support)	The North Byron Parklands proposal will see the largest restoration program the region has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its highly detailed vegetation management plan which will result in 1000's of trees being strategically planted around the site. The wildlife corridor has been significantly degraded over many decades due to primary production and agriculture activities. This means the corridor is currently very fragmented and in real need of revegetation. If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms. Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way. In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Those 7,500 trees are now some metres high and thriving.

Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged.

The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. It's about young people and being young. This is really important.

It impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment?

When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land.

This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a ?resource centre? where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

I work closely with people who own their own businesses in Byron bay and they are suffering, in general and without Splendour.

Do we really want to put these people in the position to loose their incomes and businesses, with the recession already hitting all of us hard enough?

It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management.

With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs.

The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understory of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understory to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures.

It would be a shame to see this proposal turned down, it doesn't take much to see that the North Byron Parklands proposal has so much to offer.

I work in the tourism industry and understand how important the tourist (domestic & international) dollar is to the livelihood of Australia on a whole. By introducing new people to the area every year increase the awareness of the amazing Byron area and increases the dollars spent. You remove the event you remove the new visitors less likely to choose Byron and the surrounding areas at a later date. Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast, it is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc.

There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals. Considering that the Byron area has always traditionally been know for music, arts, and other creative outlets I would assume that this type of event would benefit the greater community as a whole, it would be detrimental to remove this and any other similar events as it could affect unemployment in the area and also change the 'music & arts' culture that surrounds Byron.

P4179	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Yvette Holt (support)	I support the Splendour in the Grass Festival being returned to the Byron Shire at the proposed Parklands site. I think it is a real shame for the local area to lose the festival, as it brings colour, vibrancy and employment to the Shire.

The Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities.

I know of many businesses that rely on events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region.

P4180	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Belinda Bassingthwaighe of NAB (support)	The future of Byron Bay. Employment, community benefits, fun. Need we say more? If we consider the important contributions to the region made by tourism such as income generation and the creation of jobs then it follows that approving projects that have a large positive effect on increasing tourism rates will be a good thing for the State of NSW. North Byron Parklands will be responsible for drawing thousands of intra and interstate visitors, most of whom will require accommodation, food and beverages and in many instances will actively pursue some form of paying leisure activity. To let such an opportunity pass the region by would be a crime. From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. P4183	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jaylene Davey (support)	The environmental assessments completed for the North Byron Parklands proposal identify a number of threatened species which in the most part are winged creatures. It is most likely (based on research elsewhere) that these creatures will move away from any light and noise disturbances for no longer than for the period they occur. This is particularly true if there are specific food resources available on the North Byron Parklands site. So, once an event is finished it is more than probably that these animals will return and enjoy the quietude that will prevail at this site for the vast majority of the year. Whatâ€™s important for Byron is the culture and celebration, its very important to our community. The North Byron Parklands proposal will provide security and ensure that Byron continues to offer this. The opportunity to showcase the stunning nature in the Byron region through a sustainable event venue is surely a wonderful proposition. Outdoor events bring people closer together, letâ€™s show the way Australia. Bring Splendour home!

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

I have attended every splendour since i was 18. All except the last one in Woodford. I am now 25 and was bitterly disappointed not only that splendour moved so far away but also that i could not attend for the first time in 7 years. Splendour is my favourite festival ever and i have seen it grow a lot in the 7 years that i attended.

To take splendour away from byron bay is taking away many opportunities for people to attend. I live on the far south coast and was more than happy to drive 13 hours to splendour. Since i can't fly the road trip to woodford was way to far and had to miss out. For this i was bitterly disappointed. especially since I am a splendour member. To have splendour not in byron bay is disappointing for more than this. It is because it is where it began and lived for so long. i would hate for this festival to die like homebake did. Homebake started in byron bay because it was the locals and atmosphere that made this festival so great. When it moved to Sydney it worked for a while but it did not have the same unique vibe to it that it once did.

Splendour should have its own home so it can continue to grow adapt and become more and more wonderful. Byron offers a unique and pure location that is one of the biggest drawing cards to this special annual event. I have family and friends who live in byron and they too share my dismay and disappointment that splendour is no longer there.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

Furthermore, the North Byron Parkland proposal sounds very beneficial to our youth, elderly and families. A fantastic way for our society to be brought together.

Please allow Splendour in the Grass Festival to come home to Byron on a permanent basis.

While there are a number of identified threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, all of these creatures are winged species such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of intermittent noise shows that such fauna will usually relocate during such episodes and will return quickly once noise abates. Further the movement of such fauna is entirely dependent on food resources. If there are no fruits and blossoms across the site then the presence of these species will be very low.

The establishment of the North Byron Parklands will generate additional employment opportunities for the management and maintenance of the venue and event organisations. I think this is a really important benefit for this region.

Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management.

The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue. While the economy booms in other states, NSW and in particular regional NSW continues to suffer. The likely employment opportunities that North Byron Parklands will bring to the Northern Rivers shall be substantial. Many people in this region are finding it hard to secure a job and therefore we need as many of these innovative projects as possible. P4189	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Therese McDonnell (support)	It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region. If you look at the multitude of government regional growth forecasts for areas such as the northern rivers it is plain to see that with a rapidly expanding population there is a strong need for a diverse and stable employment base. Jobs will be critical to the longer term sustainability of the region and therefore when projects such as North Byron Parklands come along they should be embraced and assisted by state and local governments. Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward. North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Those 7,500 trees are now some metres high and thriving.

Having read the environmental assessment report I can say without reserve that I strongly support the proposal put forward by North Byron Parklands. The application covers off on all of the important issues such as noise, traffic and ecology. It is so pleasing to see a development that has considered and responded to such a diverse range of issues. I firmly believe that the government should approve this application.

It will develop opportunities that will help small businesses which will ensure the continued success of Byron Bay. With jobs hard to come by in regional areas such as the north coast it is really important that projects that can provide ongoing employment opportunities are considered seriously by government. I believe that North Byron Parklands is one such venture that can offer many people a job opportunity. The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. P4194	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Andy Yeomans of Individual, local resident for 30 plus years (object)	To Whom it may concern I strongly object to the proposed development on the following grounds. The area concerned is adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and part of a major wildlife corridor between the coast and inland ranges. A large sum of money was spent on a wildlife overpass on the freeway to accommodate this vital corridor. However many trees may be planted or environmental improvements made on the site they cannot compensate for the disruption of natural life cycles for resident and transitory fauna. Vulnerable species exist here and especially with Australia's poor record of extinctions we cannot afford to loose more.

Most attendees of the major festival proposed (Splendour in the Grass) wish to party. Fair enough. However, large numbers of intoxicated people partying in and around the site and in the nearest town of Brunswick Heads would not only disrupt wildlife but local residents lifestyle and other tourists visiting the area.

The proposal is for up to four large festivals (up to 50,000 people each) plus several smaller events. This is a massive imposition on local facilities. Brunswick Heads is one of the few coastal towns still affordable and friendly towards family holidays and many mature tourists. It is the closest town with pub and beach and would be overrun by festival attendees.

For many residents the Tweed Valley Way is the major route for travel between Brunswick Heads and Murwillumbah. Traffic would be disrupted for several weeks per year.

Much of the site is low lying, adjacent to coastal swamp and very flood prone presenting potentially large problems in the proposed camping and parking areas should they go under water. With the vagaries of local weather it has happened in the past with flooding hundreds of millimetres deep. It will certainly flood again.

The Blues Festival has just been accepted on its site at Tyagarah. It has widespread support locally having empathy with the local lifestyle. The Yelgun site is too sensitive and an inappropriate setting for large party style festivals, attracting un-aware youth whose behaviour will unfortunately impact on the whole area. I have witnessed the effects on Byron Bay with far smaller numbers than those proposed.

Yes we need money and jobs but not at the expense of our environment and lifestyle. By promoting the unique environmental values of the area we can attract long term sensitive tourism and sustainable industries. Big, disruptive festivals with short term employment for a few is not the way to go.

North Byron Parklands organisation are serious about managing the ecological issues at the event site. An example of this is the fact that there have been more vegetation and flora surveys conducted at the site than housing, industrial estate, and quarries assessments.

Businesses like North Byron Parklands generate much needed jobs for our area. A lot of people I speak to are concerned about the lack of employment opportunities both within the shire and the northern rivers region. Any business that provides jobs to locals should be approved to operate.

How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. Great job parklands.

The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. North Byron Parklands can be a showcase for our local talents.

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive.

I love splendor, its one of the best music festivals in Australia. I would love to see splendor get a permanant home, like all the other big music festivals, it will make things a lot more special to return to the same location every year. A place where fantastic, fun-loving memories are made every year. And Byron is the place for it!

The North Byron Parklands proposal is likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. This is shown by the level of environmental assessment that has been conducted across the site by North Byron Parklands. All assessments indicate that the proposal will have minimal environmental impacts.

Byron and the Northern Rivers unemployment rate (around 8.5%) is substantially higher than the NSW average of 5.5%. We need businesses such as Parklands who can provide employment opportunities to many in our community, particularly young people.

The events that will be held at North Byron Parklands will bring thousands of new people to the Byron Bay area each year. This can only benefit the local businesses.

P4199	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Louise Vidler (support)	North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity. This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home. The various Aboriginal clans in and around the proposed North Byron Parklands site have had a long history in this area and for this reason the Parklands people have spent a lot of time consulting indigenous groups and organisations to work out how best to assess the site for significance. This process was done in a cooperative framework with the results that potential sites of significance will be protected through fencing and other means. The archaeological report does not identify any aspects of the project that will have a negative impact on important cultural artefacts or values.

I had never been to Byron before my first splendour trip 5 years ago and I love going back there (except this year) for the annual pilgrimage. Bring it Back to Byron - I'm a Melbournian and it's a great winter escape and beautiful place.

Byron Shire and the wider northern rivers region has been a fast growing area for the creative industries sector. Huge numbers of people have moved into the region with expectations of finding work in this sector and more than ever there is a need to ensure that projects that directly and indirectly benefit this growing sector are supported. The Parklands proposal if approved will become a dominant force in expanding the creative industries sector and will provide substantial job opportunities.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

Byron Bay has so much beauty to offer and the North Byron Parklands is a perfect way to put it on display. I say yes, to this proposal.

I love splendour and I love Byron, it would be a shame to have to move permanently.

The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment.

Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, “I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a community”™. (Donna Sue Sanders “ Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc.

The Byron region can market itself as a hub for events and creativity if this proposal is approved. They would be very fortunate indeed to have the training and skills benefits of such a proposal.

Having worked within Byron Bay and being a resident of this area for 31 years, I have seen the boost to our community and Tourism through such events as Splendour In The Grass. I had the privilege and joy to work at Splendour at Woodford this year and saw how grateful the Woodford community was due to the massive influx = $$$$. Byron is our home and the benefits of Splendour should go back into our community. We pride ourselves in being environmentally aware, free thinkers and doers. Culturally such festivals enhance our area and community, drawing to it a diverse wealth of people from all over the world. I believe it is in our best interest to keep Splendour within our area and community thus solidifying Byron Bay's reputation as a mecca to people worldwide for it's natural beauty, freedom, diverse culture and people. This will benefit local businesses who have come to rely on the Festival in the Winter months to boost their income. It will also benefit us as a community, keeping our minds, open and fresh to life and that is why we live here and that is what this area is renowned for. So bring Splendour Home! And let everyone benefit, locals and guests alike.

Cultural arts and music festivals are enjoyed by many people in Byron. People travel from near and far to attend. It would be such a shame to not offer this anymore.

Positive environmental outcomes are important for any development and one very important outcome offered by the North Byron Parklands proponents is to apply a vegetation management plan across the entire site. Under this plan sections of the site will be restored back to pristine forest cover while others will be treated as managed parklands. Under this treatment very large areas will be planted with low density native trees that will provide connection points for fauna to avoid large pastoral areas and reduce the likelihood of predation during movement across the site. They are not required by law to do this, but do see it as an important environmental outcome.

Research into the effects of intermittent noise shows that such fauna will usually relocate during such episodes and will return quickly once noise abates. Further the movement of such fauna is entirely dependent on food resources. If there are no fruits and blossoms across the site then the presence of these species will be very low. From Tweed Heads to Evans Head most of the business activity revolves around tourism. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved.

P4213	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Natasha Brown (support)	It is pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events.

While it is understood that business ventures such as North Byron Parklands are focussed on turning a profit, it is also really pleasing to see they have expended a fair amount of effort on protecting and enhancing the environment in which they operate. Initiatives such as light spill and noise management and inducting all staff and contractors is a great way to protect the environment and demonstrate a commitment to sustainable best practice.

P4214	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rachel Cullen of MobileActive (support)	Splendour belongs in Byron, it is the only festival I can attend each year and when it is in QLD its just too far to travel. Please bring it back to Byron with the new grounds it will be perfect! The North Byron Parklands site has undergone a number of detailed assessments to assure the site is enhanced to be able to become a "sustainable" site for cultural events in the area. It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site. Jobs are hard to come by these days. Many businesses are struggling to make ends meet. The arts and events industry has provided a lot of employment opportunities on the far north coast and North Byron Parklands should be approved because it will be a major employer in the area. Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing. It would be a shame to see this proposal turned down, it doesn't take much to see that the North Byron Parklands proposal has so much to offer. The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

NSW Department of Planning should consider this proposal as a great investment in bring not only people around Australia but all over the world to this beautiful spot.

P4216	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Loretta Perry (support)	Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people. With a very large number of people reliant on the tourism industry for their income, whether they are an employee or an owner-operator, the North Byron Parklands project represents a potentially substantial increase in business for these people. If you consider just the sheer number of punters the proposal will attract one can start to see the economic benefits which will flow to the region. I think most businesses would view this proposal in a positive light. Without major festivals like Splendour In The Grass, the youth of Byron Shire get bored and feel the need to entertain themselves in other ways. Having a secure, fun environment for these young adults is the best way to satisfy their need to socialise and listen to the awesome bands that Splendour In The Grass attracts. Bring Splendour Home! In a coastal region such as the Byron and Tweed areas tourism businesses are the financial lifeblood for so many people. Ensuring we attract businesses such as North Byron Parklands who will be responsible for bringing significant numbers of visitors to the region is vital if we are to maintain the viability of this critical sector. Government agencies should be approving projects of this nature.

In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

Yours sincerely,

P4220	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jessica Munro (support)	The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal. The North Byron Parklands proposal sounds amazing, exactly what Byron and its community needs. The event is a very inspiring experience and it showcases the talent of so many up and coming artists! It brings the community together and it helps to generate much needed income into the byron and shire areas over the 3 days. Please Bring Splendour home.. The North Byron Parklands proposal will see the largest restoration program the region has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its highly detailed vegetation management plan which will result in 1000's of trees being strategically planted around the site. The wildlife corridor has been significantly degraded over many decades due to primary production and agriculture activities. This means the corridor is currently very fragmented and in real need of revegetation.

If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment.

P4222	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stephen Miller (support)	In relation to environmental management one of the biggest impacts on fauna in this region is dogs. It is pleasing to note that the environmental, health and safety management manual strictly prohibits dogs from entering the site. Just this on initiative will help to reduce pressure on the environment, not to mention the host of other excellent environmental programs they have documented. I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal. P4224	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Peter Neale (support)	One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive. North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it. The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. North Byron Parklands can be a showcase for our local talents.

P4225	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alex Jones (support)	The North Byron Parklands will see the subject site have the opportunity to maintain low impact activity that will see the site unoccupied for some 75% of the year. By allowing the sites land to rest both fauna and flora growth will be encouraged across and adjacent to the site. This restoration will be a positive outcome for the local environment.

One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values will be done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. The system is that comprehensive that it has even considered and regulated light spill from potable lighting towers. The proponents should be commended on such an initiative.

The Parklands project will greatly assist the ecological integrity of the area especially for the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and the â€œcoast to hinterlandâ€™ wildlife corridor. The project results in thousands of extra trees planted, improved habitat for wildlife and additions to the Nature Reserve. The careful scheduling of events to maximise â€œdowntimeâ€™ will allow the Parklands site to assist the functioning of the adjoining Nature Reserve.

One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives.

Cultural arts and music festivals are enjoyed by many people in Byron. People travel from near and far to attend. It would be such a shame to not offer this anymore.

P4227	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Paul Gray (support)	If Woodfordia in Queensland can be highly respected as an enviro-friendly venue which hosts a number of festivals with large crowds, then surely North Byron Parklands can achieve the same level of acceptance and respect if given the chance. Most of the businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire are sole traders and do not offer any employment opportunities to the community. Bringing Splendour in the Grass festival back to Byron Bay would result in North Byron Parklands offering many new employment opportunities for the residents in the region. I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved.

The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment.

With jobs hard to come by in regional areas such as the north coast it is really important that projects that can provide ongoing employment opportunities are considered seriously by government. I believe that North Byron Parklands is one such venture that can offer many people a job opportunity.

The environmental assessments completed for the North Byron Parklands proposal identify a number of threatened species which in the most part are winged creatures. It is most likely (based on research elsewhere) that these creatures will move away from any light and noise disturbances for no longer than for the period they occur. This is particularly true if there are specific food resources available on the North Byron Parklands site. So, once an event is finished it is more than probably that these animals will return and enjoy the quietude that will prevail at this site for the vast majority of the year.

Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events

P4230	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Roxanne Lorenz of Queensland Theatre Company (support)	I have attended 7 Splendour in the Grass festivals. Splendour in the Grass is an amazing music festival. Each year it has become bigger and bigger, with people travelling from all across the country (and certain people, from other points of the world) to be involved in supporting live music. Each year, it has grown further recognition of attracting some of the best international acts. I have to say that I was disappointed in the festival being held at Woodfordia this year - unfortunately, the venue felt too remote and it took away the fantastic atmosphere that Byron Bay has - with it's ability to cater for a large crowd with its local businesses and accomodation, not to mention the beautiful beaches - which really show off all that Australia has to offer. I really want to see Splendour back in Byron. I also think it is imperative that the government supports events like these, which help grow our artistic and cultural community. If this were a sporting event, would the government be more inclined to take our opinions on this matter more seriously? In terms of accessibility, growth and for the event to truly flourish, the best thing for Splendour is to be held at the North Byron Parklands. Woodfordia is a great venue - but unfortunately that area is not developed enough to cater for the needs and interests of the type of crowd that Splendour attracts.

I hope you will take these points into consideration.

P4231	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Russell Mills of Northern Rivers Tourism (support)

In the year ended June 2010 over 5.3 million domestic and international overnight visitors and daytrippers come to the Northern Rivers and contribute over $1.3 billion to the regional economy. They come for a variety of reasons, not the least of which is the natural beauty evident from Tweed Heads to Wooli to Tabulam in the region's west.

Like the 262,000 residents of the region, they also come to appreciate the region's vibrant market culture, its diversity of agriculture and food production, the thriving arts and creative industries sector, to study at highly regarded educational institutions, for health and wellness and to briefly "live the life" of the region's diverse communities.

Tourism is economically and socially crucial to Byron Shire and to the Northern Rivers region. It provides income to thousands of small to medium enterprises (including accommodation providers, attractions, restaurateurs, retailers, pubs and clubs and fuel suppliers) and those in the supply chain of goods and services for visitors. It fosters social cohesion through visiting friends and relatives and brings about tolerance and appreciation of different cultures and sub-cultures. Travel broadens the mind.

As a tourism industry professional and concerned resident, I voice my unequivocal support for Splendour in the Grass to return to its home in the Northern Rivers, specifically at the North Byron Shire Parklands site. Not only does this event generate undeniable economic benefits in a traditional low season ($5.7million injected into the Byron Shire economy, 40,000 visitor nights into regional NSW during the 2007 event, the latest data available at the time of writing), but the organisers and site owners demonstrate a commitment to corporate social responsibility that should serve as a benchmark for all event organisers.

The Northern Rivers region is unique in attracting residents and visitors with a diversity of views, opinions and philosophies. Robust public debate is important to maintain a balance of competing interests

One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive. Dear Sir/Madam

The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast.

You only have to look around the Byron community when a festival or an event takes place to see the people smiling and the excitement in the air. The North Byron Parklands proposal sure sounds like a perfect way to make sure the people keep smiling.

Love Ric.

P4235	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rebecca Alcott (support)	I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet. At the moment the average household income per year in the Byron shire and the Northern Rivers is much lower than the rest of NSW. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers average annual income is aprox. $55,000 compared to NSWâ€™s average annual income of $71,000. Bringing Splendour home to Byron Bay to the North Byron Parklands site would open up many opportunities of employment to a community in real need. If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably. Thereâ€™s not as many employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others. As a past guest at Splendour and an avid live music fan who has been to many festivals around the globe, I can say that this festival is on par with many of the world's best. To attend Splendour made me proud that an Australian festival can match if not exceed the quality of other big international festivals, given how isolated our country is. And I can also say that not one of the many festivals I have attended globally has been in such an idillic setting, where the majority of locals welcome and embrace festival goers. I strongly urge you to establish this cultural site, as I for one had plans to continue bringing my tourist dollar to the region for many years to come. Kind regards,

Rebecca Alcott

It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region.

P4238	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Natasha Gourlay of Xchanging (support)	Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project.

The future of Byron Bay. Employment, community benefits, fun. Need we say more?

Imagine an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. P4239	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Emma Trusz (support)	To whom it may concern, I am writing in support of basing the Splendour in the Grass music, arts and culture festival at the North Byron Parklands. The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp. Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy.

This is a wonderful opportunity to bring tourism and a yearly economic boost to Byron Bay in conjunction with a celebration of music. Please allow Splendour to be based at the North Byron Parklands.

P4240	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Emma Hicks (support)	The North Byron Parklands people have obviously spent a lot of time developing up systems and processes to manage the environment in which they operate. It impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment? The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. Itâ€™s about young people and being young. This is really important. P4241	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Tara Cox (support)	The Marshall?s Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities. If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

I think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me.

The Byron Shire Council identifies the creative industries sector as one of nine key focus areas which foster the prosperity of the shire through sustainable job creation. The shire has a long history of creative endeavours and this needs to be built on by supporting such proposals as that put forward by North Byron Parklands. Generating a large number of jobs for the area, it is extremely important that it is approved. Doing so will provide a broad spectrum of the local community with jobs that would otherwise not be available.

While it is understood that business ventures such as North Byron Parklands are focussed on turning a profit, it is also really pleasing to see they have expended a fair amount of effort on protecting and enhancing the environment in which they operate. Initiatives such as light spill and noise management and inducting all staff and contractors is a great way to protect the environment and demonstrate a commitment to sustainable best practice.

Byron Bay is widely known for pushing the barrier and making things possible. We as a town have so much to offer and this new proposal will put us on the map so to speak. It's a fantastic opportunity for us all.

P4243	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Julian Georges (support)	While much is made about the supposed wildlife corridor in and around the North Byron Parklands site the fact is that much of the vegetation is patchy and degraded. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue. There is currently approximately 294,00 people living on the Northern Rivers and this number is said to increase to approximately 376,000 residents by 2036. This huge increase in the next 26 years requires action to create employment opportunities in the region. North Byron Parklands can offer an array of employment opportunities in the future to tackle this population increase. How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. Great job parklands. The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

I know of many businesses that rely on events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region.

It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs.

Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a "resource centre"™ where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say.

Jobs are very important. I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. One of the unintended effects on the environment from outdoor events is light spill. So it is pleasing to see that this issue is well addressed under the organisation's environmental standard. This standard requires lighting to be directed downwards, away from forest blocks, using low pressure sodium vapour lights where possible, and turning off light towers at a certain time of night. Such measures will greatly reduce disturbances to any localised fauna during such events.

On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only ever using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

P4249	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Linda Butcher (support)	Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature.

The opportunity to showcase the stunning nature in the Byron region through a sustainable event venue is surely a wonderful proposition. Outdoor events bring people closer together, letâ€™s show the way Australia. Bring Splendour home!

It is a matter of seeing the opportunities for positive environmental outcomes in what are presently unexpected places. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. P4251	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Blake Beesley (support)	The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported. In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas. Tourism is a massive income generating activity for Byron Shire and the northern rivers region. The Parklands proposal will bring tens of thousands of people to the area, all of whom will need accommodation and food. It is so important that this project be approved because the positive economic impacts are so significant. North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities. From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive.

Letâ€™s get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, letâ€™s get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people.

Please give Splendour an environmentally sustainable home!

P4253	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Eleanor Saker (support)	The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. North Byron Parklands would help provide employment for many of these young people, thus giving them a reason to stay in the area. The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense. North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. Bring on the variety and the possibilities! P4254	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Grant Teelow (support)	With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values will be done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. The system is that comprehensive that it has even considered and regulated light spill from potable lighting towers. The proponents should be commended on such an initiative. In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet. Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. P4255	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jennifer Cabrero of QUT (support)	With the documenting of environmental requirements through the North Byron Parklands management manual it is clear that a very high level of commitment has been made to protect and enhance the environment. Take for example the requirement to have a 30 metre buffer between the car park and adjoining nature reserve. This initiative will protect the nature reserve and will allow for the buffer area to slowly regenerate back to its former bushland status. I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This as far as I understand is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported. P4256	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Paul O'Neill (support)	The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands.

In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures.

To whom it may concern,

I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal.

Being young it's important to get out there. North Byron Parklands offers us opportunities to interact on levels that promote us to look outside the square. It would be a great opportunity for us to have this venue available.

Although there may be a few concerns about the festival, I feel the vast majority of people, including locals, support the arts and festivals like Splendour in the Grass. Most people moved into the area in full knowledge that such events take place. Please do not let a few people ruin it for everyone else.

P4259	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Devon Booth (support)	The North Byron Parklands proposal is likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. This is shown by the level of environmental assessment that has been conducted across the site by North Byron Parklands. All assessments indicate that the proposal will have minimal environmental impacts. Currently many things are conspiring against the tourism industry, particularly the very strong Australian dollar. Enticing domestic travellers to holiday in Australia rather than abroad is a huge challenge for the tourism sector. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along that proposes to attract 35,000 people per event to a region such as the North Coast of NSW, this must be given serious consideration by approving authorities. Add to the fact that a number of these large events will eventually occur each year, the economic and tourism benefits are substantial. North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead. In relation to environmental management one of the biggest impacts on fauna in this region is dogs. It is pleasing to note that the environmental, health and safety management manual strictly prohibits dogs from entering the site. Just this on initiative will help to reduce pressure on the environment, not to mention the host of other excellent environmental programs they have documented.

The North Byron Parklands proposal has considered both indigenous and non-indigenous issues associated with the proposal. In particular, Parklands has worked closely with the local Tweed/Byron Aboriginal Land Council and has complemented a number of archaeological digs to help determine the significance of parts of the site. It is pleasing to see that certain areas of the site will become 'out of bounds' to protect identified areas of importance.

As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area.

In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire.

So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account.

This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

Byron is such a lovely place to have a festival! I used to live in Ballina, right near buy. If splendour were in Byron again, it would give me a lovely excuse to go down and visit and have a nice holiday!

Here we have an opportunity to hold a low impact activity that will see the land rested for some 75% of the year. Allowing such large rest times will benefit both fauna and flora across and adjacent to the site. This is a very positive outcome. In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. P4266	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Samara Cook of none (support)	This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people. The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone.

While much is made of the Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

P4267	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Gemma Smith ()	I believe the proposal to secure the North Byron Parklands for the Splendour in the Grass Music and arts festival is a positive arrangement for the environment, Byron Bay locals and festivals goers alike. I originally attended the Splendour in the Grass festival at Belongil Fields in 2007. The few days I spent in Byron away from Sydney was such a beautiful experience. I took in the local landscape, shopping and accommodation on top of my main provocative being to see some of my favourite local and international bands. There was nothing more I could ask for. The proposal to permanently set up Splendour in the North Byron Parklands, means that myself and future festival goers can still experience the perfect festival that is Splendour in the Grass at a location that will better suit the festival at less of an expense on the natural environment.

I agree with and am impressed by... "The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported".

Also, having been raised in a low social economic region (the NSW South Coast) I can appreciate... "If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms".

I support the proposal to bring Splendour Home as I truly believe the North Byron Parklands is the best location for an event that benefits the profile of the local area.

To whom it may concern,

My name is James Holmes and i am an avid believer and supporter in Splendour in the Grass.

My experiences of the festival have been nothing short of life-changing. Splendour continues to be pioneers in the Australian music industry bringing the biggest, most incredible international acts, supporting fresh Aussie musicians and providing all that attend the most euphoric weekend of their life. My friend's band, Jinja Safari, were lucky enough to open the festival in 2010 through triple j's unearthed competition and it has put them on the path to bigger things.

In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

Don't stop splendour from growing into Australia's Glastonbury. This year it felt as if it was our generation's Woodstock. I can't begin to imagine what future years will be like if you let splendour move back to its home.

Byron is such an incredible place and deserves to have this incredible music festival.

I have faith in Splendour's policies on environmental care and rejuvenation. The festival's benefits dramatically outweigh any negative impacts.

Please, allow Splendour in the Grass to have a permanent home at the North Byron Parklands.

Yours sincerely,

James Holmes.

While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

Young people living on the north coast have a tough time finding employment, and particularly jobs that are of interest to them. The Parklands proposal will provide hundreds of jobs for people in our area and this represents a huge plus for a lot of kids.

One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature.

With its focus on cultural heritage management, North Byron Parklands can instill in the region a greater understanding of our local indigenous and non-indigenous ancestry. The cultural centre would provide unique learning opportunities for staff.

P4270	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kate Tones of Tennis Australia (support)	To the NSW Department of Planning

The site in question if not used for a sustainable cultural arts and event venue may end up being used by whoever buys it in a manner that would place greater pressure on the environment. Here we have an opportunity to hold a low impact activity that will see the land rested for some 75% of the year. Allowing such large rest times will benefit both fauna and flora across and adjacent to the site. This is a very positive outcome.

When you have the combined expertise of event operators as those that make up the owners of North Byron Parklands it is quite evident that events that are proposed to be held at the Parklands site will be conducted in a successful and safe manner. With years of combined expertise these industry leaders will ensure that all events are conducted in a manner that ensures the management of all aspects of large and small events are adequately covered.

Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations.

And finally... Splendour in the Grass is an amazing festival - with an equally amazing reputation that people flock to from all around Australia and the World - if this isn't a drawcard, what is?

Kind regards

Kate Tones

The North Byron Parklands Project willÂ impact the environment positively and should be supported. The preservation of ecological values in and around the Parklands site is an important aspect of North Byron Parklands proposal. The large amount of scientific assessment that has been conducted shows that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values on the site.

The North Byron Parklands proposal is a fantastic idea offering various ways to boost and maximize our local economy.

The North Byron Parklands proposal is a fantastic idea offering various ways to boost and maximize our local economy.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

P4273	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Brad Lanham (support)	North Byron Parklands organisation are serious about managing the ecological issues at the event site. An example of this is the fact that there have been more vegetation and flora surveys conducted at the site than housing, industrial estate, and quarries assessments. The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron

Parklands.

All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector.

P4274	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Emma Hales (support)	Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward. I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved. P4277	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Elyse Flavel (support)	If Woodfordia in Queensland can be highly respected as an enviro-friendly venue which hosts a number of festivals with large crowds, then surely North Byron Parklands can achieve the same level of acceptance and respect if given the chance. Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy. P4278	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alice Waterston (support)	Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable. I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal. P4279	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Helen Spencer of caravan park (support)	North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual. Young people living on the north coast have a tough time finding employment, and particularly jobs that are of interest to them. The Parklands proposal will provide hundreds of jobs for people in our area and this represents a huge plus for a lot of kids.

The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

P4280	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Georgia Mason (support)

North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures.

The Parklands project will greatly assist the ecological integrity of the area especially for the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and the "coast to hinterland"™ wildlife corridor. The project results in thousands of extra trees planted, improved habitat for wildlife and additions to the Nature Reserve. The careful scheduling of events to maximise â€˜downtimeâ€™™ will allow the Parklands site to assist the functioning of the adjoining Nature Reserve.

In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area.

The North Byron Parkland proposal sounds very beneficial to our youth, elderly and families. A fantastic way for our society to be brought together.

P4281	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Anita Colenbrander of Anita Colenbrander Entertainment (support)	When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve. In relation to employment and wages the Byron local government area has one of the State's lowest average wages, around $31,000 per annum. A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities to the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities. I lived in this region for 3 years and know how hard it is to gain employment. I was lucky to find work in the nanny industry which led me to bigger and better things. In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only ever using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue. I have been to 8 out of the last 10 Splendours and have seen first hand how the Splendid folk work with the environment to protect it, not destroy it. P4282	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Polly Shell (support)	Yes please bring splendour back home! Byron bay area is what made splendour, Splendour! it wasnt the same moving up the coast last time, and we LOVE having this festival on our home grounds!! sooo please get it approved! North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved. With so many people moving into capital cities the government needs to ensure that regional employment opportunities are secured whenever they are offered. Parklands have a project that will provide plenty of jobs for a range of people and it is super important that they jobs stay in our area. Tourism is a massive income generating activity for Byron Shire and the northern rivers region. The Parklands proposal will bring tens of thousands of people to the area, all of whom will need accommodation and food. It is so important that this project be approved because the positive economic impacts are so significant. From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It?s a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably.

Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

The North Byron Parklands will see the subject site have the opportunity to maintain low impact activity that will see the site unoccupied for some 75% of the year. By allowing the sites land to rest both fauna and flora growth will be encouraged across and adjacent to the site. This restoration will be a positive outcome for the local environment.

With so many people relying on tourism for their income on the North Coast there is an obligation on behalf of state and local governments to help facilitate any reasonable project that will increase domestic and international tourist numbers. North Byron Parklands will become the home of a number of major events with each of these events attracting thousands of people to the area. This will greatly enhance the local tourism sector.

Opportunities for employment such as that being offered by the North Byron Parklands proposal is vital to the sustainability of regional areas.

As a member of the Northern rivers area, I struggle immensely to work in the local area due to the lack of industry and opportunities. This has a follow on effect to local business as I tend to shop in Queensland. I think that more often we can bring interest to the area and build the local community, the more opportunities this will bring. The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

Please support the Splendour application as I know many of the local traders heavily rely on the business that visitors bring the the Byron Area. We also love that we get an awesome even in our local area.

Many thanks!

P4290	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from roxane lancaster (support)	One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed. I would definitely apply for a job at the North Byron Parklands and know that it will lay my employment path out. This is the opportunity that I have always hoped Byron Bay would offer. North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense. There?s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

North Byron Parklands is an entirely positive and beneficial asset to the Byron Shire. it will me a massive loss to the local economy if Splendour does not return to the region. It will also be a great cultural loss .

P4291	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kathryn Isambert (support)	The North Byron Parklands proposal will see the largest restoration program the region has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its highly detailed vegetation management plan which will result in 1000's of trees being strategically planted around the site. The wildlife corridor has been significantly degraded over many decades due to primary production and agriculture activities. This means the corridor is currently very fragmented and in real need of revegetation.

A lot of my friends are moving outside of Byron Bay to bigger and better opportunities. It would be great if we had those opportunities offered to us closer to home.

P4292	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from lexi goffett (support)	From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive. Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy. The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal. Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged.

The potential adverse impact of the Parklands usage on flora and fauna has been largely mitigated by virtue of the event site occupying only existing grassland areas of the site and avoiding vegetated parts of the site. Further, the significant increase in habitat afforded by the additional 11.1 ha of revegetation and 48.1 ha of additional plantings also mitigates against adverse impact upon flora and fauna species.

Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area. Imagine an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.Â

Making new friends, learning new activities, attending new and exciting events, a place where we are all welcome and safe. Bring on North Byron Parklands.

The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp.

The Parklands project will greatly assist the ecological integrity of the area especially for the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and the â~coast to hinterlandâ~™ wildlife corridor. The project results in thousands of extra trees planted, improved habitat for wildlife and additions to the Nature Reserve. The careful scheduling of events to maximise â~downtimeâ~™ will allow the Parklands site to assist the functioning of the adjoining Nature Reserve.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view.

If you were to analysis the professional event management of such festivals as Splendour in the Grass, Parklife, Shore Thing and Sunset Suns one could only come to the conclusion that these event operators are up there with the most successful an well managed events in Australia. Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way.

The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. North Byron Parklands can be a showcase for our local talents.

The North Byron Parklands people have obviously spent a lot of time developing up systems and processes to manage the environment in which they operate. It is impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment? Until very recently NSW has had a less than enviable employment track record mainly due to the global financial crisis. While it looks like the state is on the mend we still need to ensure that projects like North Byron Parklands are given the green light because of the large number of regional jobs it will provide. From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It's a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across main parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities. By doing this it is creating a business that combines ecology with events and community giving. This is appealing to young people of the NSW/QLD coastal area as majority of them have grown up in a nature rich area and they care for the environment. The North Byron Parklands team will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site and creating a unique experience for all visitors by including music and environment. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land and as Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets many tourists are attracted to the area although like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly even out tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. For example, The Splendour in the Grass Festival is usually held in August and this is an off-peak season. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged. Please let it be approved :)

Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events.

So many people in the northern rivers area rely on the tourism industry for their bread and butter. These days most businesses are geared towards the tourism dollar and if past trends are anything to go by this industry sector will continue to play a key role in the region's economic fortunes. The people behind Parklands will play a dominant role in growing and sustaining the tourism industry and we should all get behind them to make this project a reality.

P4299	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Camilla Duff (support)	The environmental assessments completed for the North Byron Parklands proposal identify a number of threatened species which in the most part are winged creatures. It is most likely (based on research elsewhere) that these creatures will move away from any light and noise disturbances for no longer than for the period they occur. This is particularly true if there are specific food resources available on the North Byron Parklands site. So, once an event is finished it is more than probably that these animals will return and enjoy the quietude that will prevail at this site for the vast majority of the year.

One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed.

P4302	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ann-Maree Wilkinson of Southern Cross University (support)	The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this. Australia, generally speaking has been lucky in terms of its overall unemployment rate, however in the northern rivers the rate is much higher. Regions such as this need employers across a range of industries not just retail and tourism. I am sure that North Byron Parklands will become a major employer in the region if the project is approved.

The North Byron Parklands proposal brings so many positive benefits to the northern rivers region that based on planning merit alone, this application must be approved. Whether one considers employment, income generation, environmental protection measures or a massive boost to the region's tourism economy, this application exceeds all expectations. On this basis this proposal should be approved by the state government.

Huge numbers of people have moved into the region with expectations of finding work in this sector and more than ever there is a need to ensure that projects that directly and indirectly benefit this growing sector are supported. The Parklands proposal if approved will become a dominant force in expanding the creative industries sector and will provide substantial job opportunities. North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative. At the moment the average household income per year in the Byron shire and the Northern Rivers is much lower than the rest of NSW. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers average annual income is aprox. $55,000 compared to NSWâ€™s average annual income of $71,000. Bringing Splendour home to Byron Bay to the North Byron Parklands site would open up many opportunities of employment to a community in real need. Positive environmental outcomes are important for any development and one very important outcome offered by the North Byron Parklands proponents is to apply a vegetation management plan across the entire site. Under this plan sections of the site will be restored back to pristine forest cover while others will be treated as managed parklands. Under this treatment very large areas will be planted with low density native trees that will provide connection points for fauna to avoid large pastoral areas and reduce the likelihood of predation during movement across the site. They are not required by law to do this, but do see it as an important environmental outcome. Being young itâ€™s important to get out there. Our environment, events, culture and celebration is an amazing reason to go ahead with this proposal.

In NSW and particularly regional areas such as Byron and the wider northern rivers area securing a job is becoming very difficult. While other states prosper, NSW has fallen behind and the people are the ones suffering. The NSW Government needs to approve projects such as North Byron Parklands because it will create employment and this in turn is good for our state economy.

Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

P4306	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Michael Manning (support)	The North Byron Parklands will be the 1st proposed land use that will see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for the site. For many years the North Byron Parklands site has been used for intensive agricultural activities and land clearing, impacting on the site dramatically. North Byron Parklands has planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year to restore the site. This has to be seen as a great result for the local environment. In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet. Under the North Byron Parklands environmental management manual there is a particular Environmental Standard that requires events being held on the site to adhere to a number of stringent environmental controls. The controls include buffer zones, environmental inductions, fencing aspects, wildlife rescue teams and lighting requirement to reduce illumination of bush blocks. I am unaware of any other outdoor event venue requiring such tight environmental controls. Parklands will certainly be moving towards Australian best practice, if not world's best environmental practice.

North Byron Parklands offers music, entertainment and culture for our locals and tourists. What a great way of putting Byron Bay more on the map.

Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc.

It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management.

Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people. Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. P4309	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Haley Rhodes of Mudgee Physiotherapy (support)	The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understory of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understory to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures. North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. Bring on the variety and the possibilities! Until very recently NSW has had a less than enviable employment track record mainly due to the global financial crisis. While it looks like the state is on the mend we still need to ensure that projects like North Byron Parklands are given the green light because of the large number of regional jobs it will provide.

It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged.

The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

If employment growth in regional areas is a key concern of the NSW state government then approving this project makes sound economic sense. There is a real need to support organisations that can provide such large numbers of jobs in an area where finding a good job can be very difficult. It seems to me that approving this project will have lasting long term benefits for job prospectors in this rural region.

All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector.

There?s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

P4313	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Erin Tanner (support)	It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

The current population of the Northern Rivers is approximately 294,000 people, and is anticipated to increase to approximately 376,000 people by 2036. Such an increase in population requires a suite of stable employers. North Byron Parklands can play a significant role in providing jobs to people in this region.

Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regionsâ€™ economies. The proposed North Byron Parklands project will result in a massive increase in the number of domestic visitors to the area and to a lesser degree, will also attract many overseas visitors. As this industry is so important to the region it makes good sense for this project to proceed.

We have heard it many times before that living in a community which has locally based jobs provides for a health and sustainable society. Jobs in the north of New South Wales are hard to come by at the best of times so when a project comes along which will create new jobs for people it is important to support it. That is a key reason why I support the approval of the North Byron Parklands project.

P4318	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Robert Quarterman (support)	Our environment, events, culture and celebration is an amazing reason to go ahead with this proposal. When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land. Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal. North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

I have been a Splendour multi event ticket holder. I have been to seven Splendours now and I look forward to the event returning to Byron Bay.

Thanks and regards,

P4319	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Seton Prettejohn of DNA Digital (support)	When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve. Employment opportunities are getting harder and harder for many people in rural areas to find. With so many industries moving out of rural areas we need to encourage those businesses that want to set up in these regions with as much help as possible. I understand that North Byron Parklands will provide a large number of jobs across a very broad range skill sets. Projects of this nature should be approved on this basis alone.

North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet.

From Tweed Heads to Evans Head most of the business activity revolves around tourism. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved.

That is a key reason why I support the approval of the North Byron Parklands project.

I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This as far as I understand is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported.

North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

P4322	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Michele Whiteley (support)	At present the North Byron Parklands site is subject to significant sediment and erosion issues. Previous land practices have seen poor top soil removal and impacts on graded lands. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address these existing soil impacts and also has put in place a sediment and erosion control plan during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

P4323	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kieran Elliott (support)	With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative. With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals. The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

Many people worry about financially providing for themselves and their families and rightly so. Today it is hard to find a good job outside of the larger cities. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along offering lots of jobs it is surely in the interests of working families that such a project is located in a regional area. It should be approved just on its employment capabilities let alone any other benefits it is bound to bring.

Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp.

There is so much that can be gained by the positive vibes of goos music and in a place like Byron where Music and fun is celebrated, the economy can be stimulated and create a great reputation for Byron and its Festival scene.

P4328	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from natalie dobrohotoff of BYRON BIBS (support)	Hi, I'm a local in the Byron Shire and have been to Splendour for 5 years missing the last one at Woodford as it was too far to go. in 2010 the people of the Byron Shire really missed Splendour Financially and Culturally the town was dead. I'm 47 and not some teenager wanting to get crazy, I want Splendour back in my backyard. North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. Bring on the variety and the possibilities! North Byron Parklands is likely to be the first arts and music venue that has prepared an environmental, health and safety management manual to manage interactions with the environment. The environmental standard from this manual provides a range of measures designed to protect the environment. Given that the activity in question is low impact the environmental management of the site will easily achieve positive benefits for the environment. Regards Natalie Dobrohotoff

P4330	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kathryn Arndell (support)	It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning. Apart from extensive consultation with indigenous groups and various elders the North Byron Parklands group has already established a long history of working with and employing local indigenous bush regeneration teams to plant thousands of trees across their site. This tree planting program has been a great way to involve traditional land owners in helping to restore what is currently quite a degraded site. Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It's up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people. P4331	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lorraine Boyer (support)	The North Byron Parklands will be the 1st proposed land use that will see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for the site. For many years the North Byron Parklands site has been used for intensive agricultural activities and land clearing, impacting on the site dramatically. North Byron Parklands has planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year to restore the site. This has to be seen as a great result for the local environment. With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals. Tourism is one of the biggest employers in the northern rivers area and the North Byron Parklands proposal is projecting that it will bring thousands of people to the area each year. Increasing visitor numbers to the area is the surest way to help grow these tourism businesses particularly when the proposal shall bring large numbers of people to the area in traditionally slow times. North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events. P4334	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Richard Drane (support)	To whom it may concern, The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant.

The events management industry is extremely competitive and only those operators who can demonstrate compliance with all facets of event management time and time again are the ones that survive. The owners of North Byron Parklands each have years of experience in bringing highly successful events to the general public. Such an outstanding track record only comes about through effective, well planned event policies and procedures.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

Yours sincerely,

As a creative generation these opportunities are invaluable to the education of todays youths. This proposal has endless opportunities including networking with Southern Cross University and SAE, furthering our regions creativeness, training and work experiences. I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved. In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

I have seen what a range of other industry developments have offered up to protect the environment. In all cases their activities intrinsically contain much greater environmental risks compared to North Byron Parklands, yet their environmental controls are not even remotely as advanced or detailed. It is obvious that this proponent has thought long and hard about managing its activities in an environmentally and sustainable manner.

To Whom It May Concern,

As part of one of the many people that enjoy the Splendor in the Grass festival, I, like many others, would love to see it return home to Byron Bay. Byron Bay is such a cultural and diverse place, with beautiful surroundings and a great atmosphere. Like Byron, Splendor is a very cultural music and art festival, and with Byron Bay being one of the most beautiful places along the east coast, I think Splendor deserves to go home.

Thanks for your time.

ElishaEvents are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

P4338	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nicholas Aggar (support)	I have attended splendour 5 times, and it is my opinion that the organisers are without peer in Australia. They have a strong nature preservation ethos, take wonderful care of the environment the show is carried out in and most of all, take care to ensure the comfort of the patrons attending the festival (the lineups aren't half bad either!). Coupled with the effortless organisation of Village sounds and Secret Service, it is truly a show that this country can be proud of. One only needs to look at the care and process that has been carried out in preparing the site at North Byron Shire Parkland to see the commitment and care that the organisers take of their surroundings. An intrinsic part of my splendour experience is the road trip, the feeling as we come down bangalow road and finally make it to Byron is one of great joy. I can understand the frustration of Shire residents being so inconvenienced, but surely the long term gains exceed the short term losses? Splendour has become hewn into the fabric of Australian culture, and it being held in Byron is an intrinsic part of this. To lose this would be a terrible tragedy.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

Letâ€™s get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, letâ€™s get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people.

P4340	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Laura Charlesworth (support)	If Woodfordia in Queensland can be highly respected as an enviro-friendly venue which hosts a number of festivals with large crowds, then surely North Byron Parklands can achieve the same level of acceptance and respect if given the chance. Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations. P4341	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Holly Holliday (support)	The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense. Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

With so many industries moving out of rural areas we need to encourage those businesses that want to set up in these regions with as much help as possible. I understand that North Byron Parklands will provide a large number of jobs across a very broad range skill sets. Projects of this nature should be approved on this basis alone. North Byron Parklands have undertaken a detailed economic impact assessment which bodes well for the tourism industry should it be approved. Projections show that tens of thousands of people will visit the area each year and this influx of people will significantly bolster our tourism businesses. With so many locals relying on the tourism industry for their income, such a project is very welcome. We really need this to get the go ahead. P4343	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Galigali Perkins (object)	This proposal is an outrage - it attempts to overturn NSW's planning legislation protecting wildlife habitat which has already been upheld in the Land & Environment Courts' decision to reject Splendour's previous application. The site in question is a wildlife corridor & is adjacent to the nationally significant Billinudgel Nature reserve. This reserve has peat underground & has smoldered for months at a time in the past. The festival site is flood prone & could see the drunken, drugged out festival patrons lives put at risk. The thought of having up to 50,000 patrons per day on this site is unthinkable - that's almost twice the population of our entire shire. The peace & quiet that local residents have chosen to live here to enjoy would be destroyed & of course holiday letting would occur with all night parties further destroying our lifestyle. The volume of traffic would see us locals grid locked in our own suburbs. I am a retired pensioner & have no problem with young people having fun at festivals but this is not the right place for a mega festival or any festival for that matter. Please do not allow this atrocity to occur, wildlife need habitat & people need to feel safe in their own homes & that their voices are being heard not just ignored so money can be made by a few disgustingly rich, greedy individuals. P4346	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Leah McCosh (support)	We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it seems to make sense to me to approve it. Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer? One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive.

P4349	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Mick Duck of ISV (support)	More then anything Splendour In The Grass keeps local Byron Shire businesses a float during the slower months in winter. Often business rely on the number of tourists passing through town for the short few days each year during this and other potential festivals that it would be a shame for Byron Shire to miss out on an opportunity like this Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a "resource centre"™ where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say.

P4350	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Michael Sales (support)	In relation to environmental management one of the biggest impacts on fauna in this region is dogs. It is pleasing to note that the environmental, health and safety management manual strictly prohibits dogs from entering the site. Just this on initiative will help to reduce pressure on the environment, not to mention the host of other excellent environmental programs they have documented.

Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, "I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a communityâ™. (Donna Sue Sanders â Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

P4351	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from ben mccorquodale of Totaltravel (support)

At present the North Byron Parklands site is subject to significant sediment and erosion issues. Previous land practices have seen poor top soil removal and impacts on graded lands. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address these existing soil impacts and also has put in place a sediment and erosion control plan during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended.

Young people living on the north coast have a tough time finding employment, and particularly jobs that are of interest to them. The Parklands proposal will provide hundreds of jobs for people in our area and this represents a huge plus for a lot of kids.

There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses. For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

I love Splendour it embodies the free spirit of love and acceptance of all people. That is the true essence of Byron

P4352	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Luke Jamesion (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp. All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector. Splendour was born in Byron and continues to reflect the cultural and environmental attitudes of the region. Please let it come home. P4353	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ian Carlyon (support)	North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved. We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal. P4354	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Adrian MISON (support)	In a coastal region such as the Byron and Tweed areas tourism businesses are the financial lifeblood for so many people. Ensuring we attract businesses such as North Byron Parklands who will be responsible for bringing significant numbers of visitors to the region is vital if we are to maintain the viability of this critical sector. Government agencies should be approving projects of this nature. Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â“ young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

With such high unemployment rates in the Northern Rivers I am sure that the government is aware just how important it is to approve such a project as North Byron Parklands. I know many young people who would love the change to work on such a project. The government needs to take into account the generation of employment this proposal will create.

The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers average annual income is aprox. $55,000 compared to NSWâ€™s average annual income of $71,000. Bringing Splendour home to Byron Bay to the North Byron Parklands site would open up many opportunities of employment to a community in real need. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning. With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management. P4357	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Cameron Milne (support)	The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

Until very recently NSW has had a less than enviable employment track record mainly due to the global financial crisis. While it looks like the state is on the mend we still need to ensure that projects like North Byron Parklands are given the green light because of the large number of regional jobs it will provide.

Byron Bay is one of the most beautiful areas in Australia, and to be able to celebrate 3 days of amazing music in such a splendid and natural atmosphere is priceless.

Please bring Splendour back to Byron Bay!!

Yours sincerely,

The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

Let's look at the environmental initiatives that the North Byron Parklands people are proposing. Environmental auditing, sediment and erosion control, fencing to keep people in cleared areas, buffer zones to forests, inductions for workers, wildlife rescue teams during events, traffic control, no dogs, etc. The list of requirements they have placed on event operators is substantial and will result in a well protected environment.

P4359	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Justin Long (support)	Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward. The employment size of businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire reflects that the majority of businesses within the Byron Shire (60%) and the Northern Rivers Region (62%) are non-employing. The majority of these businesses are sole operators and the region needs organisationâs like North Byron Parklands to provide much needed jobs. If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably. Letâs get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, letâs get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people. Byron Bay is, and always will be, the true home of splendour and where it should be held. It's such a unique location and it was the whole experience of being in Byron that made the

P4360	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Emma Clisby of MAD Design (support)

To Whom this May Concern,

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

I myself work within the Events industry in marketing and advertising and have affiliations within the tourism, and hospitality sectors. I have attended the last 2 years of Splendour in the Grass and it is very obvious the value it brings the local communities in the areas it visits. With the recent global recession hitting small business hard in all areas, i can only imagine how significant this impact was on businesses within the Byron Shire that had come to depend on the Splendour weekend as well as the infrastructure that has been implemented due to these large events that are held in Byron. Within a significant event like Splendour in the Grass being held in the Byron Shire as part of their Events calendar, there is a serious gap in tourism revenue and visitors to the area and a low peak time of year which affects all community members.

Letâ€™s get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, letâ€™s get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people.

Yours Sincerley

P4362	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Amanda McNamee of QUT (support)	The potential adverse impact of the Parklands usage on flora and fauna has been largely mitigated by virtue of the event site occupying only existing grassland areas of the site and avoiding vegetated parts of the site. Further, the significant increase in habitat afforded by the additional 11.1 ha of revegetation and 48.1 ha of additional plantings also mitigates against adverse impact upon flora and fauna species. The increasing green awareness involved with this event is unique and provides an opportunity to respect the natural environment. North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense. The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment. The festival creates a unique and arguable positive environment for creatives to congruate and appreciate this natural landscape and bring awareness to this beautiful spot. It is also a rare instance for international acts to experience Australian creative scene without the pressures of a single day experience. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. The festival needs a permanent home and will only get bigger and bigger every year. It sells out within minutes of going on sale and will continue to do so as long as the quality of music keeps returning. The festival is the biggest in the country running over three days and has the potential to become Australia's first four day festival matching the large successes found in Europe. It would be significant for the NSW Government and Byron locals to keep it in our state and not have it move to QLD permanently.

P4370	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Melanie Kassey (support)	One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land. Splendour is my favourite festival. Throughout the years of attending they have fantastic ways of benefiting the environment, with recycling points and incentives to help recycle. Not only that by offering each punter camping accommodation it is saving on the travel of people coming to and from the festival. To whom it may concern,

I am an avid festival go-er who has attended Splendour music festival at both the Byron bay and Woodford site and I must admit there are substantial benefits of having this festival in Byron bay.

With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values will be done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. The system is that comprehensive that it has even considered and regulated light spill from potable lighting towers. The proponents should be commended on such an initiative.

Most outdoor events pay little attention to the environment so it is heartening to see an organisation such as North Byron Parklands who have put a considerable effort into developing specific procedures and work instructions designed to protect the environment. These guys even have an environmental incident notification system which will document all issues and the steps taken to resolve them.

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

Thanks for your time,

While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

P4373	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Andrew Churchill of The Baby Seal Club (support)	I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet. Apart from extensive consultation with indigenous groups and various elders the North Byron Parklands group has already established a long history of working with and employing local indigenous bush regeneration teams to plant thousands of trees across their site. This tree planting program has been a great way to involve traditional land owners in helping to restore what is currently quite a degraded site. If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably. P4374	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Dr Manouher Houssaini of Equinox Productions (support)	The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. Music and arts should be embraced in our society because of these jobs that it creates and North Byron Parklands if it is approved is set to be a big employer for the area. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support. All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector. P4375	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Bridget Wall (support)	The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements. As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive. The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone. North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

Byron Shire and the wider northern rivers region has been a fast growing area for the creative industries sector. Huge numbers of people have moved into the region with expectations of finding work in this sector and more than ever there is a need to ensure that projects that directly and indirectly benefit this growing sector are supported. The Parklands proposal if approved will become a dominant force in expanding the creative industries sector and will provide substantial job opportunities.

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parkland's environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

P4378	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Emily McCarl of NCVER (support)	Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project. Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management. North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun. P4379	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from sophie todd (support)	Please please please bring Splendour back to Byron Bay. The HOME of Splendour in the grass!!!!!!The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant. On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives. From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application. P4381	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Joel Robinson (support)	While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all. In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet. In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

P4384	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Sheree Morris (support)	I hope you will consider the following points and bring Splendour in the Grass back to Byron Bay: I attended Splendour in the Grass in Byron Bay in 2009 and it was my best festival experience so far. The measures taken by the organisers to be environmentally friendly were very clear, and I think were also reflected by the attendees. I hope to see Splendour return to Byron Bay, as it allows to travel all the way from home to this beautiful area and experience what it has to offer, as the area attracts me as much as the music experience. One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

Research into the effects of intermittent noise shows that such fauna will usually relocate during such episodes and will return quickly once noise abates. Further the movement of such fauna is entirely dependent on food resources. If there are no fruits and blossoms across the site then the presence of these species will be very low. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas. Positive environmental outcomes are important for any development and one very important outcome offered by the North Byron Parklands proponents is to apply a vegetation management plan across the entire site. Under this plan sections of the site will be restored back to pristine forest cover while others will be treated as managed parklands. Under this treatment very large areas will be planted with low density native trees that will provide connection points for fauna to avoid large pastoral areas and reduce the likelihood of predation during movement across the site. They are not required by law to do this, but do see it as an important environmental outcome.

NSW Department of Planning,

I wish to express my full support for the proposed North Byron Parklands proposal. The proposal represent an opportunity to establish a world class site, in a highly appropriate location, of which seeks to preserve and enhance on-site and surrounding ecological / environmental values.

It appears from review of relevant technical documentation / reports, that the issues identified in relation to the proposal have been addressed to the standard required by the NSW Government. This includes issues in relation to traffic / transport, operation hours / times / days, noise / surrounding residential amenity, ecological and environmental values. This alone is grounds for Approval.

As a regular visitor to the Byron Shire, with numerous friends living in the town and in the local area, I know there is a high level of support within the community - clearly a lot more support than any opposition.

Such sites and events are integral to an inclusive and creative community / society, of which are highly beneficial to both the local area, region and state (economy, job creation, environmental benefits, creative industries, flow-on effects with regard to infrastructure, tourism, etc, etc, etc). There is no better location to establish such a site / venue, particularly given its proximity to local centres, services, transport, etc. The proposal is a massive draw card for the state, allowing them to showcase why it is one of the most beautiful locations in the world.

The benefits of the proposal clearly outweigh any perceived impacts and it is the NSW Department of Planning's responsibility to ensure that sites like this are established to ensure the preservation of cultural exchange, an inclusive and diverse social fabric, environmental values, prosperous community and values, etc.

Dear NSW Planning Official,

Byron Bay has always been a hub of the arts, and the majority of people who currently live there moved to the area because of the appeal that this creative vibe carries. To stop Splendour from functioning in Byron denies the very character of the place, and opposition to making Splendour permanent in Byron Shire is hypocritical. Everyone deserves the chance to partake of and celebrate this culture.

The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view.

At the moment the average household income per year in the Byron shire and the Northern Rivers is much lower than the rest of NSW. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers average annual income is aprox. $55,000 compared to NSW's average annual income of $71,000. Bringing Splendour home to Byron Bay to the North Byron Parklands site would open up many opportunities of employment to a community in real need.

Please don't allow the minority of offended residents of Byron Shire to block this great event.

Thousands of non-local people love it and love Byron for it, and it is good for the Byron community as well.

Thanks.

P4391	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kris Racette (support)	Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account.

P4392	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ryan Middleton of Vipac (support)	It is a matter of seeing the opportunities for positive environmental outcomes in what are presently unexpected places. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. Those in the position to bring about such change should be encouraged, not demonised. We have heard it many times before that living in a community which has locally based jobs provides for a health and sustainable society. Jobs in the north of New South Wales are hard to come by at the best of times so when a project comes along which will create new jobs for people it is important to support it. That is a key reason why I support the approval of the North Byron Parklands project. The culture of Byron Bay is fantastic and eye opening. This proposal will share our culture with all. It impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment? If we consider the important contributions to the region made by tourism such as income generation and the creation of jobs then it follows that approving projects that have a large positive effect on increasing tourism rates will be a good thing for the State of NSW. To whom it may concern,

Australia, generally speaking has been lucky in terms of its overall unemployment rate, however in the northern rivers the rate is much higher. Regions such as this need employers across a range of industries not just retail and tourism. I am sure that North Byron Parklands will become a major employer in the region if the project is approved.

The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal.

The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment.

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to you to support the return of Splendor in the Grass to Byron Bay.

The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements.

If you look at the multitude of government regional growth forecasts for areas such as the northern rivers it is plain to see that with a rapidly expanding population there is a strong need for a diverse and stable employment base. Jobs will be critical to the longer term sustainability of the region and therefore when projects such as North Byron Parklands come along they should be embraced and assisted by state and local governments.

From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application.

Making new friends, learning new activities, attending new and exciting events, a place where we are all welcome and safe. Bring on North Byron Parklands.

Splendor in the Grass has always displayed an environmentally friendly message as well as practices. So there is no doubt in my mind that if given permission to make it's home at the location in Byron bay Splendor would do all possible to ensure that the environment stays unharmed during the festivities.

Kind Regards,

The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process.

Most of the jobs on the North Coast rely on industries such as tourism and retail trade. To help expand the employment base there is a strong need to nurture an array of other industries such as artistic and creative industries. North Byron Parklands is a project that will greatly assist in providing a diversity in job prospects and on this basis should be actively supported by government and the wider community.

Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a "resource centre"™ where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say.

P4397	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Phoebe Greening (support)	The Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities. Recent statistics provided by the Australian Bureau of Statistics indicate that the majority of business owners in the shire and the northern rivers area do not employ people, rather these businesses are operated by self employed people. As such it is obvious that other larger organisations and businesses are required to employ people in much need of job opportunities. North Byron Parklands is one such organisation proposing to generate up to 200 full time equivalent positions. Such a project is extremely important to this area. There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses. One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature.

This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

I support Splendour moving back to the Byron Shire. It's a large site and it is unlikely that there is another events venue that has the level of environmental management systems in place as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. Based on ISO14001 the environmental policies and procedures to be implemented at this venue will provide robust monitoring and mitigation measures to ensure that fauna and flora is protected. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative.

In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area.

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

While there are a number of identified threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, all of these creatures are winged species such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of intermittent noise shows that such fauna will usually relocate during such episodes and will return quickly once noise abates. Further the movement of such fauna is entirely dependent on food resources. If there are no fruits and blossoms across the site then the presence of these species will be very low.

Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project.

In the Byron and northern rivers areas tourism is subject to busy times and quiet times. It is planned that a number of events will occur at the North Byron Parklands site each year and one of these takes place in winter when tourism businesses are struggling to cover costs. Building a dedicated events venue in the Byron Shire will have a number of very positive benefits for the tourism industry which is a good thing.

People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. The North Byron Parklands is the very thing that our locals would love.

It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

I personally have attended all splendour festivals and was employed at the last 5.

As a 40 year old local, whose children accompany me, I can only hope that it gets the go ahead as without this winter festival much business is missed out on in this town during the cold months of winter.

P4402	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Geraldine Williams (support)	While much is made about the supposed wildlife corridor in and around the North Byron Parklands site the fact is that much of the vegetation is patchy and degraded. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue.

In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

Tourism is a massive income generating activity for Byron Shire and the northern rivers region. The Parklands proposal will bring tens of thousands of people to the area, all of whom will need accommodation and food. It is so important that this project be approved because the positive economic impacts are so significant.

While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

In NSW and particularly regional areas such as Byron and the wider northern rivers area securing a job is becoming very difficult. While other states prosper, NSW has fallen behind and the people are the ones suffering. The NSW Government needs to approve projects such as North Byron Parklands because it will create employment and this in turn is good for our state economy.

Byron Bay is widely known for pushing the barrier and making things possible. We as a town have so much to offer and this new proposal will put us on the map so to speak. It's a fantastic opportunity for us all.

North

Byron Parklands will be responsible for drawing thousands of intra and interstate visitors, most of whom will require accommodation, food and beverages and in many instances will actively pursue some form of paying leisure activity. To let such an opportunity pass the region by would be a crime.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

P4408	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nicole Dardemann (support)	Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy. P4409	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rebecca Drake (support)	The North Byron Parklands project has undertaken both a high level of fauna and flora assessments and a comprehensive environmental risk assessment process. As a result they have developed a management manual that covers a range of aspects including the environment. They have even developed a standalone environmental induction form for all staff and contractors that clearly stipulates what can and cannot take place while on site. These measures are very impressive indeed. Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, ?I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a community?. (Donna Sue Sanders ? Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

If employment growth in regional areas is a key concern of the NSW state government then approving this project makes sound economic sense. There is a real need to support organisations that can provide such large numbers of jobs in an area where finding a good job can be very difficult. It seems to me that approving this project will have lasting long term benefits for job prospectors in this rural region.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only every using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

Splendour in the Grass is an absolutely fantastic event with major credit going towards the organisers. I'm sure that through negotiation that all parties will be able to collaborate alternative solutions to enable a positive outcome for all parties involved rather than just trying to tie down organisers with bureaucratic power.

P4413	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Oliver Sewell of Bounce Media Group (support)	The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. North Byron Parklands would help provide employment for many of these young people, thus giving them a reason to stay in the area. The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast. We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it seems to make sense to me to approve it. My son is very keen to apply to North Byron Parklands for work. I would much rather have him work on this project here than lose him to the city. Please approve this proposal, it's important for our young people and our community.

P4415	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Bre Doyle of Austereo (support)	With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs.

It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region.

P4416	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lincoln Parkinson (support)	We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal. North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it. Young people living on the north coast have a tough time finding employment, and particularly jobs that are of interest to them. P4417	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Damon Kambouris (support)	The level of detail undertaken in the identification and assessment of likely impacts on fauna and flora across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site is impressive. There is unlikely to be many (if any) other types of development north coast that have gone to this level of detail and thoroughness. The commitments listed to preserve and enhance the ecology certainly help to put this development into the 'sustainable' development basket. With such high unemployment rates in the Northern Rivers I am sure that the government is aware just how important it is to approve such a project as North Byron Parklands. I know many young people who would love the change to work on such a project. The government needs to take into account the generation of employment this proposal will create. North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. Future plantings and assisted regeneration in these areas will significantly increase opportunities for movement of terrestrial fauna. P4421	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from caitlin mcmahon (support)	The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes. North Byron Parklands already has demonstrated its commitment to working with local indigenous people through the ongoing relationship it has developed with the Madhima Gulgan rainforest regeneration team. Together these two groups have been responsible for planting over 7,000 native trees across the site and the construction and placement of more than 25 nest boxes for resident fauna.

P4423	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Akushla Levett (support)	From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive. Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing. While much is made of the Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

With so many people moving into capital cities the government needs to ensure that regional employment opportunities are secured whenever they are offered. Parklands have a project that will provide plenty of jobs for a range of people and it is super important that they jobs stay in our area.

If we consider the important contributions to the region made by tourism such as income generation and the creation of jobs then it follows that approving projects that have a large positive effect on increasing tourism rates will be a good thing for the State of NSW. North Byron Parklands will be responsible for drawing thousands of intra and interstate visitors, most of whom will require accommodation, food and beverages and in many instances will actively pursue some form of paying leisure activity. To let such an opportunity pass the region by would be a crime.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

We have heard it many times before that living in a community which has locally based jobs provides for a health and sustainable society. Jobs in the north of New South Wales are hard to come by at the best of times so when a project comes along which will create new jobs for people it is important to support it. That is a key reason why I support the approval of the North Byron Parklands project.

I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This as far as I understand is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported.

P4426	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from jeremy hill of roadways (support)	Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward.

In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire.

Currently many things are conspiring against the tourism industry, particularly the very strong Australian dollar. Enticing domestic travellers to holiday in Australia rather than abroad is a huge challenge for the tourism sector. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along that proposes to attract 35,000 people per event to a region such as the North Coast of NSW, this must be given serious consideration by approving authorities. Add to the fact that a number of these large events will eventually occur each year, the economic and tourism benefits are substantial.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. This development would create jobs for locals and beyond. I visit Byron almost every year for the Blues Festival which is an extraordinary event of world class standard. I was fortunate enough the last two years, to be able to secure tickets to Splendour as well. The line up has been excellent - again world class - and tickets are hard to come by - the site is too small for the demand. The fact that it was held in beautiful Byron Bay was a huge added reason for going. I am in my 30s and a group of professional 'over 30' music lovers get together to come to these events. We bring disposable income to the area when we visit and meet so many other 'professional adults' who are also music lovers, who love coming to Byron and who do the same thing. Woodford was good. But we missed Byron! And part of the charm of this amazing town is that it embraces, welcomes and encourages the creative arts. Splendour is traditionally a young crowd, but they will grow up! And they will come back with their families and their disposable income to the place where they fondly remember so many happy times.

I, like many other Sydneysiders, often state that we would like to 'retire to Byron'. I would never have discovered the area if it were not for a Festival. So I consider it an investment in my future home to let this go ahead.

The above said, it is hugely important that Byron remains the small, creative, alternative town which it is so charmed to be so far. However, with the assurances of the organisers to uphold ecological promises, provide down time in many months of the year and invest in the site, it seems to us, that you should be approving the proposal.

Submission 20/10/2010 Online Submission from Lucy
Cousins (support)

In relation to employment and wages the Byron local government area has one of the State's lowest average wages, around $31,000 per annum. A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities to the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities.

From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application.

We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal.

P4429	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Colleen Lewis (support)	PLEASE BRING SPLENDOUR BACK TO BYRON!!! This year was my first time at Splendour. I had an absolute ball. Even though I live closer to Woodford, I think Byron is the better venue. Woodford has very little accommodation available for those who don't want to or can't camp. And dropping off and picking up was a nightmare. But I LOVED the music!!! I can't wait for Splendour next year AT BYRON! It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged. At the moment the average household income per year in the Byron shire and the Northern Rivers is much lower than the rest of NSW. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers average annual income is aprox. $55,000 compared to NSWâ€™s average annual income of $71,000. Bringing Splendour home to Byron Bay to the North Byron Parklands site would open up many opportunities of employment to a community in real need. The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understorey of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understorey to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures. I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

Having read the North Byron Parklands submission and attended many events over the past number of years I am blown away by the level of detail and the huge range of control measures that this development offers to ensure smooth and successful events. The North Coast of NSW needs a development of this nature and it should be approved by the NSW government.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

P4431	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jamie Fitzgerald (support)	It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being BRING SPLENDOUR HOME! As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive.

We really need this to get the go ahead. My friends and I will go to events at North Byron Parklands. Hopefully we will be able to get jobs at events.

I come from the Byron Shire and have been attending the festival for the past 7 years. Byron Bay is where it belongs! it brings the community together! helps the economy and it's the funnest event of the year! Byron lives and breaths for Splendour. It was fun at Woodford but it took away the true essence of Splendour! as its true home in Byron Shire! pleaseeeeeee dont take it from us.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable.

P4433	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from alois yates (support)	Splendor- an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.

Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events.

And yes, in concerns for wildlife. It is true there are a number of threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of irregular noise to such species shows that they will usually relocate and return quickly once noise ceases. This a positive result for all parties and it is good to know the species will not be disturbed some 260 days of the year.

Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area.

I have personally been apart of 5 Splendor filled years. It is the most inspirational festival out there. It is all about safety, fun and coming together as one. Throughout the festival there are so many causes on display bringing awareness of environmental, social and wildlife issues to the youth. The Splendor team have never let me or my friends down, it supports all aspects of the arts and provides just a few days of any other culture where everyone are friends- there are no foes. I believe to lose such an iconic event when it holds so much positive feedback would be tragic and a folly.

Sincerely,

Alois Yates.

P4434	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Amie Goodall of Architecture Graduate (support)	Having attended Splendour in the Grass in both 2009/2010 and also Bluesfest that was also held in the area. I would like to express my extensive support for this particular festival as one of Australia's biggest cultural music festivals and hoping for the return back to Byron in 2011 to the North Byron Parklands.

Byron Bay is a renowned holiday spot and tourist getaway within Australian local communities. This small yet vibrant area, as it has done in the past, has allowed such events to take place and as a result the economy has strengthened inevitably during those times.

Music and culture have strong ties to the Bryon Bay region and residents from all over Australia come to celebrate the livelihood of their favourite bands and making new friends along the way each calendar year. Not only does Splendour promote music and culture with the finest acts and activities but provides the stepping stones for young, upcoming Australian artists within the music industry, feeding a positive cause.

With respect to nature and the preservation of the Parklands, 20 days on a 365 day scale barely compares as the flora and fauna would have time to generate and flourish almost year round (events would be scattered also not posing permanent damage to site).

Allowing the proposal to go ahead would not only produce a steady flow of tourism which would boost the local community but it give Byron Bay exposure on a world scale and broaden prospects for the future within the area. Bring Splendour back to Byron for 2011.

P4436	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Emma Shields (support)	Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed. With so many people moving into capital cities the government needs to ensure that regional employment opportunities are secured whenever they are offered. Parklands have a project that will provide plenty of jobs for a range of people and it is super important that they jobs stay in our area. P4439	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Genevieve Macfadyen of TIA Legal Group (support)	Dear NSW Department of Planning As a youth of Australia, until recently a resident of Byron Shire, a musical fanatic, and a 7 year veteran of Splendour in the Grass I can honestly say that this festival is the only thing that the isolated kids of byron and its neighbouring towns/villages have that stops them from going completely mental. This was my only salvation for the 7 years, my christmas, birthday and easter was Splendour In The Grass and seeing it taken from byron was like seeing the heart being ripped out of a king and left there to die. I have slept all night outside the Great Northern Hotel to get a ticket, i have sold my only surfboard and sat awake for hours anticipating the release of the tickets. Please understand how much this means to my hometown and the kids in Byron. Please do not let us remain heartless and try to get by on the blues and roots festival, its like a heroine addict surviving on methadone, like an original muscle car being converted to be a eco-friendly electrical vechicle, it works but its the worst kind of living. I implore you members of the NSW planning department listen to the words of the splendour veterans for they are the ones who suffer most and BRING SPLENDOUR HOME!.

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

There's not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

Under the North Byron Parklands environmental management manual there is a particular Environmental Standard that requires events being held on the site to adhere to a number of stringent environmental controls. The controls include buffer zones, environmental inductions, fencing aspects, wildlife rescue teams and lighting requirement to reduce illumination of bush blocks. I am unaware of any other outdoor event venue requiring such tight environmental controls. Parklands will certainly be moving towards Australian best practice, if not worldâ€™s best environmental practice.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parklandâ€™s environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

Not only have the North Byron Parklands organisation developed what must be considered world's best practice environmental management systems and processes, they are also planning to have an environmental education program folded into the mix for good measure. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure.

So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account.

The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. North Byron Parklands can be a showcase for our local talents.

With respect to the environment one of the risks that the people from North Byron Parklands have identified is the potential for road kill associated with traffic movements before, during and after an event. As such they have implemented a number of requirements including on site environmental inductions, speed limiting devices, signage and a wildlife rescue team. This is just one example of the sound environmental practices they are proposing.

Employment opportunities are getting harder and harder for many people in rural areas to find. With so many industries moving out of rural areas we need to encourage those businesses that want to set up in these regions with as much help as possible. I understand that North Byron Parklands will provide a large number of jobs across a very broad range skill sets. Projects of this nature should be approved on this basis alone.

North Byron Parklands have undertaken a detailed economic impact assessment which bodes well for the tourism industry should it be approved. Projections show that tens of thousands of people will visit the area each year and this influx of people will significantly bolster our tourism businesses. With so many locals relying on the tourism industry for their income, such a project is very welcome.

The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment.

In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

To whom it may concern,

I have been to the Byron Splendour in the Grass for many years, and now the Woodfordia Splendour last year, and I must admit, the Wordfordia Splendour was bloody well organised.

Byron Splendour began as a mystical event with the local artistic community behind it and the venue and access to accommodation and spirit of the locals trully 'Byron'. We used to go down stay in houses, camp on-site, stay at the golf club, or units by the beach.

Towards the end though, a group of anti-festival people, really started to inhibit the success of the event. Accommodation prices were criminal and if you were left without accommodation and slept in your vehicle you were definitely treated like one.

Byron Shires approach to tourists has deteriorated to the point where it charges people heinous amounts for not parking rear in, and stops festivals that bring in millions of dollars.

And these are the same people who make an indirect income from the event.

The woodford event brought back SPLENDOUR for me. It returned it to its original MULTI-DAY camping/living COMMUNITY FOR 3 DAYS. Splendour is about immersing yourself in a festival for multiple days, and experiencing/respecting the natural environment.

Be it on Byron's Beaches and Green Spaces, or in Woodfordia's Natural Amphitheatres and unbelievable outlook to the Glass House mountains, I am sure the punters will decide with the speed of ticket purchase and where they spend their money.

WOODFORDIA is winning by a land slide margin at the moment.

Regards,

Very long time Splendour Fan.

P4447	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Carly Clutterbuck of Interlock (support)	There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals. The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger. This will provide an ecologically responsible place where people can get together and enjoy the beauty that Byron Bay has to offer. We've had many a good time at Splendour and while Woodfordia would certainly be more accessible for us (up in Brisvegas), Bryon is the festivals' rightful home. P4448	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Deborah Brooks (support)

Our environment, events, culture and celebration is an amazing reason to go ahead with this proposal.

If we consider the important contributions to the region made by tourism such as income generation and the creation of jobs then it follows that approving projects that have a large positive effect on increasing tourism rates will be a good thing for the State of NSW. North Byron Parklands will be responsible for drawing thousands of intra and interstate visitors, most of whom will require accommodation, food and beverages and in many instances will actively pursue some form of paying leisure activity. To let such an opportunity pass the region by would be a crime.

North Byron Parklands is a great location with visitors being spread around the area, not just concentrated on the Byron Bay town centre.

P4449	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Andrew Splatt (support)	One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land. North Byron Parklands is all about hosting lots of different events, all of which require people to work in a variety of jobs. One event can employ hundreds of people for a period of time and in an area such as Byron such job opportunities are very welcome. We should be doing all we can to make this project happen. Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

P4450	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Andrew Farrington (support)	Byron and the surrounding areas relies substantially on a range of small businesses and cottage industries to employ the people that live in this community. There are not many large employers such as what North Byron Parklands would become should it be approved. I think we need to approve and support these types of projects in regional areas to ensure there are enough job choices available to people.

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

The North Byron Parklands people have obviously spent a lot of time developing up systems and processes to manage the environment in which they operate. It is impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment?

The employment size of businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire reflects that the majority of businesses within the Byron Shire (60%) and the Northern Rivers Region (62%) are non-employing. The majority of these businesses are sole operators and the region needs organisations like North Byron Parklands to provide much needed jobs.

Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc.

In the northern rivers area more and more people have been moving into the creative industries sector because of the interesting and fulfilling work that can be undertaken. There is a very real need to continue growing this sector to provide people with more job opportunities. North Byron Parklands is a proposal that will truly make a big impact in job availability in the region and will be a very positive economic force.

Having read the North Byron Parklands submission and attended many events over the past number of years I am blown away by the level of detail and the huge range of control measures that this development offers to ensure smooth and successful events. The North Coast of NSW needs a development of this nature and it should be approved by the NSW government.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regions' economies. The proposed North Byron Parklands project will result in a massive increase in the number of domestic visitors to the area and to a lesser degree, will also attract many overseas visitors. As this industry is so important to the region it makes good sense for this project to proceed.

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management. All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. The events management industry is extremely competitive and only those operators who can demonstrate compliance with all facets of event management time and time again are the ones that survive. The owners of North Byron Parklands each have years of experience in bringing highly successful events to the general public. Such an outstanding track record only comes about through effective, well planned event policies and procedures.

Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. Splendour needs a home, somewhere to call its own. P4462	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Donna Burgess (support)	It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged. In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire.

This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities. With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. ear NSW Department of Planning,

It is of my opinion that the Splendour in the Grass event should be relocated back to its origins, within Byron Bay and NSW.

The below reasons are examples of how and why it would benefit the area, although there are plenty more unmentioned reasons that could be added. Please consider the matter with the utmost care, through a sociological, environmental and economical perspective.

If you were to analysis the professional event management of such festivals as Splendour in the Grass, Parklife, Shore Thing and Sunset Suns one could only come to the conclusion that these event operators are up there with the most successful an well managed events in Australia. Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way.

North Byron Parklands organisation are serious about managing the ecological issues at the event site. An example of this is the fact that there have been more vegetation and flora surveys conducted at the site than housing, industrial estate, and quarries assessments.

Finally, So many people in the northern rivers area rely on the tourism industry for their bread and butter. These days most businesses are geared towards the tourism dollar and if past trends are anything to go by this industry sector will continue to play a key role in the region?s economic fortunes. The people behind Parklands will play a dominant role in growing and sustaining the tourism industry and we should all get behind them to make this project a reality.

I hope in your consideration of holding the even both the (minimal) environmental and (significant) economic impacts are weighed into the decision.

Yours Sincerely,

Nicholas Busst

NSW Department of Planning,

Re: Application for a permanent home for Splendour.

North Byron Parklands is the perfect place for the Splendour festival... for many reasons....

Tourism is a massive income generating activity for Byron Shire and the northern rivers region. The Parklands proposal will bring tens of thousands of people to the area, all of whom will need accommodation and food. It is so important that this project be approved because the positive economic impacts are so significant.

This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

Kind Regards,

Ashley Spermon

P4467	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stephen Le Poidevin (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp. The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger. Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area. Imagine an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.Â Â Â Â Â

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire.

Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

P4470	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from nATHAN mOATE of Lewis engineering (support)	From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application. Let?s get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, let?s get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people. If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

P4471	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Matilda Sinclair (support)	Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed. Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It's up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people. P4473	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Scott Roberts (support)	With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas. With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management. Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal.

P4474	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Elise Huntley of Icon Associates (support)	The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesnâ€™t proceed then itâ€™s likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklandsâ€™ group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity. In NSW and particularly regional areas such as Byron and the wider northern rivers area securing a job is becoming very difficulty. While other states prosper, NSW has fallen behind and the people are the ones suffering. The NSW Government needs to approval projects such as North Byron Parklands because it will create employment and this in turn is good for our state economy. A place where people can get together and enjoy the beauty that Byron Bay has to offer. The Byron region can market itself as a hub for events and creativity if this proposal is approved. They would be very fortunate indeed to have the training and skills benefits of such a proposal.

The commercial benefit provided to a local community as a result of having these events in its region can only be viewed as a positive injection. This can be shared throughout the local community, and the benefits continue throughout the year, not just only whilst the event is active.

The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning.

North Byron Parklands already has demonstrated its commitment to working with local indigenous people through the ongoing relationship it has developed with the Madhima Gulgan rainforest regeneration team. Together these two groups have been responsible for planting over 7,000 native trees across the site and the construction and placement of more than 25 nest boxes for resident fauna.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

Projections show that tens of thousands of people will visit the area each year and this influx of people will significantly bolster our tourism businesses. With so many locals relying on the tourism industry for their income, such a project is very welcome. The site in question if not used for a sustainable cultural arts and event venue may end up being used by whoever buys it in a manner that would place greater pressure on the environment. Here we have an opportunity to hold a low impact activity that will see the land rested for some 75% of the year. Allowing such large rest times will benefit both fauna and flora across and adjacent to the site. This is a very positive outcome. I know of many businesses that rely on events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region.

P4480	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stephanie Lam of Warner Bros International Television (support)	The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment.

Much of the agricultural and forestry industries of the northern rivers has significantly declined over the past decade and many people have been forced into lower paid sectors such as retail and tourism. Now more than ever there is a need for diversifying the employment base and the North Byron Parklands proposal will do exactly that. With job positions projected to be more than 200 there is a very real need to approve such a project.

P4481	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Cassie Petty (support)	Splendour in the Grass belongs at Byron. It has been apart of Byron for nearly 10 years. I have been to many splendour festivals in Byron and the locals have been very supportive of the festival and enjoy the amount of people it brings to Byron as they benefit from it within their local businesses. Huge numbers of people have moved into the region with expectations of finding work in this sector and more than ever there is a need to ensure that projects that directly and indirectly benefit this growing sector are supported. The Parklands proposal if approved will become a dominant force in expanding the creative industries sector and will provide substantial job opportunities. The local area containing the Parklands site has an ancient meeting place for Aboriginal people to come to together for cultural purposes. The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people. I believe by not letting Splendour continue to be at Byron Bay, alot of people will suffer. Whether it be that they rely on Splendour to bring in business for them or whether it be the community relies on it for tourism reasons (which is still business related), the town will suffer without the support and the amount of people Splendour will bring to the town. To Whom it May Concern,

The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements.

As someone who has enjoyed many Splendour Festivals, and who is well on their way to becoming an Environmental Scientist, you would be hard pressed to find an organisation more willing, and more capable of contributing to the beautiful Byron Bay surrounds. The people behind North Byron Parklands are professional event operators with decades of combined experience in hosting successful events. Having sold millions of tickets to the dozens of events they have held, it is extremely beneficial that such experienced personnel will be available to guide and manage events proposed for North Byron Parklands.

So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account.

Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

With respect to the environment one of the risks that the people from North Byron Parklands have identified is the potential for road kill associated with traffic movements before, during and after an event. As such they have implemented a number of requirements including on site environmental inductions, speed limiting devices, signage and a wildlife rescue team. This is just one example of the sound environmental practices they are proposing.

lets keep Splendour in Byron, its ace!

P4485	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Hannah Marchesi of student (support)	It is pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events.

With such high unemployment rates in the Northern Rivers I am sure that the government is aware just how important it is to approve such a project as North Byron Parklands. I know many young people who would love the change to work on such a project. The government needs to take into account the generation of employment this proposal will create.

These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

P4487	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Emma Turner (support)	It is a matter of seeing the opportunities for positive environmental outcomes in what are presently unexpected places. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. Those in the position to bring about such change should be encouraged, not demonised. With so many people worried about finding a job in this current economic climate a project of this nature in a regional area is a breath of fresh air. As a community we need to get behind this fantastic concept and support it. As a government, there is a huge moral responsibility to approve it just on employment considerations alone. I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This as far as I understand is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported.

Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It's up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people.

P4488	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Krystal Swansborough (support)	The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment. P4489	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Cheree Ridder of universal music (support)	Positive environmental outcomes are important for any development and one very important outcome offered by the North Byron Parklands proponents is to apply a vegetation management plan across the entire site. Under this plan sections of the site will be restored back to pristine forest cover while others will be treated as managed parklands. Under this treatment very large areas will be planted with low density native trees that will provide connection points for fauna to avoid large pastoral areas and reduce the likelihood of predation during movement across the site. They are not required by law to do this, but do see it as an important environmental outcome.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

The current population of the Northern Rivers is approximately 294,000 people, and is anticipated to increase to approximately 376,000 people by 2036. Such an increase in population requires a suite of stable employers. North Byron Parklands can play a significant role in providing jobs to people in this region.

P4490	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Darren Clark of Webling (support)	Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project. The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. P4491	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nina Duric of Surveillance Creative (support)	One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land. Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged. As Splendours backers say: The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment. I Iso agree that from an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive. kind regards, Guy Healy

As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas. The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands. I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved. We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal. What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? The North Byron Parkland proposal sounds very beneficial to our youth, elderly and families. A fantastic way for our society to be brought together.

While some states can fall back on the mining industry, NSW has to rely on a variety of industry sectors to help fund the expansion of the state. Opportunities for employment such as that being offered by the North Byron Parklands proposal is vital to the sustainability of regional areas.

With Splendour being one of if not the biggest festivals in australia it is going to help Byron inject massive dollars from tourism for the week of Splendour which would be great for the businesses there especially with the AUD so strong at the moment slowing tourists from visiting our country.

North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, â" I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a communityâ™. (Donna Sue Sanders â Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported.

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

North Byron Parklands already has demonstrated its commitment to working with local indigenous people through the ongoing relationship it has developed with the Madhima Gulgan rainforest regeneration team. Together these two groups have been responsible for planting over 7,000 native trees across the site and the construction and placement of more than 25 nest boxes for resident fauna.

North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. P4500	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Melissa Fornasari (support)	The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesn't proceed then it's likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklands group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity. The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast. While much is made of the Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

There is currently approximately 294,00 people living on the Northern Rivers and this number is said to increase to approximately 376,000 residents by 2036. This huge increase in the next 26 years requires action to create employment opportunities in the region. North Byron Parklands can offer an array of employment opportunities in the future to tackle this population increase.

Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

P4503	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from romney rayner (support)	The local area containing the Parklands site has an ancient meeting place for Aboriginal people to come to together for cultural purposes. The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people. The average annual household income in the Byron Shire and the Northern Rivers is substantially lower than NSW (approximately $55,000 compared with $71,000) and as such employment opportunities generated by North Byron Parklands would be incredibly valuable to the Shire and the region.

One of the strengths of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the flow on benefits it will provide to the tourism industry. Still picking itself up after the recent financial crisis the tourism industry stands to be the big winner from this proposal. With massive visitor generating capacity this proposal will singlehandedly attract hundreds of thousands of people to the region, all of whom need accommodation and other services once they arrive.

A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure.

The various Aboriginal clans in and around the proposed North Byron Parklands site have had a long history in this area and for this reason the Parklands people have spent a lot of time consulting indigenous groups and organisations to work out how best to assess the site for significance. This process was done in a cooperative framework with the results that potential sites of significance will be protected through fencing and other means. The archaeological report does not identify any aspects of the project that will have a negative impact on important cultural artefacts or values.

P4505	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lindsay Varvari (support)	I am writing to express my support of Splendour's move to the North Byron Parklands. I have attended the festival several times, including at Woodfordia this year, and believe that Byron is a far superior location for the event. Having also attended several large music festivals in Europe, I think it is important for Australia to have the facilities that will allow us to be a regular on the world festival circuit. The list of events that each of the owners of North Byron Parklands have held over the past ten years is absolutely staggering in terms of venues, numbers of patrons and dealing successfully with a range of regulatory authorities. Such experience will provide a significant edge when events are held at North Byron Parklands and will no doubt make for a succession of successful events. I wish to be informed about the progress of this submission. P4506	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kathleen Hore (support)	To Whom It May Concern. I have many friends and family who live in the Byron Shire and Norther River Region, and I plan to relocate to there in the coming years. I am very supportive of the Cultural Events Site proposed. As I am concerned about the amount of people who have the same plan to relocate, versus the amount of jobs available. The employment size of businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire reflects that the majority of businesses within the Byron Shire (60%) and the Northern Rivers Region (62%) are non-employing. The majority of these businesses are sole operators and the region needs organisationâs like North Byron Parklands to provide much needed jobs.

These jobs would be of particular interest to me and my friends, as they would allow us to learn the many facets of professional event management for a sustainable environment.

I also think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me.

I hope to hear good news of the North Byron Parklands going ahead soon.

Sincerely,

Kathleen

P4507	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Dania Lazarus of Social (support)	Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward. 7/2From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application. P4509	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Robbie Ellis of Robbie Ellis Designs (support)	I have been attending Splendour in the grass for the past 7 years and it has been the highlight of the festival circuit by far. Not only does it provide a fantastic outlet for musicians and artists to get together and entertain the masses but allows a safe, hospitable environment for all to enjoy in the beautiful Asutralian Icon, Byron Bay. North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures.

Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, “I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a community”™. (Donna Sue Sanders “ Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged.

Please take this submission as my support to bring Splendour back to Byron.

Thanks for your time,

Robbie Ellis

While the North Byron Parklands has some valuable forest cover it must be recognised that much of this cover resembles a patch quilt, the result of decades of agricultural use. To improve the value and function of these disparate forest blocks there is a much needed planting program similar to that proposed by the North Byron Parklands people to join and reconnect the vegetation. This one action of mass plantings will absolutely improve the environmental value across and adjacent to the proposal.

Apart from extensive consultation with indigenous groups and various elders the North Byron Parklands group has already established a long history of working with and employing local indigenous bush regeneration teams to plant thousands of trees across their site. This tree planting program has been a great way to involve traditional land owners in helping to restore what is currently quite a degraded site.

There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals.

I have seen what a range of other industry developments have offered up to protect the environment. In all cases their activities intrinsically contain much greater environmental risks compared to North Byron Parklands, yet their environmental controls are not even remotely as advanced or detailed. It is obvious that this proponent has thought long and hard about managing its activities in an environmentally and sustainable manner.

While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

Businesses like North Byron Parklands generate much needed jobs for our area. A lot of people I speak to are concerned about the lack of employment opportunities both within the shire and the northern rivers region. Any business that provides jobs to locals should be approved to operate.

All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land.

I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This as far as I understand is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported.

With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

The various Aboriginal clans in and around the proposed North Byron Parklands site have had a long history in this area and for this reason the Parklands people have spent a lot of time consulting indigenous groups and organisations to work out how best to assess the site for significance. This process was done in a cooperative framework with the results that potential sites of significance will be protected through fencing and other means. The archaeological report does not identify any aspects of the project that will have a negative impact on important cultural artefacts or values.

Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable.

The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements.

North Byron Parklands is proposing a sustainable arts and music venue that will provide significant employment opportunities to a range of people in the Byron and Northern Rivers region. Many of the jobs will suit our younger people and with an aging demographic this is vital to ensuring that there is an opportunity to up skill our youth in a growing and profitable sector. Jobs are very important.

Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing.

Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

P4518	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Laura Rodgers (support)	In relation to employment and wages the Byron local government area has one of the State's lowest average wages, around $31,000 per annum. A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities to the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities. The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. P4519	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nate Norrish of OMD (support)	It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, environmentally-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being. The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast.

It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site. The opportunity to showcase the stunning nature in the Byron region through a sustainable event venue is surely a wonderful proposition. Outdoor events bring people closer together, letâ€™s show the way Australia. Bring Splendour home! I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land.

The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger.

So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account.

The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. Itâ€™s about young people and being young. This is really important.

Splendour in the Grass is the most amazing 3 days of the year, it is all about people getting together and enjoying great music and culture and it would be so sad for that to end.

P4525	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jacques Launay (support)	The North Byron Parklands Project will impact the environment positively and should be supported. The preservation of ecological values in and around the Parklands site is an important aspect of North Byron Parklands proposal. The large amount of scientific assessment that has been conducted shows that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values on the site. Letâ€™s get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, letâ€™s get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people. P4527	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Melanie Hasko (support)	While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all. Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal.

A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. That's the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Let's get it approved.

The North Byron Parklands will see the subject site have the opportunity to maintain low impact activity that will see the site unoccupied for some 75% of the year. By allowing the sites land to rest both fauna and flora growth will be encouraged across and adjacent to the site. This restoration will be a positive outcome for the local environment.

The proposed North Byron Parklands vegetation management plan will see a staged regime of tree planting across the site. Apart from the obvious habitat creation, etc, this level of mass planting will have other important environmental benefits. Benefits such as reduced soil erosion, salinity and of course will also help to greatly improve water quality through nature filtration processes associated with such significant biomass.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only every using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

With the documenting of environmental requirements through the North Byron Parklands management manual it is clear that a very high level of commitment has been made to protect and enhance the environment. Take for example the requirement to have a 30 metre buffer between the car park and adjoining nature reserve. This initiative will protect the nature reserve and will allow for the buffer area to slowly regenerate back to its former bushland status.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management.

We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it seems to make sense to me to approve it.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only every using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

P4532	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Danial Whitty (support)	The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view. With so many people moving into capital cities the government needs to ensure that regional employment opportunities are secured whenever they are offered. Parklands have a project that will provide plenty of jobs for a range of people and it is super important that they jobs stay in our area.

Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations.

People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. The North Byron Parklands is the very thing that our locals would love.

P4534	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Janessa Thompson of student (support)	While much is made about the supposed wildlife corridor in and around the North Byron Parklands site the fact is that much of the vegetation is patchy and degraded. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue. With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs.

The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast.

I have attended Splendour in the grass since 2007, it has been the time of my life each year. As hard as it is to get tickets, i have been a lucky enough person to be attending the festival (and i'm sure the ticketing will be sorted one year)

Splendour has a great reputation to Australians as well as international guests. Byron Bay adds value and atmosphere to the festival id say thats why alot of people attend the festival, because Byron Bay adds that extra special affect to the weekend.

Can't you think of all the tourism generation splendour brings to the local economy, really can't it be that bad, its only three days of the whole year!! It brings jobs, tourists to the destination that eat, sleep and drink in the local area of byron bay, alot of people stay longer that the duration of the festival which also adds economic value to the community.

Its a great festival for all ages, families, party goes, young, old, hippies so why not allow these people to have fun three days of their lives and continue splendour in the grass to uphold their reputation!!

Just think how much loss the local area will loose if splendour moves to another city/state/ area.

Byron Bay owns splendour thats where it is suppose to be!!

Live and love it because its going to happen 2011!!

In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. P4537	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rachel Caulcutt of Peppers Coorabell Retreat (support)	The North Byron Parklands people have obviously spent a lot of time developing up systems and processes to manage the environment in which they operate. It impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment? In relation to employment and wages the Byron local government area has one of the State's lowest average wages, around $31,000 per annum. A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities top the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities. With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management. North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. To whom it may concern,

I am writing to you in support of the proposed relocation of the Splendour in the Grass festival to the North Byron Parklands. This is a wonderful event and has provided the Byron community with so much over the past 10 years, and it would be a great shame if the event had to moved away from Byron (again).

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense. I have been to five recent Splendour festivals and from my own experience, I know that I spend hundreds, sometimes thousands of dollars during my stays.

It is also pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events.

I ask that you seriously consider this proposal and I thank you for your time.

At present the North Byron Parklands site is subject to significant sediment and erosion issues. Previous land practices have seen poor top soil removal and impacts on graded lands. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address these existing soil impacts and also has put in place a sediment and erosion control plan during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended.

With so many people relying on tourism for their income on the North Coast there is an obligation on behalf of state and local governments to help facilitate any reasonable project that will increase domestic and international tourist numbers. North Byron Parklands will become the home of a number of major events with each of these events attracting thousands of people to the area. This will greatly enhance the local tourism sector.

P4540	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from April Dell (support)	North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Those 7,500 trees are now some metres high and thriving. With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs. Having been involved in many tourist related businesses, one is very aware of the seasonal fluctuation of visitors. Any proposal that plans to attract tens of thousands of visitors to a given region must be seriously considered and North Byron Parklands is one such project. With plans for a number of multiple large events, some scheduled in traditional low seasons such as winter is very beneficial for this industry.

In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

Australia, generally speaking has been lucky in terms of its overall unemployment rate, however in the northern rivers the rate is much higher. Regions such as this need employers across a range of industries not just retail and tourism. I am sure that North Byron Parklands will become a major employer in the region if the project is approved.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved.

Byron was the setting for most of the family holidays of my childhood and it was also the place I decided to attend schoolies. When splendour started there I was so happy for an excuse to return! Splendour at Byron is an institution and something that many people look forward to as a winter break. Any ill effect that could be argued for splendour would be equally evident for the schoolies period (that has not been banned).

Moreover, at the moment the average household income per year in the Byron shire and the Northern Rivers is much lower than the rest of NSW. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers average annual income is approx. $55,000 compared to NSW's average annual income of $71,000. Bringing Splendour home to Byron Bay to the North Byron Parklands site would open up many opportunities of employment to a community in real need.

Thanks,

Nisa

P4547	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alexandra Gannon (support)	Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project.

The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. Music and arts should be embraced in our society because of these jobs that it creates and North Byron Parklands if it is approved is set to be a big employer for the area. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only ever using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

Letâ€™s get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, letâ€™s get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people.

P4548	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Michael French of Caring Choice Pty Ltd ()	It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged. The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support. Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations. There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. The Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities.

On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives.

Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parklands' environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it seems to make sense to me to approve it.

Many supposed local environmental groups have been invited to visit the North Byron Parklands and to participate in the public tree planting days that have been held over the past few years. Unfortunately none of these groups have actually converted their words into action by helping to repair this partially degraded site. The local indigenous bush regeneration team on the other hand has been responsible for planting thousands of trees in key locations and is another example of the Parklands group working with its community.

The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal.

Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

P4553	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Mykie Jackson (support)	While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all. In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet.

Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc.

We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal.

The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this.

With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals.

The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regions' economies. The proposed North Byron Parklands project will result in a massive increase in the number of domestic visitors to the area and to a lesser degree, will also attract many overseas visitors. As this industry is so important to the region it makes good sense for this project to proceed.

North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

P4555	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kylie Bown (support)	It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management. The list of events that each of the owners of North Byron Parklands have held over the past ten years is absolutely staggering in terms of venues, numbers of patrons and dealing successfully with a range of regulatory authorities. Such experience will provide a significant edge when events are held at North Byron Parklands and will no doubt make for a succession of successful events. With a very large number of people reliant on the tourism industry for their income, whether they are an employee or an owner-operator, the North Byron Parklands project represents a potentially substantial increase in business for these people. The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant.

The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone.

Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp.

The Parklands project will greatly assist the ecological integrity of the area especially for the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and the "coast to hinterland" wildlife corridor. The project results in thousands of extra trees planted, improved habitat for wildlife and additions to the Nature Reserve. The careful scheduling of events to maximise "downtime" will allow the Parklands site to assist the functioning of the adjoining Nature Reserve.

So many people in the northern rivers area rely on the tourism industry for their bread and butter. These days most businesses are geared towards the tourism dollar and if past trends are anything to go by this industry sector will continue to play a key role in the region's economic fortunes. The people behind Parklands will play a dominant role in growing and sustaining the tourism industry and we should all get behind them to make this project a reality.

The North Byron Parklands proposal is likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. This is shown by the level of environmental assessment that has been conducted across the site by North Byron Parklands. All assessments indicate that the proposal will have minimal environmental impacts.

When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land.

Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged.

With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management.

In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

As soon as I started reading about this proposal I had an instant realization of the benefits North Byron Parklands would bring to our local economy but also to my family.

Being young it's important to get out there. North Byron Parklands offers us opportunities to interact on levels that promote us to look outside the square. It would be a great opportunity for us to have this venue available.

It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning.

North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

Hi,

I would like to make a submission on the North Byron Parklands proposal.

Most businesses that operate in Northern NSW do not have anywhere near the level of sophisticated environmental strategies, controls and procedures that North Byron Parklands is preparing to put in place. It seems that every aspect of flora and fauna management has been considered and with a robust environmental auditing component I think we will see some excellent environmental outcomes arising from this development. I am very supportive of their approach.

An example of this with respect to the environment and one of the risks that the people from North Byron Parklands have identified is the potential for road kill associated with traffic movements before, during and after an event. As such they have implemented a number of requirements including on site environmental inductions, speed limiting devices, signage and a wildlife rescue team. This is just one example of the sound environmental practices they are proposing.

As well as these incentives they are also contributing a fair portion of the land to local wildlife parks and reserves to help rebuild habitats and encourage bush regeneration. If you pair these factors with the knowledge that for the majority of the year this land would be unused for major events I believe that North Byron Parklands are being very responsible with their approach.

I hope that you consider their proposal and accept this as it will bring a lot of good to the surrounding area.

It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged. Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

While much is made of the Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

With jobs hard to come by in regional areas such as the north coast it is really important that projects that can provide ongoing employment opportunities are considered seriously by government. I believe that North Byron Parklands is one such venture that can offer many people a job opportunity.

P4564	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Riordan Lee (support)	It is pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events. There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals. Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc. Name: Riordan Lee Address: 15 The Grand Pde, Brighton Le Sands, NSW IP Address: c114-76-214-226.rivrw3.nsw.optusnet.com.au - 114.76.214.226 Submission for Job: #3210 Cultural Events Site (Project Application) https://majorprojects.onhiive.com/index.pl?action=view_job&id=3210 Site: #1982 Cultural Events Site - Tweed Valley Way and Jones Road, Yelgun (09_0028)

Supporting the arts and music scene has made Byron what it is today. Supporting our culture and giving our children a nurturing environment to grow up in by exposing them to such diversity and creativity. If weren't for Byron's popularity brought about by showcasing local talent amongst internationally recognized names the community would not have benefited and enabled people to make a living here, amongst providing such other enriching aspects that the community has been able to live by. This has progressed so positively within our community, lets continue it. Tourism has long been and as long as well balanced and managed intelligently is a way to give back even if only 20 days of the year. If we want to preserve the natural community (the heart and soul of Byron Bay, the people that care for the environment) then we best balance it with enough finance to have those environmental choices and options supported! Otherwise we will end up only having the society that is here to take not give.

Love from a born and bred Byronite!

Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities ? young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

To Whom it may concern,

I have been to many festivals in my time and I have been continually impressed by Splendour in the grass. Not only for the outstanding even and acts they bring forward every year, but the culture they are putting forward, being environmentally friendly and reducing their carbon footprint more so than many other festivals.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parkland's environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered.

There?s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

While the North Byron Parklands has some valuable forest cover it must be recognised that much of this cover resembles a patch quilt, the result of decades of agricultural use. To improve the value and function of these disparate forest blocks there is a much needed planting program similar to that proposed by the North Byron Parklands people to join and reconnect the vegetation. This one action of mass plantings will absolutely improve the environmental value across and adjacent to the proposal.

Not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

Byron Bay is such an ideal place for a music festival and the local community would really benefit from its continued success in the North Byron Parklands.

I would appreciate if my details were not made available to the proponent or the authorities and I do not want them displayed on the department's website.

Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal.

The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported.

The North Byron Parklands site has undergone a number of detailed assessments to assure the site is enhanced to be able to become a ?sustainable? site for cultural events in the area. It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site.

From Tweed Heads to Evans Head most of the business activity revolves around tourism. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. Such a proposal would seamlessly add to the already diversified tourism offerings of the region and should be approved.

Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It?s up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people.

With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas.

As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive.

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable.

When events are not being staged at North Byron Parklands, there will be reforestation and noxious weed removal activities. P4573	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Brooke- Ellen davidson (support)	One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive. With jobs hard to come by in regional areas such as the north coast it is really important that projects that can provide ongoing employment opportunities are considered seriously by government. I believe that North Byron Parklands is one such venture that can offer many people a job opportunity. The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone. Having a world class facility like North Byron Parklands in the Byron region is an awesome opportunity. Any place in Australia would welcome that. P4574	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kaysee Lush (support)	The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesn't proceed then it's likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklands group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity. I know of many businesses that rely on events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region. Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management. The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment. Finally, this is the best place for a festival. It has the splendour heart and soul. We need to bring it home.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

Not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption.

I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

The North Byron Parklands proposal has considered both indigenous and non-indigenous issues associated with the proposal. In particular, Parklands has worked closely with the local Tweed/Byron Aboriginal Land Council and has complemented a number of archaeological digs to help determine the significance of parts of the site. It is pleasing to see that certain areas of the site will become ?out of bounds? to protect identified areas of importance.

In the Byron and northern rivers areas tourism is subject to busy times and quiet times. It is planned that a number of events will occur at the North Byron Parklands site each year and one of these takes place in winter when tourism businesses are struggling to cover costs. P4580	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Chris MacKinnon (support)	North Byron Parklands is likely to be the first arts and music venue that has prepared an environmental, health and safety management manual to manage interactions with the environment. The environmental standard from this manual provides a range of measures designed to protect the environment. Given that the activity in question is low impact the environmental management of the site will easily achieve positive benefits for the environment. The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management.

Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet.

Getting people to spend their tourism dollar in the northern rivers area is extremely important for sustaining the local and regional tourism businesses. On average Australian holiday makers will spend about $130 per night staying in the northern rivers region and the North Byron Parklands project is going to attract between 80,000 and 120,000 people to the area each year. The economic income will be huge and will support a whole host of tourism based organisations.

Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, "I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a community". (Donna Sue Sanders " Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a "resource centre" where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say.

Having a world class facility like North Byron Parklands in the Byron region is an awesome opportunity. Any place in Australia would welcome that.

Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal.

It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning. Byron and the Northern Rivers unemployment rate (around 8.5%) is substantially higher than the NSW average of 5.5%. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone. In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet. P4587	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Liam Bell (support)	I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet. North Byron Parklands have undertaken a detailed economic impact assessment which bodes well for the tourism industry should it be approved. Projections show that tens of thousands of people will visit the area each year and this influx of people will significantly bolster our tourism businesses. With so many locals relying on the tourism industry for their income, such a project is very welcome. Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward. P4588	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Sarah Osmond of University of Queensland (support)	The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. Music and arts should be embraced in our society because of these jobs that it creates and North Byron Parklands if it is approved is set to be a big employer for the area. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support. In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures. From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive. The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view.

Much of the agricultural and forestry industries of the northern rivers has significantly declined over the past decade and many people have been forced into lower paid sectors such as retail and tourism. Now more than ever there is a need for diversifying the employment base and the North Byron Parklands proposal will do exactly that. With job positions projected to be more than 200 there is a very real need to approve such a project.

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

I think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only ever using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed.

I completely agree with the two statements below:

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

While much is made of the Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal.

We really need this to get the go ahead. My friends and I will go to events at North Byron Parklands. Hopefully we will be able to get jobs at events.

P4597	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Raymond Williams (support)	To Whom It May Concern, It is to my knowledge that the Splendour in the Grass organisers are and have been proposing a new site in Yelgun for some time now. I understand that the major issue is wildlife preservation. As someone who has gone to a lot of different music festivals in Australia and abroad, I would like to start by saying the the Splendour organisers are some of the very best in the world. They know what it takes to run a friendly, successful, sustainable and environmentally friendly festival. You can expect that preservation of the site will be their highest priority. Secondly, it is in the interest of festival goers to have this festival return to the Byron shire. Purely because it is seen as the traditional home. It's hard to explain, but once you have the Splendour experience in Byron, you can't help but feel a part of you will always stay there. Now I know that my second point is of little interest to you but I just thought I'd throw it in. My third point is that, economically, the move back to the Byron shire would be an economical boost to the local area. After losing Belongil Fields to future real estate, the loss of the 2 major festivals, "Splendour and Blues and Roots", will see the Byron shire's business suffer a great loss in potential income. Especially since the festivals are in the off-seasons for tourism.

The organisers should at least be given the opportunity to show you that it is possible to run sustainable and environmentally friendly events whilst preserving the natural wildlife.

The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger. In a coastal region such as the Byron and Tweed areas tourism businesses are the financial lifeblood for so many people. Ensuring we attract businesses such as North Byron Parklands who will be responsible for bringing significant numbers of visitors to the region is vital if we are to maintain the viability of this critical sector. Government agencies should be approving projects of this nature.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

P4600	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Greg Segal of mixitup Enterprises Pty Ltd (support)	North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures.

With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs.

I have seen what a range of other industry developments have offered up to protect the environment. In all cases their activities intrinsically contain much greater environmental risks compared to North Byron Parklands, yet their environmental controls are not even remotely as advanced or detailed. It is obvious that this proponent has thought long and hard about managing its activities in an environmentally and sustainable manner.

P4601	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rob Peard (support)

Greetings Dept of Planning,

The Splendour In The Grass Events is a festival of great cultural value. As an ardent festival supporter worldwide and a music journalist, I can say that in 2010 the musical content of the festival was unsurpassed in scope, quality and quantity of acts from around the globe. Australia is in a unique position globally and yet still does not have a world recognised festival to be proud of. Splendour in the Grass represents the future of quality festivals.

I understand the need from planning departments to serve both the community, preserve the environment and ensure the safety of visitors to the event. Although it is a mammoth undertaking, challenges in life should be sought, seized and conquered. The feeling of personal satisfaction undertaking a project of this scope should be approached with optimism, vigour and passion.

This festival along with the Byron Bay Blues Festival represents a unique challenge to the area and one with many positive aspects for local businesses and communities. The short life-cycle of the event does not pose a huge threat to the sustainability of the local environment which will bounce back within a short time.

For a few short days, I urge you to let a bit of magic happen.

Thank you.

P4602	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Edward Crupi (support)	Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management. Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project. The Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities. P4603	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rachael Kennedy (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp.

Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

My experience of Splendour in the Grass was one of the greatest of my life. This year I saw thousands flock to Woodford to take part in the experience of a life time. It was noticeable that the huge rise in tourism had a profound effect economically on the area. With any increase of tourists a slight environmental effect is expected also.

Splendour in the Grass is proud to have taken an environmental initiative in reducing its environmental footprint.

With a perminate home for the festival job opportunities would arise in the area for those living in North Byron, and the environmental effects of travel and setting up would be reduced each year.

For the greatest part of the year the Parklands would be left in peace for species residing there. It is true there are a number of threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of irregular noise to such species shows that they will usually relocate and return quickly once noise ceases. This a positive result for all parties and it is good to know the species will not be disturbed some 260 days of the year.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

The site in question if not used for a sustainable cultural arts and event venue may end up being used by whoever buys it in a manner that would place greater pressure on the environment. Here we have an opportunity to hold a low impact activity that will see the land rested for some 75% of the year. Allowing such large rest times will benefit both fauna and flora across and adjacent to the site. This is a very positive outcome.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

Splendour has a great history and even better to come, they deserve to be at a place that can hold the amount of people who attend each year, it is an amazing place and people deserve to experience such an amazing festival at a truly amazing place in the world.

The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements.

In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. P4609	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Genevieve Quek (support)	If employment growth in regional areas is a key concern of the NSW state government then approving this project makes sound economic sense. There is a real need to support organisations that can provide such large numbers of jobs in an area where finding a good job can be very difficult. It seems to me that approving this project will have lasting long term benefits for job prospectors in this rural region.

One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives.

The Byron region can market itself as a hub for events and creativity if this proposal is approved. They would be very fortunate indeed to have the training and skills benefits of such a proposal.

P4611	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lucas Geor of student (support)	With respect to the environment one of the risks that the people from North Byron Parklands have identified is the potential for road kill associated with traffic movements before, during and after an event. As such they have implemented a number of requirements including on site environmental inductions, speed limiting devices, signage and a wildlife rescue team. This is just one example of the sound environmental practices they are proposing.

When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land.

Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

P4614	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ryan Boccalatte (support)	Not only have the North Byron Parklands organisation developed what must be considered world?s best practice environmental management systems and processes, they are also planning to have an environmental education program folded into the mix for good measure. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure.

Let?s look at the environmental initiatives that the North Byron Parklands people are proposing. Environmental auditing, sediment and erosion control, fencing to keep people in cleared areas, buffer zones to forests, inductions for workers, wildlife rescue teams during events, traffic control, no dogs, etc. The list of requirements they have placed on event operators is substantial and will result in a well protected environment.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

P4615	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Elena Wigginton (support)

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

The potential adverse impact of the Parklands usage on flora and fauna has been largely mitigated by virtue of the event site occupying only existing grassland areas of the site and avoiding vegetated parts of the site. Further, the significant increase in habitat afforded by the additional 11.1 ha of revegetation and 48.1 ha of additional plantings also mitigates against adverse impact upon flora and fauna species.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

Along with the reasons below, I feel strongly about the new splendour site on personal level. Splendour has only ever been a positive influence on the lives of the youth around me. Something to look forward to year round, regardless of the hardships of that year. It has given me something to look forward to each year, and I'm proud to support the environmental efforts of the festival each year. Splendour is an event which the Byron area should be proud of.

The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this.

I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it.

The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment.

P4618	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from G V of ? (support)	With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values will be done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. The system is that comprehensive that it has even considered and regulated light spill from potable lighting towers. The proponents should be commended on such an initiative. In the northern rivers area more and more people have been moving into the creative industries sector because of the interesting and fulfilling work that can be undertaken. There is a very real need to continue growing this sector to provide people with more job opportunities. North Byron Parklands is a proposal that will truly make a big impact in job availability in the region and will be a very positive economic force. Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project.

Recent statistics provided by the Australian Bureau of Statistics indicate that the majority of business owners in the shire and the northern rivers area do not employ people, rather these businesses are operated by self employed people. As such it is obvious that other larger organisations and businesses are required to employ people in a are in much need of job opportunities. North Byron Parklands is one such organisation proposing to generate up to 200 full time equivalent positions. Such a project is extremely important to this area.

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

Being a longstanding and suffering rate and taxpayer in this shire i now want my voice heard,i want this quality cultural event at my doorstep,for my children and theirs to enjoy to be able to see and partake in a enjoyable sustainable future,which includes music,the arts ,creativity and diversity.I want the splendour team to be able to use the land they have legally purchased to the use they had intendedb it for as it will be a benefit to thousands in the future.

P4620	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Tim Cooke of Bum (support)	While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all. A place where people can get together and enjoy the beauty that Byron Bay has to offer. With its focus on cultural heritage management, North Byron Parklands can instill in the region a greater understanding of our local indigenous and non-indigenous ancestry. P4621	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from ashley cairns (support)	When you have the combined expertise of event operators as those that make up the owners of North Byron Parklands it is quite evident that events that are proposed to be held at the Parklands site will be conducted in a successful and safe manner. With years of combined expertise these industry leaders will ensure that all events are conducted in a manner that ensures the management of all aspects of large and small events are adequately covered. North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense. Being young it's important to get out there. P4622	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Samm Creasey of Drinkworks (support)	North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Those 7,500 trees are now some metres high and thriving. If you look at the multitude of government regional growth forecasts for areas such as the northern rivers it is plain to see that with a rapidly expanding population there is a strong need for a diverse and stable employment base. Jobs will be critical to the longer term sustainability of the region and therefore when projects such as North Byron Parklands come along they should be embraced and assisted by state and local governments. From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It's a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us. P4623	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kath Creel of Impact AV Australia (support)	It is pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events.

If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

North Byron Parklands have undertaken a detailed economic impact assessment which bodes well for the tourism industry should it be approved. Projections show that tens of thousands of people will visit the area each year and this influx of people will significantly bolster our tourism businesses. With so many locals relying on the tourism industry for their income, such a project is very welcome.

The North Byron Parklands sounds really interesting and exciting.

P4624	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jonathon Stokes (support)	While the North Byron Parklands has some valuable forest cover it must be recognised that much of this cover resembles a patch quilt, the result of decades of agricultural use. To improve the value and function of these disparate forest blocks there is a much needed planting program similar to that proposed by the North Byron Parklands people to join and reconnect the vegetation. This one action of mass plantings will absolutely improve the environmental value across and adjacent to the proposal. Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events. Most outdoor events pay little attention to the environment so it is heartening to see an organisation such as North Byron Parklands who have put a considerable effort into developing specific procedures and work instructions designed to protect the environment. These guys even have an environmental incident notification system which will document all issues and the steps taken to resolve them. Until very recently NSW has had a less than enviable employment track record mainly due to the global financial crisis. While it looks like the state is on the mend we still need to ensure that projects like North Byron Parklands are given the green light because of the large number of regional jobs it will provide. With a very large number of people reliant on the tourism industry for their income, whether they are an employee or an owner-operator, the North Byron Parklands project represents a potentially substantial increase in business for these people. If you consider just the sheer number of punters the proposal will attract one can start to see the economic benefits which will flow to the region. I think most businesses would view this proposal in a positive light.

It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being I would definitely apply for a job at the North Byron Parklands and know that it will lay my employment path out. This is the opportunity that I have always hoped Byron Bay would offer. Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area. It is unlikely that there is another events venue that has the level of environmental management systems in place as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. Based on ISO14001 the environmental policies and procedures to be implemented at this venue will provide robust monitoring and mitigation measures to ensure that fauna and flora is protected. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative.

In a coastal region such as the Byron and Tweed areas tourism businesses are the financial lifeblood for so many people. Ensuring we attract businesses such as North Byron Parklands who will be responsible for bringing significant numbers of visitors to the region is vital if we are to maintain the viability of this critical sector. Government agencies should be approving projects of this nature.

While some states can fall back on the mining industry, NSW has to rely on a variety of industry sectors to help fund the expansion of the state. Opportunities for employment such as that being offered by the North Byron Parklands proposal is vital to the sustainability of regional areas.

So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account.

North Byron Parklands is all about hosting lots of different events, all of which require people to work in a variety of jobs. One event can employ hundreds of people for a period of time and in an area such as Byron such job opportunities are very welcome. We should be doing all we can to make this project happen.

Byron Bay is widely known for pushing the barrier and making things possible. We as a town have so much to offer and this new proposal will put us on the map so to speak. Itâ€™s a fantastic opportunity for us all.

The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesn't proceed then it's likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklands group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity.

Not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption.

Let's get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, let's get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people.

Hi,

Byron bay is the most amazing venue in the whole of Australia. Woodford in Brisbane has ruined Splendour and it would be amazing if we were able to go back to the wonderful Byron next year as always. There is more to do then just go to a festival in the week that we camp in town.

If you were to analysis the professional event management of such festivals as Splendour in the Grass, Parklife, Shore Thing and Sunset Suns one could only come to the conclusion that these event operators are up there with the most successful an well managed events in Australia. Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

Thank you for your time :)

P4632	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jessie Cowan (support)	Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities ? young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia. If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably. At the moment the average household income per year in the Byron shire and the Northern Rivers is much lower than the rest of NSW. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers average annual income is aprox. $55,000 compared to NSW's average annual income of $71,000.

Bringing Splendour home to Byron Bay to the North Byron Parklands site would open up many opportunities of employment to a community in real need.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

To Whom It May Concern

I think the proposal to give Splendour in the Grass a permanent home in Northern NSW is a great idea.

I was so impressed with how Splendour was run and it was great to see an organisation as passionate about sustainability and utilising the local natural environment at Woodford as they were about the music and performances.

The level of detail undertaken in the identification and assessment of likely impacts on fauna and flora across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site is impressive. There is unlikely to be many (if any) other types of development north coast that have gone to this level of detail and thoroughness. The commitments listed to preserve and enhance the ecology certainly help to put this development into the "sustainable" development basket.

Not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption.

I think NSW would be silly to let QLD reap the benefits of such an amazing festival - and that is coming from a Queenslander.

Yours sincerely,

By allowing the sites land to rest both fauna and flora growth will be encouraged across and adjacent to the site. This restoration will be a positive outcome for the local environment. In the northern rivers area more and more people have been moving into the creative industries sector because of the interesting and fulfilling work that can be undertaken. There is a very real need to continue growing this sector to provide people with more job opportunities. North Byron Parklands is a proposal that will truly make a big impact in job availability in the region and will be a very positive economic force. The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous. In relation to environmental management one of the biggest impacts on fauna in this region is dogs. It is pleasing to note that the environmental, health and safety management manual strictly prohibits dogs from entering the site. Just this on initiative will help to reduce pressure on the environment, not to mention the host of other excellent environmental programs they have documented.

Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project.

With a very large number of people reliant on the tourism industry for their income, whether they are an employee or an owner-operator, the North Byron Parklands project represents a potentially substantial increase in business for these people. North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. Bring on the variety and the possibilities!

The North Byron Parklands site has undergone a number of detailed assessments to assure the site is enhanced to be able to become a ?sustainable? site for cultural events in the area. It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site.

As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive.

P4640	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Katrina Cottrill (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment. When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land.

While it is understood that business ventures such as North Byron Parklands are focussed on turning a profit, it is also really pleasing to see they have expended a fair amount of effort on protecting and enhancing the environment in which they operate. Initiatives such as light spill and noise management and inducting all staff and contractors is a great way to protect the environment and demonstrate a commitment to sustainable best practice.

P4643	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Tegan McClean (support)	The North Byron Parklands will be the 1st proposed land use that will see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for the site. For many years the North Byron Parklands site has been used for intensive agricultural activities and land clearing, impacting on the site dramatically. North Byron Parklands has planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year to restore the site. This has to be seen as a great result for the local environment. I know of many businesses that rely on events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region.

Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable.

North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

Byron and the surrounding areas relies substantially on a range of small businesses and cottage industries to employ the people that live in this community. There are not many large employers such as what North Byron Parklands would become should it be approved. I think we need to approve and support these types of projects in regional areas to ensure there are enough job choices available to people.

The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment.

P4645	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jamie Norris (support)	The North Byron Parklands proposal will see the largest restoration program the region has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its highly detailed vegetation management plan which will result in 1000's of trees being strategically planted around the site. The wildlife corridor has been significantly degraded over many decades due to primary production and agriculture activities. This means the corridor is currently very fragmented and in real need of revegetation. With so many people moving into capital cities the government needs to ensure that regional employment opportunities are secured whenever they are offered. Parklands have a project that will provide plenty of jobs for a range of people and it is super important that they jobs stay in our area. In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. In relation to employment and wages the Byron local government area has one of the State's lowest average wages, around $31,000 per annum. A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities to the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities.

Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered.

P4647	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Andrew McMillen (support)	From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive. The North Byron Parklands proposal brings so many positive benefits to the northern rivers region that based on planning merit alone, this application must be approved. Whether one considers employment, income generation, environmental protection measures or a massive boost to the region's tourism economy, this application exceeds all expectations. On this basis this proposal should be approved by the state government. In NSW and particularly regional areas such as Byron and the wider northern rivers area securing a job is becoming very difficult. While other states prosper, NSW has fallen behind and the people are the ones suffering. The NSW Government needs to approve projects such as North Byron Parklands because it will create employment and this in turn is good for our state economy. North Byron Parklands is likely to be the first arts and music venue that has prepared an environmental, health and safety management manual to manage interactions with the environment. The environmental standard from this manual provides a range of measures designed to protect the environment. Given that the activity in question is low impact the environmental management of the site will easily achieve positive benefits for the environment.

I think we need to approve and support these types of projects in regional areas to ensure there are enough job choices available to people.

In a coastal region such as the Byron and Tweed areas tourism businesses are the financial lifeblood for so many people. Ensuring we attract businesses such as North Byron Parklands who will be responsible for bringing significant numbers of visitors to the region is vital if we are to maintain the viability of this critical sector. Government agencies should be approving projects of this nature.

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. Music and arts should be embraced in our society because of these jobs that it creates and North Byron Parklands if it is approved is set to be a big employer for the area. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

P4650	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rosanagh Ryan (support)	While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all. If employment growth in regional areas is a key concern of the NSW state government then approving this project makes sound economic sense. There is a real need to support organisations that can provide such large numbers of jobs in an area where finding a good job can be very difficult. It seems to me that approving this project will have lasting long term benefits for job prospectors in this rural region. I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved.

The list of events that each of the owners of North Byron Parklands have held over the past ten years is absolutely staggering in terms of venues, numbers of patrons and dealing successfully with a range of regulatory authorities. Such experience will provide a significant edge when events are held at North Byron Parklands and will no doubt make for a succession of successful events.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area. Imagine an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.

I have been to Splendour In the Grass both in Byron Bay and now in Woodford..while the Woodford site is terrific it really lacked the spirit of Bryon Bay event which I felt were happier, calmer and more stable. Having somewhere to go inbetween days (shops, beach, cafes etc) which the Byron shire location will provide really added to the festival and the wellbeing of patrons too.

P4652	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nick Dundon (support)	We need to preserve festivals like these that offer something different, worthwhile and fun! BRING SPLENDOUR HOME I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet. There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses. It is a good sign when an organisation like North Byron Parklands goes the extra mile to assess the possible environmental impacts related to their project. North Byron Parklands have proposed extensive mitigation strategies that will protect the ecological attributes and improve the overall environmental viability of the site. This high level of planning should be encouraged.

The people behind North Byron Parklands are professional event operators with decades of combined experience in hosting successful events. Having sold millions of tickets to the dozens of events they have held, it is extremely beneficial that such experienced personnel will be available to guide and manage events proposed for North Byron Parklands.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy.

The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported.

Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project.

North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process.

The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands.

Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable.

The North Byron Parklands Project will? impact the environment positively and should be supported. The preservation of ecological values in and around the Parklands site is an important aspect of North Byron Parklands proposal. The large amount of scientific assessment that has been conducted shows that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values on the site.

Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, ?I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a community?.. (Donna Sue Sanders ? Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

Having attended Splendour in the Grass on multiple occassions, I have many positive thoughts to offer for it being able to continue on in the North Byron Parklands. Firstly on attending my first splendour, I was shocked and delighted at how much everyone (the youths are sometimes the most proactive) took care of the land around them. I have seen in the past years great enviromental initiatives that all punters have embraced. The event has allowed there to be a canvas for alot of issues that impact us all eg. promotion of safe sex, recycling, pushing the use of re-using plastic bottles at re-fill stations rather than continually pu

The North Byron Parklands people have obviously spent a lot of time developing up systems and processes to manage the environment in which they operate. It is impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment?

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events has ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

In a coastal region such as the Byron and Tweed areas, tourism businesses are the financial lifeblood for so many people. Ensuring we attract businesses such as North Byron Parklands, who will be responsible for bringing significant numbers of visitors to the region, is vital if we are to maintain the viability of this critical sector. Government agencies should be approving projects of this nature.

P4664	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from James Irvine (support)	The North Byron Parklands project has undertaken both a high level of fauna and flora assessments and a comprehensive environmental risk assessment process. As a result they have developed a management manual that covers a range of aspects including the environment. They have even developed a standalone environmental induction form for all staff and contractors that clearly stipulates what can and cannot take place while on site. These measures are very impressive indeed.

We really need this to get the go ahead. My friends and I will go to events at North Byron Parklands. Hopefully we will be able to get jobs at events.

I have been to 7 splendour in the grass events (6 at belongil). I have also attended several other australian music festivals all over the country. Splendour in the Grass at Byron Bay is probably the best event on the calendar.

It would be a terrible shame for the fans who turn up to these type of events and for the local business who benefit (accomodation, pubs, supermarkets, cafes, clothing shops, taxis, gumboot sales) if the event was no longer able to operate in Byron Bay.

I strongly recommend you support the application for development of North Byron Parklands for use as the permanent home of Splendour in the Grass.

P4666	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alice Tancred (support)	The level of detail undertaken in the identification and assessment of likely impacts on fauna and flora across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site is impressive. There is unlikely to be many (if any) other types of development north coast that have gone to this level of detail and thoroughness. The commitments listed to preserve and enhance the ecology certainly help to put this development into the âsustainableâ development basket. This proposal has endless opportunities including networking with Southern Cross University and SAE, furthering our regions creativeness, training and work experiences. If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably.

Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

While much is made of the Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

Along with the reasons below, I feel strongly about the new splendour site on personal level. Splendour has only ever been a positive influence on the lives of the youth around me. Something to look forward to year round, regardless of the hardships of that year. It has given me something to look forward to each year, and I'm proud to support the environmental efforts of the festival each year. Splendour is an event which the Byron area should be proud of.

The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this.

I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

With the music and ambiance of Splendour 2010 still in my heart and the experience of Woodford, which was fantastic and a credit to the folk of Woodfordia, I would still like to see the festival back in Byron. North Byron Parklands offers music, entertainment and culture for our locals and tourists. What a great way of putting Byron Bay more on the map.

Further to this until very recently NSW has had a less than enviable employment track record mainly due to the global financial crisis. While it looks like the state is on the mend we still need to ensure that projects like North Byron Parklands are given the green light because of the large number of regional jobs it will provide.

I have seen what a range of other industry developments have offered up to protect the environment. In all cases their activities intrinsically contain much greater environmental risks compared to North Byron Parklands, yet their environmental controls are not even remotely as advanced or detailed. It is obvious that this proponent has thought long and hard about managing its activities in an environmentally and sustainable manner.

With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values will be done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. BRING SPLENDOUR BACK TO BYRON!

The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

With jobs hard to come by in regional areas such as the north coast it is really important that projects that can provide ongoing employment opportunities are considered seriously by government. I believe that North Byron Parklands is one such venture that can offer many people a job opportunity.

With respect to the mapped wildlife corridor it should be pointed out that many parts of it identified as high conservation have in fact been cleared by previous land owners. The North Byron Parklands proposal has not only committed to helping restore this corridor, they have also committed to doing so in accordance with the Byron Shire Council wildlife map. This means having the opportunity to actually realise âœœon-groundâœœ what the currently inaccurate council map purports is in existence. The end result will be a greatly improved corridor that actually has some functioning capabilities.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

P4672	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Tim Bertino of Silver Top Taxi Service Ltd. (support)	Dear Sir / Madam,

I am writing this submission to bring Splendour In The Grass back to it's homeland of Byron Bay.

Not only have the North Byron Parklands organisation developed what must be considered worldâ™s best practice environmental management systems and processes, they are also planning to have an environmental education program folded into the mix for good measure. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure.

If you look at the multitude of government regional growth forecasts for areas such as the northern rivers it is plain to see that will a rapidly expanding population there is a strong need for a diverse and stable employment base. Jobs will be critical to the longer term sustainability of the region and therefore when projects such as North Byron Parklands come along they should be embraced and assisted by state and local governments.

In the Byron and northern rivers areas tourism is subject to busy times and quiet times. It is planned that a number of events will occur at the North Byron Parklands site each year and one of these takes place in winter when tourism businesses are struggling to cover costs. Building a dedicated events venue in the Byron Shire will have a number of very positive benefits for the tourism industry which is a good thing.

Please allow this fantastic event to continue into the future and promote the tourism of the beautiful Byron Bay area.

Yours sincerely,

Tim Bertino.

P4674	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Katherine Rule (support)	I studied Contemporary Music at Southern Cross University in Lismore for 3 years and Splendour in the Grass was the highlight of each year with huge rises in tourism and economic growth in the rural areas surrounding Byron Bay as well as Byron Bay itself. We noticed a huge rise in personal achievement within our course after Splendour as well which I can only put down to inspiration from the wonderful musicians who played every year. From an environmental view having the land free for habitat regeneration for basically the whole year except 12 days (which would also be spread over the year I'm assuming) would be fantastic. Imagine if more of that beautiful Byron land was wasted and went to housing development. I think Byron bay is fast losing it's appeal from my generation simply because of all the development and "snobby rich people" building holiday homes they only use for a short period of the year. Having lived half an hour from the area and knowing it very well I think the only time I would book a trip up there now is if Splendour in the Grass was being held there. Being a musician and seeing other musicians being supported in such a wonderful environment is inspiring and much needed for the industry. With the recent complications of music downloading musicians are suffering and often live shows are how they make their income. If these musicians were given less of a chance they may not even make the music they do. What on earth would we do without music? No matter what stage of life you are in, music can lift you out of whatever despair you may find yourself in. We should be encouraging festivals like Splendour in the Grass and promoting our beautiful Byron bay in a positive way for generations to come. Not turning it into a rich retirement village. Please help Splendour in the Grass come back home to Byron Bay.

Yours Sincerely,

Katherine Rule

P4676	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Sandra Olivier (support)	North Byron Parklands organisation are serious about managing the ecological issues at the event site. An example of this is the fact that there have been more vegetation and flora surveys conducted at the site than housing, industrial estate, and quarries assessments. As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive.

So many people in the northern rivers area rely on the tourism industry for their bread and butter. These days most businesses are geared towards the tourism dollar and if past trends are anything to go by this industry sector will continue to play a key role in the region's economic fortunes. The people behind Parklands will play a dominant role in growing and sustaining the tourism industry and we should all get behind them to make this project a reality.

P4677	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Remy Woods (support)	North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures. From Tweed Heads to Evans Head most of the business activity revolves around tourism. To have a cultural arts and music venue such as North Byron Parklands which will bring tens of thousands of visitors to the area and with the vast majority seeking accommodation over multiple nights is a huge economic windfall. P4678	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lara Petelin (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment. Not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption. What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations. P4680	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lauren O'Connor (support)	While much is made about the supposed wildlife corridor in and around the North Byron Parklands site the fact is that much of the vegetation is patchy and degraded. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue. With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative. This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people. P4681	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rachel Pride (support)	North Byron Parklands organisation are serious about managing the ecological issues at the event site. An example of this is the fact that there have been more vegetation and flora surveys conducted at the site than housing, industrial estate, and quarries assessments.

The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understory of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understory to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures.

Splendour is such an amazing time of year for youth and youth culture. For many years they have always had the message of the environment first, and have shown this by offering carbon-friendly tickets, and recycling benefits when we are inside the festival.

You need to seriously consider having Splendour at this premises, and as they stated events will only be held around 12 days per year - leaving 353 days for the environment to thrive and lay undisturbed.

P4682	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Catherine Nelsson (support)	I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

Byron Bay is a recognised tourism icon. It has thousands of beds in a wide range of accommodation outlets specifically designed to cater for the tourism market. When those beds remain empty for much of the year then the town should be very nervous. Those basking in the quiet times are shortsighted and cannot see the decay and decline that will follow the removal of economic generators such as the Splendour In the Grass festival and the associated North Byron Parklands project.

P4683	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rachel Davies of University of Newcastle (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has undergone a number of detailed assessments to assure the site is enhanced to be able to become a "sustainable" site for cultural events in the area. It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site. There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses. People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. The North Byron Parklands is the very thing that our locals would love.

Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward.

Australia, generally speaking has been lucky in terms of its overall unemployment rate, however in the northern rivers the rate is much higher. Regions such as this need employers across a range of industries not just retail and tourism. I am sure that North Byron Parklands will become a major employer in the region if the project is approved.

The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regions' economies. The proposed North Byron Parklands project will result in a massive increase in the number of domestic visitors to the area and to a lesser degree, will also attract many overseas visitors. As this industry is so important to the region it makes good sense for this project to proceed.

There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals.

P4688	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Tamara McGain (support)	One of the unintended effects on the environment from outdoor events is light spill. So it is pleasing to see that this issue is well addressed under the organisation's environmental standard. This standard requires lighting to be directed downwards, away from forest blocks, using low pressure sodium vapour lights where possible, and turning off light towers at a certain time of night. Such measures will greatly reduce disturbances to any localised fauna during such events.

Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

There's not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

Splendour in the Grass is the most well organised and 'cleanest' festival that we attend. There are always initiatives with idea for preserving the environment on the web page and we always take the offset carbon emissions option on our ticket as we know the organisers value this highly. Byron Bay is a beautiful area and I believe the visitors that attend the festival also make it a destination at oth

We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal.

The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal.

Many people worry about financially providing for themselves and their families and rightly so. Today it is hard to find a good job outside of the larger cities. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along offering lots of jobs it is surely in the interests of working families that such a project is located in a regional area. It should be approved just on its employment capabilities let alone any other benefits it is bound to bring.

Splendour in the grass is the best festival ever!

It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

The people behind North Byron Parklands are professional event operators with decades of combined experience in hosting successful events. Having sold millions of tickets to the dozens of events they have held, it is extremely beneficial that such experienced personnel will be available to guide and manage events proposed for North Byron Parklands.

North Byron Parklands have undertaken a detailed economic impact assessment which bodes well for the tourism industry should it be approved. Projections show that tens of thousands of people will visit the area each year and this influx of people will significantly bolster our tourism businesses. With so many locals relying on the tourism industry for their income, such a project is very welcome.

With its focus on cultural heritage management, North Byron Parklands can instill in the region a greater understanding of our local indigenous and non-indigenous ancestry. The cultural centre would provide unique learning opportunities for staff.

P4696	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kristy Mellor (support)	I'm writing in support of North Byron Parklands' application for approval to use their land as a permanent sustainable cultural event venue and the permanent home of the annual Splendour In The Grass festival.

As I understand it, this land has been purchased with the vision of creating a socially and environmentally viable home for events and celebrations in the Northern Rivers. The land has been chosen because it is located close to a major highway and has few immediate neighbours, while being large enough to host major events but also allow ample space to let nature breathe alone by herself. In my opinion, the North Byron Parklands' proposal has been tailored to take advantage of the cultural, recreational, employment and economic benefits of the planned events to the local community, while working hard to avoid any potential adverse impacts on the community and the surrounding environment.

The Parklands team have a long and enviable track record in developing and holding outdoor cultural arts and music events. They have a massive amount of experience in managing all aspects of events including noise, traffic and other aspects which if not correctly managed, have the ability to impact on surrounding land uses. It is pleasing to know that competent event managers will be involved with all events held at North Byron Parklands.

I strongly support North Byron Parklands' proposal and believe that, were it approved, the benefits that would flow to the local economy and community would be significant and long lasting.

Thank you for your time.

P4697	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jasmine Ryan (support)	In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken. In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire. North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it. Thereâ€™s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed.

All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant.

Much of the agricultural and forestry industries of the northern rivers has significantly declined over the past decade and many people have been forced into lower paid sectors such as retail and tourism. Now more than ever there is a need for diversifying the employment base and the North Byron Parklands proposal will do exactly that. With job positions projected to be more than 200 there is a very real need to approve such a project.

North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. Future plantings and assisted regeneration in these areas will significantly increase opportunities for movement of terrestrial fauna. This is only one of many significant programs that will enhance the environment within and adjacent to the site.

A lot of my friends are moving outside of Byron Bay to bigger and better opportunities. It would be great if we had those opportunities offered to us closer to home.

P4700	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Felicity Ible (support)	Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

Hello,

I would much rather Woodford, it is a terrific venue and as a regular patron, I feel much more welcomed at Woodford. It is not only a more relaxing environment but the music sound was much better. I think Woodford should be a permanent venue! From 90% of people I know who went also preferred Woodford over Byron.

Splendour is Byron!!

i have been to 4 Splendours, 3 at byron and the odd one out at Woodford. While Woodford was alot closer to home for me, the festival definately didn't have the same feel as byron always has!

Splendour has always valued the environment and its surrounds leading up to, during and after the festivities have taken place, i dont know of any other festival that takes these 'green' steps to the severity that splendour does! :) please, as a traditional splendour goer, return the festival to its rightful home..

It is pleasing to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes a requirement for wildlife rescue personnel to be present during all major events. This requirement means that there is a very capable first response team on hand to deal with trapped or injured wildlife. It is also an excellent opportunity for these people to monitor any interactions between people and fauna. Such data can then be used to modify and improve processes and procedures for future events.

The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. North Byron Parklands would help provide employment for many of these young people, thus giving them a reason to stay in the area.

One of the strengths of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the flow on benefits it will provide to the tourism industry. Still picking itself up after the recent financial crisis the tourism industry stands to be the big winner from this proposal. With massive visitor generating capacity this proposal will singlehandedly attract hundreds of thousands of people to the region, all of whom need accommodation and other services once they arrive.

There is unlikely to be many (if any) other types of development north coast that have gone to this level of detail and thoroughness. The commitments listed to preserve and enhance the ecology certainly help to put this development into the âœsustainableâ development basket. The North Byron Parklands proposal is a fantastic idea offering various ways to boost and maximize our local economy.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land.

When you have the combined expertise of event operators as those that make up the owners of North Byron Parklands it is quite evident that events that are proposed to be held at the Parklands site will be conducted in a successful and safe manner. With years of combined expertise these industry leaders will ensure that all events are conducted in a manner that ensures the management of all aspects of large and small events are adequately covered.

Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered.

Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment.

Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire.

From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application.

We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal.

North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

If you look at the multitude of government regional growth forecasts for areas such as the northern rivers it is plain to see that will a rapidly expanding population there is a strong need for a diverse and stable employment base. Jobs will be critical to the longer term sustainability of the region and therefore when projects such as North Byron Parklands come along they should be embraced and assisted by state and local governments.

With respect to the mapped wildlife corridor it should be pointed out that many parts of it identified as high conservation have in fact been cleared by previous land owners. The North Byron Parklands proposal has not only committed to helping restore this corridor, they have also committed to doing so in accordance with the Byron Shire Council wildlife map. This means having the opportunity to actually realise "on-ground" what the currently inaccurate council map purports is in existence. The end result will be a greatly improved corridor that actually has some functioning capabilities.

We need businesses such as Parklands who can provide employment opportunities to many in our community, particularly young people. North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities ? young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia. One of the unintended effects on the environment from outdoor events is light spill. So it is pleasing to see that this issue is well addressed under the organisation?s environmental standard. That is a key reason why I support the approval of the North Byron Parklands project. Letâ€™s look at the environmental initiatives that the North Byron Parklands people are proposing. Environmental auditing, sediment and erosion control, fencing to keep people in cleared areas, buffer zones to forests, inductions for workers, wildlife rescue teams during events, traffic control, no dogs, etc. The list of requirements they have placed on event operators is substantial and will result in a well protected environment. P4717	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jack Speirs (support)	One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives. P4718	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Annelies Allcock (support)	Many people worry about financially providing for themselves and their families and rightly so. Today it is hard to find a good job outside of the larger cities. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along offering lots of jobs it is surely in the interests of working families that such a project is located in a regional area. It should be approved just on its employment capabilities let alone any other benefits it is bound to bring. Aside from this benefit, I have also observed the cultural value of the Splendour in the Grass festival. I attended my first festival as a young teen, and it was from this festival that my interest in music, art and culture began. I cannot stress enough the important role that this festival has played in my own life, and surely the lives of thousands of others. While the festival will continue regardless of whether it is at the North Byron Parklands site, I feel that part of the particular appeal of this festival is its location. I attended this years event at Woodford, and while it is similarly picturesque, it seemed to lack the particular brand of 'magic' (for lack of a better term) that the Byron Shire possesses.

The Shire needs jobs, and it needs to maintain it's infamous vibrant arts culture.

P4719	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jess Laurie (support)	The proposed North Byron Parklands vegetation management plan will see a staged regime of tree planting across the site. Apart from the obvious habitat creation, etc, this level of mass planting will have other important environmental benefits. Benefits such as reduced soil erosion, salinity and of course will also help to greatly improve water quality through nature filtration processes associated with such significant biomass.

Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It's up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people.

If we consider the important contributions to the region made by tourism such as income generation and the creation of jobs then it follows that approving projects that have a large positive effect on increasing tourism rates will be a good thing for the State of NSW. North Byron Parklands will be responsible for drawing thousands of intra and interstate visitors, most of whom will require accommodation, food and beverages and in many instances will actively pursue some form of paying leisure activity. To let such an opportunity pass the region by would be a crime.

P4720	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rebecca Carson (support)

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone.

We really need this to get the go ahead. My friends and I will go to events at North Byron Parklands. Hopefully we will be able to get jobs at events.

Byron IS Splendour In The Grass. The amount of memories we have made there will last a life time. Please help us make a lifetime more by allowing the festival and every other festival to be bigger and better than ever - while still caring for the environment.

The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this.

Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

P4722	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from David Wigginton (support)

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

While much is made of the Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

Many projects that have occurred across the North Coast of NSW have not undertaken even a tenth of the assessment, survey and fauna/flora investigations as that completed by North Byron Parklands. The extensive vegetation mapping and the identification of fauna across the site, coupled with two koala surveys (which did not locate any koalas) demonstrate the level of environmental assessment undertaken by this organisation. When you then add the environmental controls as proposed in their environmental, health and safety management manual it is evident that these people are very serious about environmental management.

P4723	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Neil Ingoe (support)	It is unlikely that there is another events venue that has the level of environmental management systems in place as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. Based on ISO14001 the environmental policies and procedures to be implemented at this venue will provide robust monitoring and mitigation measures to ensure that fauna and flora is protected. Measures such as requiring suitable buffer zones between event activities and forest blocks is one such positive initiative.

North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

Having attended the event proposed for this site on several occasions, and comparing it with equivalents around the country, I can say with certainty that it is the best of its type in the country. Visiting this event brings with it a palpable sense that the organisers are in it for the love of it, not for bottom line. You could not ask for more thoughtful hosts.

P4724	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Marnie Johnston (support)

While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

Having read the environmental assessment report I can say without reserve that I strongly support the proposal put forward by North Byron Parklands. The application covers off on all of the important issues such as noise, traffic and ecology. It is so pleasing to see a development that has considered and responded to such a diverse range of issues. I firmly believe that the government should approve this application.

There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals.

The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue. The North Byron Parklands proposal brings so many positive benefits to the northern rivers region that based on planning merit alone, this application must be approved. Whether one considers employment, income generation, environmental protection measures or a massive boost to the region's tourism economy, this application exceeds all expectations. The North Byron Parklands site is an ideal home for the long-running Splendour in the Grass Music and Arts Festival. This festival is one of Australia's greatest and well run festivals. It attracts a wide variety of patrons ranging in age and demographic. This festival is an important cultural event for the musically inclined people in our community. I think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me.

Splendour in the Grass has successfully run 9 festivals at its previous home in Byron Bay and once at the Woodfordia Site in Woodford. Having attended festivals at both locations, as well as many others around the country, including for example Falls Festival in Lorne Victoria, and Playground Weekender at Wisemans Ferry in NSW, Splendour is without a doubt one of the best run. Its safety and security is paramount and the inclusive nature of the festival ensures that each and every one of the patrons can enjoy themselves with peace of mind and comfort.

Additionally, Splendour has a recognised reputation as being a 'Green' festival and was one of the first in Australia to take the initiative of providing carbon offsets with ticket purchases. In addition they have many other environmental initiatives as detailed in their Major Project Application. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address existing environmental issues such as sediment and erosion control during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended. Splendour does not simply do this because others do, they are the leaders and take pride in continually refining their environmental practices to ensure that festivals run in harmony with the environment.

Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area. Imagine an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.

Furthermore, Splendour works in conjunction with local police to ensure safety and security of patrons and also to ensure people do not drink and drive. Extensive camping will be available on site and shuttle buses are provided to alleviate the temptation to 'have a few' and then drive home.

Not only is the North Byron Parklands the optimum location for Splendour in the Grass, it is a key site that can foster the music and arts development in the local area and Australia wide.

I pledge my STRONG support to this application and believe that losing such a venue would leave a massive hole in the music and arts culture that is now so much a part of growing up in Australia.

P4732	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stephanie Tse (support)	While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures.

In relation to employment and wages the Byron local government area has one of the State's lowest average wages, around $31,000 per annum. A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities to the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities.

The culture of Byron Bay is fantastic and eye opening. This proposal will share our culture with all.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

P4737	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nicholas Piper (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process. North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it. We really need this to get the go ahead. My friends and I will go to events at North Byron Parklands. Hopefully we will be able to get jobs at events. P4738	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stephanie Jones (support)	With the Environmental, Health and Safety management manual prepared by North Byron Parklands the management of environmental values will be done so within a world class framework which will reduce potential and actual impacts on fauna and flora. The system is that comprehensive that it has even considered and regulated light spill from potable lighting towers. The proponents should be commended on such an initiative.

As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive.

If we consider the important contributions to the region made by tourism such as income generation and the creation of jobs then it follows that approving projects that have a large positive effect on increasing tourism rates will be a good thing for the State of NSW. North Byron Parklands will be responsible for drawing thousands of intra and interstate visitors, most of whom will require accommodation, food and beverages and in many instances will actively pursue some form of paying leisure activity. To let such an opportunity pass the region by would be a crime.

P4739	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from emma brinkman of student (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment. This proposal has endless opportunities including networking with Southern Cross University and SAE, furthering our regions creativeness, training and work experiences. In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area. P4740	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from George Surname (support)	With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas. The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. North Byron Parklands would help provide employment for many of these young people, thus giving them a reason to stay in the area. With a very large number of people reliant on the tourism industry for their income, whether they are an employee or an owner-operator, the North Byron Parklands project represents a potentially substantial increase in business for these people. If you consider just the sheer number of punters the proposal will attract one can start to see the economic benefits which will flow to the region. I think most businesses would view this proposal in a positive light. Making new friends, learning new activities, attending new and exciting events, a place where we are all welcome and safe. I am a fan of Splendour, however I don't understand why they need to have their own site. The Byron council, who represent the locals, have put in place a policy on how many big events can be held in the shire each year. This has been done due to the pressure being placed on the infrastructure and facilities to hold these events and I wholeheartedly agree with their decision to do this. Splendour are wanting to have their own land so they can host more big events which goes against everything the council is trying to do to protect their beautiful part of the world.

If Splendour really only wants to take up 3 days, then why can't they share a site with Bluesfest? Why have two festival sites in the one shire.

I think this letter to supporters of Splendour is misleading.

The Byron Shire Council identifies the creative industries sector as one of nine key focus areas which foster the prosperity of the shire through sustainable job creation. The shire has a long history of creative endeavours and this needs to be built on by supporting such proposals as that put forward by North Byron Parklands. Generating a large number of jobs for the area, it is extremely important that it is approved. Doing so will provide a broad spectrum of the local community with jobs that would otherwise not be available.

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

P4743	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jennifer Littler (support)	Splendour is one of the better festivals out there. It provides a safe secure environment for persons to enjoy various types of music, arts, and friends, in a beautiful scenic venue - that is when it is held in Byron. Coming from Byron Shire I know exactly how many extra people - and therefore profits are added to the local community in the days surrounding Splendour in the Grass. Byron and its surrounding Shires need this economic input to sustain the community in the winter months, when the beach and natural wonders seem less attractive to prospective visitors. It gives visitors a chance to see a different part of Byron - to see that it is not just beautiful beaches - but scenic natural wonders also. Also, with the major number of locals attending, (and the sale of locals tickets is a good indicator of this), it means that there is less chance of the venue getting trashed as they will not wreck their own home as they are aware how precious it is. It is true there are a number of threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of irregular noise to such species shows that they will usually relocate and return quickly once noise ceases. This a positive result for all parties and it is good to know the species will not be disturbed some 260 days of the year. Having read the North Byron Parklands submission and attended many events over the past number of years I am blown away by the level of detail and the huge range of control measures that this development offers to ensure smooth and successful events. The North Coast of NSW needs a development of this nature and it should be approved by the NSW government. We need to look to the future for training and employment opportunities. A real estate industry is not enough and we will lose our young people to cities if we do not offer them opportunities such as those provided by this proposal.

This is why we NEED to keep Splendour in the Grass in Byron Bay.

North Byron Parklands has held a number of tree planting days on the site where they have invited the public to get their hands dirty and plant a tree in the parts of the wildlife corridor that were just open paddock. It speaks volumes for the hypocrisy of local objectors that not one of them ever turned up to put a seedling in the ground to help expand the fragmented wildlife corridor that they so loudly claim to be safeguarding. Those 7,500 trees are now some metres high and thriving.

When you have the combined expertise of event operators as those that make up the owners of North Byron Parklands it is quite evident that events that are proposed to be held at the Parklands site will be conducted in a successful and safe manner. With years of combined expertise these industry leaders will ensure that all events are conducted in a manner that ensures the management of all aspects of large and small events are adequately covered.

The North Byron Parklands proposal brings so many positive benefits to the northern rivers region that based on planning merit alone, this application must be approved. Whether one considers employment, income generation, environmental protection measures or a massive boost to the region's tourism economy, this application exceeds all expectations. On this basis this proposal should be approved by the state government.

With its focus on cultural heritage management, North Byron Parklands can instill in the region a greater understanding of our local indigenous and non-indigenous ancestry. The cultural centre would provide unique learning opportunities for staff.

The North Byron Parklands project has undertaken both a high level of fauna and flora assessments and a comprehensive environmental risk assessment process. As a result they have developed a management manual that covers a range of aspects including the environment. They have even developed a standalone environmental induction form for all staff and contractors that clearly stipulates what can and cannot take place while on site. These measures are very impressive indeed.

Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events.

The North Byron Parklands has been subjected to decades of intensive cattle farming and sugar cane crops. With respect to the cattle, they have severely degraded the understory of most of the forest blocks on the site. The Parklands proposal includes a commitment to fence off many of the forest blocks which will allow a much needed fauna understory to regrow and which will provide habitat for many vertebrate creatures.

If the event is brought back to NSW it will benefit NSW and especially byron bay business owners with the money that is generated from the event.

As such they have implemented a number of requirements including on site environmental inductions, speed limiting devises, signage and a wildlife rescue team. This is just one example of the sound environmental practices they are proposing.

Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy.

Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward.

With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs.

There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses.

North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

While some states can fall back on the mining industry, NSW has to rely on a variety of industry sectors to help fund the expansion of the state. Opportunities for employment such as that being offered by the North Byron Parklands proposal is vital to the sustainability of regional areas.

So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. There is currently approximately 294,00 people living on the Northern Rivers and this number is said to increase to approximately 376,000 residents by 2036. This huge increase in the next 26 years requires action to create employment opportunities in the region. P4754	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Corry Bennett (support)	The local area containing the Parklands site has an ancient meeting place for Aboriginal people to come to together for cultural purposes. The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people. North Byron Parklands is all about hosting lots of different events, all of which require people to work in a variety of jobs. One event can employ hundreds of people for a period of time and in an area such as Byron such job opportunities are very welcome. We should be doing all we can to make this project happen. Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed. The North Byron Parkland proposal sounds very beneficial to our youth, elderly and families. A fantastic way for our society to be brought together.

A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. That's the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Let's get it approved.

Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events.

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual.

I was born in Byron Bay and have grown up in Billinudgel, as a 14 year old I attended my first Splendour in the Grass and have grown up looking forward to the festival every year. In recent years my younger siblings have started coming to Splendour with me, so the festival is not only an opportunity to see first class live music, it is a family affair. We hope more than anything that Splendour will return home, where it should be.

Tourism is one of the biggest employers in the northern rivers area and the North Byron Parklands proposal is projecting that it will bring thousands of people to the area each year. Increasing visitor numbers to the area is the surest way to help grow these tourism businesses particularly when the proposal shall bring large numbers of people to the area in traditionally slow times.

The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. North Byron Parklands can be a showcase for our local talents.

The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged. The proposed North Byron Parklands vegetation management plan will see a staged regime of tree planting across the site. Apart from the obvious habitat creation, etc, this level of mass planting will have other important environmental benefits. Benefits such as reduced soil erosion, salinity and of course will also help to greatly improve water quality through nature filtration processes associated with such significant biomass.

If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably.

While much is made of the Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment.

In relation to employment and wages the Byron local government area has one of the State's lowest average wages, around $31,000 per annum. A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities to the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities.

The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regions' economies. The proposed North Byron Parklands project will result in a massive increase in the number of domestic visitors to the area and to a lesser degree, will also attract many overseas visitors. As this industry is so important to the region it makes good sense for this project to proceed.

The North Byron Parkland proposal sounds very beneficial to our youth, elderly and families. A fantastic way for our society to be brought together.

If you were to analysis the professional event management of such festivals as Splendour in the Grass, Parklife, Shore Thing and Sunset Suns one could only come to the conclusion that these event operators are up there with the most successful an well managed events in Australia. Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way.

People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. The North Byron Parklands is the very thing that our locals would love.

From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application.

The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast.

The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view.

There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals.

Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire. How many fantastic cultural events and opportunities has NSW lost to other states, particularly to Queensland and Victoria over the past decade. P4764	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Philip Tolhurst of Fantech (support)	The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements. Young people living on the north coast have a tough time finding employment, and particularly jobs that are of interest to them. The Parklands proposal will provide hundreds of jobs for people in our area and this represents a huge plus for a lot of kids.

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

The North Byron Parklands sounds really interesting and exciting.

P4767	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ben Walsh (support)	I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet. Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events. While it has to be recognised that the recently upgraded Pacific Highway and the existing Tweed Valley Way represent the biggest barrier to fauna migration in an east-west direction, the owners of North Byron Parklands have committed to improving the currently degraded wildlife corridor in a number of ways. Putting aside the fact that they have already planted over 7,000 trees in the corridor area and removed large quantities of noxious weeds, their vegetation management plan will dramatically improve vegetation cover and thereby improve species movement opportunities through the further planting of endemic trees. This is a huge positive.

Splendour in the grass IS a huge positive to the Byron shire cultural growth and economy. This town once was seen as an exciting bohemian culture hub, thriving off the growth of Splendour and other festivals, however with more people writing in to object the call for culture, this town is slowly moving to a retirement village lacking a central hub for culture, which would be the new Parklands. If Byron has a designated outlet for events not only will it stimulate the economy of local business, but reduce the number of out of control people on the streets which seems to be the current stereotypical image people hold on festivals - of any kind. Parklands will appeal to toddlers to 90 year olds, with not only leisure opportunities like splendour and other festivals where one can experience the greatness and true value of music as a global culture and increase motivation of youth in a recognized musical town, who splendour continually supports, holding competitions for local bands to perform but also will give keen gardeners and caretakers a relaxing job, maintaining the property

To deny this opportunity is an utterly ridiculous decision, and will leave Byron flapping like a dieing fish in a damn once full of water, completely dried up. Craving a source of culture as the town turns culturally dead, linking arms with gods retirement village in nearby Ballina.

P4769	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Leigh Hope (support)	2010 was my first ever Splendour experience. It was also my first experience of Woodfordia. While this year's Splendour was extremely convenient for me living just 40 minutes away, I am fully supportive of Splendour's move back to the Byron Bay region. Woodfordia is such a wonderful example of how a live music/festival venue can work so harmoniously with the environment that I think it would be beneficial in a number of ways for Splendour to have it's own home. The idea that an area can be so specifically designed to allow for regeneration of the environment between events, that there is allowance for wildlife to be supported and not disturbed and that such a huge parcel of land will remain as natural bushland and habitat is something that I am very grateful for.

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

I had such an amazing time at Splendour this year and look forward to attending future Splendour festivals. With good access from the highway I won't even think twice about coming to the beautiful new location!

The environmental assessments completed for the North Byron Parklands proposal identify a number of threatened species which in the most part are winged creatures. It is most likely (based on research elsewhere) that these creatures will move away from any light and noise disturbances for no longer than for the period they occur. This is particularly true if there are specific food resources available on the North Byron Parklands site. So, once an event is finished it is more than probably that these animals will return and enjoy the quietude that will prevail at this site for the vast majority of the year.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

P4771	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Justin Ryan (support)	From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive.

P4772	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Daniel Potter (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment. Tourism is one of the biggest industries and employers on the north coast and is very important to many people for their livelihood. In recent years the industry has struggled somewhat due to economic and other factors and there is a real need to do everything possible to help support this industry. One such way is to approve projects such as that proposed by North Byron Parklands. This project alone will generate massive visitor numbers and importantly the influx of the visitors will occur during traditional slow times such as winter, etc. North Byron Parklands offers music, entertainment and culture for our locals and tourists. What a great way of putting Byron Bay more on the map. It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

Most of the businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire are sole traders and do not offer any employment opportunities to the community. Bringing Splendour in the Grass festival back to Byron Bay would result in North Byron Parklands offering many new employment opportunities for the residents in the region.

In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area.

Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â€” young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

The local area containing the Parklands site has an ancient meeting place for Aboriginal people to come to together for cultural purposes. The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people.

There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

I have been to Splendour in Byron Bay and it was amazing. The local residents were friendly and the business owners seemed to benefit greatly from the punters. I believe that Byron Bay relies on the Splendour weekend business and they enjoy the once a year event as it keeps tourism booming in the area.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parklandâs environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

Letâs look at the environmental initiatives that the North Byron Parklands people are proposing. Environmental auditing, sediment and erosion control, fencing to keep people in cleared areas, buffer zones to forests, inductions for workers, wildlife rescue teams during events, traffic control, no dogs, etc. The list of requirements they have placed on event operators is substantial and will result in a well protected environment.

Young people living on the north coast have a tough time finding employment, and particularly jobs that are of interest to them. The Parklands proposal will provide hundreds of jobs for people in our area and this represents a huge plus for a lot of kids.

Splendour in the Grass is an iconic Byron Bay event that should continue running for years to come.

The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

Byron Bay is synonymous with Splendour in the Grass and while Woodford was a blast - it just wasn't the same as Byron. Not to mention the fact that people who travel from far and wide always extend their stay by a day or 2 on each side therefore making the most of their experience of this amazing town and it's surrounds.

Please please please please allow us to bring Splendour where it belongs!!!

Thanking you

P4777	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Craig Clark (support)	To whom it may concern

Fostering the arts and music community in regional Australia is paramount to the continued and sustainable growth of our great country. Recent developments in national politics have shown that regional Australia needs development like the proposal put forth by North Byron Shire Parklands and Splendour in The Grass. I am an environmental practitioner during the day and an avid music fan in my spare time. My family enjoys outings to live music and events like Splendour in the Grass give multigeneration equity to music and the arts in regional Australia. The economic advantages are visible and the sustainable growth in communities like Byron Bay and surrounding communities is very important to attracting people to the local area. I fully support the application made and wish to provide my input through this letter to help gain approval for the planned return of Splendour in the Grass

(and future events) to the Byron Shire.

Specifically the following points should be noted in regards to the application made :

(1) Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

(2) The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. North Byron Parklands would help provide employment for many of these young people, thus giving them a reason to stay in the area.

(3) The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal.

(4) With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management.

These points above, and the fact that many people are long time supporters of events like Splendour in The Grass (me 8 times and counting) means that growth is sustainable and economic advantages are ongoing. These events continue to inject funds back into the community, engage in environmentally sustainable activities both within the community and abroad, and continue to provide education to many people about the advantages and disadvantages of regional Australia.

Kind Regards

If you look at the multitude of government regional growth forecasts for areas such as the northern rivers it is plain to see that will a rapidly expanding population there is a strong need for a diverse and stable employment base. Jobs will be critical to the longer term sustainability of the region and therefore when projects such as North Byron Parklands come along they should be embraced and assisted by state and local governments.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. P4781	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Nathan Kameta (support)	Dear NSW Department of Planning North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved.

We have heard it many times before that living in a community which has locally based jobs provides for a health and sustainable society. Jobs in the north of New South Wales are hard to come by at the best of times so when a project comes along which will create new jobs for people it is important to support it. That is a key reason why I support the approval of the North Byron Parklands project.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

There?s not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

Many supposed local environmental groups have been invited to visit the North Byron Parklands and to participate in the public tree planting days that have been held over the past few years. The average annual household income in the Byron Shire and the Northern Rivers is substantially lower than NSW (approximately $55,000 compared with $71,000) and as such employment opportunities generated by North Byron Parklands would be incredibly valuable to the Shire and the region. How many fantastic cultural events and opportunities has NSW lost to other states, particularly to Queensland and Victoria over the past decade? Lets not make the same mistake again by letting the North Byron Parklands project slip through our fingers. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy. Under the North Byron Parklands environmental management manual there is a particular Environmental Standard that requires events being held on the site to adhere to a number of stringent environmental controls. The controls include buffer zones, environmental inductions, fencing aspects, wildlife rescue teams and lighting requirement to reduce illumination of bush blocks. I am unaware of any other outdoor event venue requiring such tight environmental controls. Parklands will certainly be moving towards Australian best practice, if not world's best environmental practice. Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing in support of establishing a permanent base for the Splendour festival at the North Byron Parklands.

Byron Shire and the wider northern rivers region has been a fast growing area for the creative industries sector. Huge numbers of people have moved into the region with expectations of finding work in this sector and more than ever there is a need to ensure that projects that directly and indirectly benefit this growing sector are supported. The Parklands proposal if approved will become a dominant force in expanding the creative industries sector and will provide substantial job opportunities.

Tourism is one of the biggest employers in the northern rivers area and the North Byron Parklands proposal is projecting that it will bring thousands of people to the area each year. Increasing visitor numbers to the area is the surest way to help grow these tourism businesses particularly when the proposal shall bring large numbers of people to the area in traditionally slow times.

A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. That's the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Let's get it approved.

Yours Sincerely,

Lisa Cooksey

North Byron Parklands is likely to be the first arts and music venue that has prepared an environmental, health and safety management manual to manage interactions with the environment. The environmental standard from this manual provides a range of measures designed to protect the environment. Given that the activity in question is low impact the environmental management of the site will easily achieve positive benefits for the environment.

Much of the agricultural and forestry industries of the northern rivers has significantly declined over the past decade and many people have been forced into lower paid sectors such as retail and tourism. Now more than ever there is a need for diversifying the employment base and the North Byron Parklands proposal will do exactly that. With job positions projected to be more than 200 there is a very real need to approve such a project.

Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a "resource centre"™ where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say.

I think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me.

P4787	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Pete Capra (support)	The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger. Businesses from across the northern rivers involved in tourism related activities stand to benefit significantly from the influx of visitors both from within and outside NSW. The likely spend from attendees at events held at North Byron Parklands would be strong given people will procure accommodation, buy food and drink and purchase a range of other goods and services. This will translate into an economic bonus for the region that must not be squandered. In addition to the points above I would like to add that Splendour in the Grass has become an iconic Australian festival that is synonymous with Byron Bay. I have attended the five most recent Splendour festivals, including this year's one at Woodford and can say with certainty that Byron is by far the better location. The prospect of losing such a successful and popular festival in the Byron Shire is not a good one. The proposed new site will provide for a sustainable future for this great Australian festival.

I haven't been to the site in Byron, but the extensive tourism that this event can create for a town should be enough motivation to approve brining Splendour home! Those who think that the environment will be impacted by this should also acknowledge that MONEY is going to help the environment and your better to bring people to the town in a postive manner rather than ask for money for an environment that no-one gets to experience.

The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal.

North Byron Parklands offers music, entertainment and culture for our locals and tourists. What a great way of putting Byron Bay more on the map.

Let's bring Splendour home and tourists and money to Byron in a controlled manner and all enjoy the area.

P4789	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Sally Chan (support)	To the NSW Department of Planning, Events such as Splendour in the Grass are beneficial in many ways for the surrounding community and environment. The organisers always strive to ensure that these events are ecofriendly, with recycling and an optional fee to neutralize the carbon output of the event now standards of the festival. Furthermore the tourism that the event generates is beyond compare - many patrons of the festival stay a few extra days to relax and explore the community.

The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

In the Byron and northern rivers areas tourism is subject to busy times and quiet times. It is planned that a number of events will occur at the North Byron Parklands site each year and one of these takes place in winter when tourism businesses are struggling to cover costs. Building a dedicated events venue in the Byron Shire will have a number of very positive benefits for the tourism industry which is a good thing.

As a youth of the area I am constantly searching for ways to broaden my horizons. I believe this proposal will offer new opportunities, new jobs, new experiences and new ways to develop.

P4790	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Bobbie Ryan (support)	Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged. One of the unintended effects on the environment from outdoor events is light spill. So it is pleasing to see that this issue is well addressed under the organisation's environmental standard. This standard requires lighting to be directed downwards, away from forest blocks, using low pressure sodium vapour lights where possible, and turning off light towers at a certain time of night. Such measures will greatly reduce disturbances to any localised fauna during such events. Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people. P4791	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kiah Stopford (support)	As a youth of the area I am constantly searching for ways to broaden my horizons. I believe this proposal will offer new opportunities, new jobs, new experiences and new ways to develop. The North Byron Parklands people have obviously spent a lot of time developing up systems and processes to manage the environment in which they operate. It impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment? The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast. P4792	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Hugo Raggett (support)	The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this. The North Byron Parklands proposal has considered both indigenous and non-indigenous issues associated with the proposal. In particular, Parklands has worked closely with the local Tweed/Byron Aboriginal Land Council and has complemented a number of archaeological digs to help determine the significance of parts of the site. It is pleasing to see that certain areas of the site will become 'out of bounds' to protect identified areas of importance. Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing. To whom it may concern,

I'm not going to sit here and say that I am a 'Splendour patron', although I like to think that I am. I have attended the festival for two years now #2009 at Belongil, and 2010 at Woodford#, but it holds a very dear place in my heart. I am a music lover. No, actually. Music is my biggest passion, and this includes music festivals. Having attended a vast array of festivals since the age of 14 #I'm now 21#, I like to think that I can at least be considered a 'music festival' patron... If it is any consolation, out of all of the music festivals that I have attended, my fondest musical festival memories are those from Splendour.

Splendour isn't merely a music festival, though. It is a means of escapism, learning, unity and, above all, togetherness. And as cliché as all this may sound, I honestly, truly believe it.

I also believe in these statements:

Having read the North Byron Parklands submission and attended many events over the past number of years I am blown away by the level of detail and the huge range of control measures that this development offers to ensure smooth and successful events. The North Coast of NSW needs a development of this nature and it should be approved by the NSW government.

While much is made about the supposed wildlife corridor in and around the North Byron Parklands site the fact is that much of the vegetation is patchy and degraded. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue.

Splendour in the Grass cannot and will not die. I believe in it, so much so, that I'm neglecting my exam study to write to you.

P4794	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from damian cunningham of Peats Ridge Festival (support)	Having worked in the music industry both in Australia and the UK for over twenty years with the majority of my time in the music festival and touring side of the business i know from personal experience the need for consistency and this is essential in the festival industry.

Having a secure and sustainable base for an event is very important for both the growth of the local and national industry along with the positive impact you can have in long term green projects which can not be implemented over the short term.

Australia has a wonderful reputation for providing top quality music festivals that are both entertaining and educational, be that direct or by being exposed to differing approaches to every day tasks, with the confidence of a long term home for Splendour in the Grass can come long term projects within sustainability and the entertainment industry that can effect the Australian community both locally and nationally.

Local authorities,councils and planning department need to be open to the Australian festival industry and support the long term goals of these events to both maintain progress and support to what is often a huge employment and support network to hard working australians in the performing arts, music industry and associated production industry both locally and nationally.

For these reasons i strongly support the move back to Byronshire and the proposed site at North Byron Parklands.

This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment? In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures. This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

I have been to many outdoor event sites over the past number of years but have never come across a venue that has taken so much effort to develop and implement so many environmental programs. When events are not being staged at North Byron Parklands, there will be reforestation and noxious weed removal activities. When there are events at this site they will need to comply with a bunch of strict environmental policies and procedures. If only other venues could take a leaf out of these guys' book.

When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land.

The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone.

With its focus on cultural heritage management, North Byron Parklands can instill in the region a greater understanding of our local indigenous and non-indigenous ancestry. The cultural centre would provide unique learning opportunities for staff.

The North Byron Parklands will be the 1st proposed land use that will see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for the site. For many years the North Byron Parklands site has been used for intensive agricultural activities and land clearing, impacting on the site dramatically. North Byron Parklands has planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year to restore the site. This has to be seen as a great result for the local environment.

In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

The projected visitor nights generated by the North Byron Parklands in its fifth year of operation is in the order of 97,000. This is a massive accommodation boon for hotels, motels, apartments and camping facilities in the region and does not even take into account the other forms of tourism expenditure that such visitors will make. Tourism is a key industry in northern NSW and should be supported in order to maintain and grow the sector into the future.

A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. That's the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Let's get it approved.

Not only have the North Byron Parklands organisation developed what must be considered world's best practice environmental management systems and processes, they are also planning to have an environmental education program folded into the mix for good measure. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure.

Byron and the Northern Rivers unemployment rate (around 8.5%) is substantially higher than the NSW average of 5.5%. We need businesses such as Parklands who can provide employment opportunities to many in our community, particularly young people.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals.

There are not very many opportunities in the far north coast for professional event management experience, especially since Splendour in the Grass has (hopefully temporarily!) gone. North Byron Parklands would provide excellent training in the area of event management. With up twenty days of events a year and the associated planning involved with both large and small events, this is a jewel for retaining our young professionals and aspiring professionals.

Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. Music and arts should be embraced in our society because of these jobs that it creates and North Byron Parklands if it is approved is set to be a big employer for the area. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support.

One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed.

If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures.

If you were to analysis the professional event management of such festivals as Splendour in the Grass, Parklife, Shore Thing and Sunset Suns one could only come to the conclusion that these event operators are up there with the most successful an well managed events in Australia. Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way.

North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

A lot of my friends are moving outside of Byron Bay to bigger and better opportunities. It would be great if we had those opportunities offered to us closer to home.

The preservation of ecological values in and around the Parklands site is an important aspect of North Byron Parklands proposal. The large amount of scientific assessment that has been conducted shows that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values on the site.

With so many people moving into capital cities the government needs to ensure that regional employment opportunities are secured whenever they are offered. Parklands have a project that will provide plenty of jobs for a range of people and it is super important that they jobs stay in our area.

It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region.

Splendour in the Grass is a fantastic and memorable event, well run and well managed. Byron Bay is the home of Splendour in the Grass and it would be fantastic to see it back there again in its new home, the beautiful North Byron Parklands.

To Whom It May Concern

BRING SPLENDOUR IN THE GRASS BACK TO BYRON BAY!!

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application.

With its focus on cultural heritage management, North Byron Parklands can instill in the region a greater understanding of our local indigenous and non-indigenous ancestry. The cultural centre would provide unique learning opportunities for staff.

Yours faithfully,

Tim Rickman

P4809	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Yasmin Edwards of Circuit Travel (support)	The North Byron Parklands project has undertaken both a high level of fauna and flora assessments and a comprehensive environmental risk assessment process. As a result they have developed a management manual that covers a range of aspects including the environment. They have even developed a standalone environmental induction form for all staff and contractors that clearly stipulates what can and cannot take place while on site. These measures are very impressive indeed. Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer? P4810	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Dave Shannon (support)	One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land. Under the North Byron Parklands environmental management manual there is a particular Environmental Standard that requires events being held on the site to adhere to a number of stringent environmental controls. The controls include buffer zones, environmental inductions, fencing aspects, wildlife rescue teams and lighting requirement to reduce illumination of bush blocks. I am unaware of any other outdoor event venue requiring such tight environmental controls. Parklands will certainly be moving towards Australian best practice, if not world's best environmental practice.

It is a matter of seeing the opportunities for positive environmental outcomes in what are presently unexpected places. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. Those in the position to bring about such change should be encouraged, not demonised.

There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. With a flatter than normal couple of years this extra income will be warmly welcome by these businesses.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives.

With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. The locals need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management.

As a student and previous volunteer of similar festivals these provide tremendous opportunities and experience for people like myself.

Byron Bay is a beautiful and unique place and I believe that granting the permit can only have a positive influence.

One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed.

In relation to employment, with so many people moving to coastal areas governments have a role as planners to ensure that industries and the jobs they bring are afforded every opportunity of success. Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire.

P4815	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Carmen Myler (support)	I understand that the Byron is now hoping to limit the number of large events being held there each year and, as a person who lives near Byron and regularly attends events like Bluesfest as well as visiting and shopping in Byron, I think it's an excellent idea to limit the pressure on Byron's infrastructure and fragile environment. One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature. In northern rivers we're really trying to push our eco-tourism options and I think Splendour in the Grass fits well with this and you could even place conditions on them to be even more environmentally responsible as a condition of their approval.

If Woodfordia in Queensland can be highly respected as an enviro-friendly venue which hosts a number of festivals with large crowds, then surely North Byron Parklands can achieve the same level of acceptance and respect if given the chance.

Unlike some other festivals, Splendour only sells three-day passes which means that once people are in Byron, they stay, which would limit the traffic of coming and going associated with other festivals.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

Parklands is one such business that makes good sense to locate in the Byron Shire. In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only ever using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue. Furthermore, not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption. To Whom It May Concern,

As a music, arts, culture and festival lover, i urge you to allow Splendour in The Grass (SITG) to operate at the North Byron Parklands.

The organisers of this event do an incredible job. SITG keeps thousands of people very happy, it supports the incredible arts and music culture in Oz to thrive, and it employs hundreds and hundreds of poeple.

This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The proposal is a tangible cultural asset for our young people.

It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. I saw this first hand as a patron at the 2010 event - it was incredibel!

It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

SITG organisers have my FULL SUPPORT to move into their home at North Byron Parklands to operate what is a WORLD CLASS FESTIVAL AND ASSEST TO NSW, and I urge the NSW Dept of Planning to support them as well.

The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. North Byron Parklands would help provide employment for many of these young people, thus giving them a reason to stay in the area.

In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area.

The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. It's about young people and being young. This is really important.

Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire.

Being young it's important to get out there. North Byron Parklands offers us opportunities to interact on levels that promote us to look outside the square. It would be a great opportunity for us to have this venue available.

The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant.

On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives.

Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a 'resource centre' where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say.

To Whom it May Concern

I write in support of approving the use of the North Byron Parklands for the Splendour in the Grass Festival.

Splendour in the Grass has been held in Byron Bay for 9 years and as a result of putting on a fantastic event, demand for tickets has seen them grow out of their old venue at Belongil Fields.

In 2010, Splendour was forced to re-locate to Woodfordia, QLD to provide the fans with what they have come to expect... an exciting, beautiful festival showcasing large overseas musical acts, right down to giving local bands a start all mixed with art, fashion, food and fun.

Splendour attracts thousands of extra visitors from all over Australia and the world to Byron Bay for the weeks surrounding the festival, providing a massive boost to tourism numbers during that period.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

Also, many local businesses that rely on these type of events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region.

Yours Faithfully

In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward.

What other venue in NSW or Australia for that matter has paid so much attention to environmental management considerations as North Byron Parklands? If all other outdoor venues even implemented 10% of what Parklands is proposing then we would see a massive improvement in environmental outcomes for this important creative industries sector. This development is likely to become the best practice benchmark for all other similar organisations.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. The North Byron Parklands proposal will see the largest restoration program the region has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its highly detailed vegetation management plan which will result in 1000's of trees being strategically planted around the site. The wildlife corridor has been significantly degraded over many decades due to primary production and agriculture activities. This means the corridor is currently very fragmented and in real need of revegetation.

In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures.

P4829	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from marjorie dixon (support)	While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all. In relation to event management there is no standard manual that an event operator can refer to. Typically successful management of an event is a result of past experience and the refinement of policies and processes. The North Byron Parklands team have been responsible for creating and hosting some of the most successful outdoor music festivals in the country. Having hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers through their turnstiles it is reassuring to know such professionals will be at the helm at the Parklands site.

Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

There's not as much employment opportunities as people think around Byron Bay, the majority of the businesses are non employing, sole operators. North Byron Parklands would improve these numbers for the youth and others.

Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people. The average annual household income in the Byron Shire and the Northern Rivers is substantially lower than NSW (approximately $55,000 compared with $71,000) and as such employment opportunities generated by North Byron Parklands would be incredibly valuable to the Shire and the region. If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably. As time progresses and we all grow up a little with our environmental outlook, we will recognise that being successful in business can also mean being successful with the ecology and environment in which your business operates. Those in the position to bring about such change should be encouraged, not demonised.

Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it would be a good step in the right direction for youth employment.

All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector.

Dear Sir or Madam

I write in favour of holding future Music Fesitvals at this site in Byron Bay.

Jobs, tourism and culture are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal.

The events management industry is extremely competitive and only those operators who can demonstrate compliance with all facets of event management time and time again are the ones that survive. The owners of North Byron Parklands each have years of experience in bringing highly successful events to the general public. Such an outstanding track record only comes about through effective, well planned event policies and procedures.

The Northern Rivers region is an amazing place that deserves to be showcased to the rest of Australia and to the world. The lucky few who attend music festivals in this region can attest that this awesome location is second to none.

Sincerely

When events are not being staged at North Byron Parklands, there will be reafforestation and noxious weed removal activities. When there are events at this site they will need to comply with a bunch of strict environmental policies and procedures. If only other venues could take a leaf out of these guys' book. There is currently approximately 294,00 people living on the Northern Rivers and this number is said to increase to approximately 376,000 residents by 2036. This huge increase in the next 26 years requires action to create employment opportunities in the region. North Byron Parklands can offer an array of employment opportunities in the future to tackle this population increase. The North Byron Parklands project has undertaken both a high level of fauna and flora assessments and a comprehensive environmental risk assessment process. As a result they have developed a management manual that covers a range of aspects including the environment. They have even developed a standalone environmental induction form for all staff and contractors that clearly stipulates what can and cannot take place while on site. These measures are very impressive indeed.

The list of events that each of the owners of North Byron Parklands have held over the past ten years is absolutely staggering in terms of venues, numbers of patrons and dealing successfully with a range of regulatory authorities. Such experience will provide a significant edge when events are held at North Byron Parklands and will no doubt make for a succession of successful events.

Having read the North Byron Parklands submission and attended many events over the past number of years I am blown away by the level of detail and the huge range of control measures that this development offers to ensure smooth and successful events. The North Coast of NSW needs a development of this nature and it should be approved by the NSW government.

To whom it may concern,

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

The proposed North Byron Parklands vegetation management plan will see a staged regime of tree planting across the site. Apart from the obvious habitat creation, etc, this level of mass planting will have other important environmental benefits. Benefits such as reduced soil erosion, salinity and of course will also help to greatly improve water quality through nature filtration processes associated with such significant biomass.

It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region.

The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. It's about young people and being young. This is really important.

Kindest regards,

A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. P4840	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Gwilym Lucas (support)	I attended Splendour in the Grass for the first time in July at Woodfordia. I thought that it was run extremely well in terms of organisation and environmental awareness. It was lovely to see all the environmentally friend groups there, most of whom were from Byron it seems. It was an amazing festival. Extremely low incidents for a festival of its size and all of these minor injuries were handled fantastically well. There were people acting as the environment "police" giving our friendly information and recycling was the best that I have seen at any event large or small. I personally would give the organisers a tick of approval to put on events in my locale (I live backing onto a reserve in the ACT). Overall, I cannot see how a permanent home would not be an environmental win for the Byron region. Sincerely, Gwilym Lucas. One of the big threats to the environment is the accidental ignition of a bushfire. The North Byron Parklands group have identified this as a risk and have developed a Bushfire Standard that address this issue and places a number of carefully considered controls such as provision of bulk water tanks, having the Rural Fire Brigade onsite during major events and the provision of fire extinguishers, etc. I am confident that with such measures and given most of the site is cleared that this issue will be well managed. North Byron Parklands is all about hosting lots of different events, all of which require people to work in a variety of jobs. One event can employ hundreds of people for a period of time and in an area such as Byron such job opportunities are very welcome. We should be doing all we can to make this project happen. A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. That's the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Let's get it approved.

While there are a number of identified threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, all of these creatures are winged species such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of intermittent noise shows that such fauna will usually relocate during such episodes and will return quickly once noise abates. Further the movement of such fauna is entirely dependent on food resources. If there are no fruits and blossoms across the site then the presence of these species will be very low.

So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With the dollar at record heights more Australians are considering overseas travel and this will impact on local tourism dependant businesses. If a project like North Byron Parklands succeeds in gaining approval then this region stands to deliver a much needed and welcomed tourism boost. The government must seriously take this into account.

North Byron Parklands will foster partnerships with key regional, national and international learning institutions such as Southern Cross University and the School of Audio Engineering (SAE). These partnerships will further strengthen the region's creative industries, providing world class training and work experience opportunities.

When the people at Splendour In The Grass put the call out for help I am more than happy to oblige. While my friends attend every Splendour without doubt, this year was my first attendance. It was AMAZING. No doubt the highlight of my year, Splendour In The Grass was (alot of) money well spent. While slightly hard to get to from Victoria, the trek to Woodford was well worth it. My fondest memory is of the organic breakfast shop we enjoyed wholemeal foods every morning. They were out of Byron, and had traveled up to Woodford with the festival! Where Byron is easier to travel to for commuters, it also proves to do local businesses a huge favour by bringing many cashed up spenders and even promoting the businesses that run inside the festival like our delicious organic breakfasts! Please let Splendour return to Byron so not only can i seek out that delicious wholemeal food, and have an easier time getting there, but also so i can experience what my friends have raved about in previous years!

Splendour In The Grass would also like to direct your attention to the environmental benefits to letting the festival return to Byron Bay. Merely a few are outlined below for you:

The North Byron Parklands Project will impact the environment positively and should be supported. The preservation of ecological values in and around the Parklands site is an important aspect of North Byron Parklands proposal. The large amount of scientific assessment that has been conducted shows that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values on the site.

Much of the agricultural and forestry industries of the northern rivers has significantly declined over the past decade and many people have been forced into lower paid sectors such as retail and tourism. Now more than ever there is a need for diversifying the employment base and the North Byron Parklands proposal will do exactly that. With job positions projected to be more than 200 there is a very real need to approve such a project.

Splendour In The Grass are very environmentally aware, providing carbon offset tickets and many 'natural' and 'organic' foods, drinks and clothing inside the festival grounds. Having such a renowned event in Byron Bay again will no doubt serve to popularise and impress upon people the seriousness of environmental impacts to Byron Bay, while an ongoing association between such a popular event and the town of Byron should only serve to promote tourism all year round!

Please, Bring Splendour Home.

Thanking you, Meaghan

These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives.

With so many people relying on tourism for their income on the North Coast there is an obligation on behalf of state and local governments to help facilitate any reasonable project that will increase domestic and international tourist numbers. P4845	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jenny Gale (support)	With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas. Young people living on the north coast have a tough time finding employment, and particularly jobs that are of interest to them. The Parklands proposal will provide hundreds of jobs for people in our area and this represents a huge plus for a lot of kids. North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. Future plantings and assisted regeneration in these areas will significantly increase opportunities for movement of terrestrial fauna. This is only one of many significant programs that will enhance the environment within and adjacent to the site. Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable. P4846	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Kelli Perkins (support)	Apart from the amazing environmental initiatives covering fauna and flora across the North Byron Parklands site that have been developed, these guys are also going to tackle waste, recycling and the minimisation of resource consumption through a number of proven effective measures. They have even proposed a ?resource centre? where materials can be stored and used again and again for other events. This is a pretty impressive effort I must say.

The North Byron Parklands will see the subject site have the opportunity to maintain low impact activity that will see the site unoccupied for some 75% of the year. By allowing the sites land to rest both fauna and flora growth will be encouraged across and adjacent to the site. This restoration will be a positive outcome for the local environment.

P4847	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lucy Slater (support)	To Whom it may concern, The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment. How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. Great job parklands. I would like to also add that this festival is such a positive experience to all who go to it. I went for the first time this year and was amazed at how people behaved so well, they were kind and considerate and we all looked after each other. It is something for the youth of today to attend and truly have a great time in a safe environment. Kind Regards, Lucy Slater Name: Lucy Slater Address: 9 Birchdale St Salisbury 4107

P4848	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Courtney Edgley (support)	The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view. The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regionsâ€™ economies. The proposed North Byron Parklands project will result in a massive increase in the number of domestic visitors to the area and to a lesser degree, will also attract many overseas visitors. As this industry is so important to the region it makes good sense for this project to proceed. North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

SPLENDOUR ROCKS MY WORLD! Trust me when i say this... Byron day is one of the most beautiful places on earth so why not bring beautiful people together to share beautiful music, food and lifestyle. Seriously people i cant believe your even considering not considering this. WAKE UP AND SMELL THE BYRON AIR! We love byron and it loves us. As this site tells us we are only here for 3 days a year! We want to come back so we know to treat the land with the upmost respect. PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE let splendour reside at its North Byron Parklands... its our home! As i said WE LOVE BYRON AND IT LOVES US!

North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. Bring on the variety and the possibilities!

P4850	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alexander Grygiel of n/a (support)	The local area containing the Parklands site has an ancient meeting place for Aboriginal people to come to together for cultural purposes. The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people. Job opportunities are a hot topic on the north coast. If North Byron Parklands is not allowed to operate in Byron Shire then these jobs will be lost to another region willing to approve this project. The creation of local jobs is a very important one. How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved.

North Byron Parklands offers music, entertainment and culture for our locals and tourists. What a great way of putting Byron Bay more on the map.

Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward.

If you were to analysis the professional event management of such festivals as Splendour in the Grass, Parklife, Shore Thing and Sunset Suns one could only come to the conclusion that these event operators are up there with the most successful an well managed events in Australia. Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way.

The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesn't proceed then it's likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklands? group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity.

The establishment of the North Byron Parklands will generate additional employment opportunities for the management and maintenance of the venue and event organisations. I think this is a really important benefit for this region.

P4853	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Dannielle Ryan (support)	Having read the environmental assessment report I can say without reserve that I strongly support the proposal put forward by North Byron Parklands. The application covers off on all of the important issues such as noise, traffic and ecology. It is so pleasing to see a development that has considered and responded to such a diverse range of issues. I firmly believe that the government should approve this application.

The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. Apart from environmental benefits, with such high unemployment rates in the Northern Rivers I am sure that the government is aware just how important it is to approve such a project as North Byron Parklands. I know many young people who would love the change to work on such a project. The government needs to take into account the generation of employment this proposal will create.

Positive environmental outcomes are important for any development and one very important outcome offered by the North Byron Parklands proponents is to apply a vegetation management plan across the entire site. Under this plan sections of the site will be restored back to pristine forest cover while others will be treated as managed parklands. Under this treatment very large areas will be planted with low density native trees that will provide connection points for fauna to avoid large pastoral areas and reduce the likelihood of predation during movement across the site. They are not required by law to do this, but do see it as an important environmental outcome.

The potential adverse impact of the Parklands usage on flora and fauna has been largely mitigated by virtue of the event site occupying only existing grassland areas of the site and avoiding vegetated parts of the site. Further, the significant increase in habitat afforded by the additional 11.1 ha of revegetation and 48.1 ha of additional plantings also mitigates against adverse impact upon flora and fauna species.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

Having a world class facility like North Byron Parklands in the Byron region is an awesome opportunity. Any place in Australia would welcome that.

One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature.

P4856	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Grant Johnston (support)	Letâ€™s get the creative juices flowing in the Northern Rivers. Bring Splendour home, letâ€™s get on with the job of creating exciting training and employment opportunities for our young people. I must say that protecting the environment is high on my list and that holds when talking about festival event sites. The North Byron Parklands team have obviously spent considerable time and money developing up an environmental, health and safety management manual designed to identify, manage and monitor environmental performance. This as far as I understand is a first for such cultural activities and should be strongly supported. In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coastâ€™s existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas. P4857	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from MICHAEL GRAHAM of M2 Marketing (support)	We have been attending Spendour for the past 5 years but did not attend this year because the Queensland venue was not our idea of what the Festival represents. Byron is the only logical home. We will be Splendour attendees for life as long as the venue returns to Byron. If not, we'll probably start looking for alternative annual pilgrimages.

Regarding the ecology of the site, having undertaken a number of vegetation and flora surveys, including detailed koala surveys, the North Byron Parklands group have completed more ecological assessments than other traditional developments such as housing, industrial estates, and quarries. This demonstrates that the organisation is serious about identifying and managing ecological issues.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

The tourism industry is a major contributor to the Byron Shire and Northern Rivers Region economies, with visitation critical to the regions' economies. The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported.

While some states can fall back on the mining industry, NSW has to rely on a variety of industry sectors to help fund the expansion of the state. Opportunities for employment such as that being offered by the North Byron Parklands proposal is vital to the sustainability of regional areas.

With respect to ensuring that staff and contractors take care to protect and enhance the environment where events will take place, it is excellent to note that the North Byron Parklands proposal includes an environmental induction for such workers. In this instance all workers are required to read and sign an environmental induction which covers a range of important environmental issues, not the least the environmental incident notification system. This is a great initiative.

Dear Sir/Madam,

RE: New Site for Splendour in the Grass - North Byron Parklands

One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive.

Not only does the North Byron Parklands offer an economy boost for local businesses and employment opportunities, it also brings awareness to tackling waste, recycling and consumption.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

PLEASE BRING SPLENDOUR BACK TO BYRON BAY!

P4864	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from laura preston (support)	Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

The Byron Shire and Northern Rivers region is home to an aging community with a high proportion of retirees. This means many young people are leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities elsewhere. North Byron Parklands would help provide employment for many of these young people, thus giving them a reason to stay in the area.

While much is made about the supposed wildlife corridor in and around the North Byron Parklands site the fact is that much of the vegetation is patchy and degraded. The Parklands people have gone to great lengths to ensure that temporary events are managed in a way to maintain and improve fauna movement. For example only placing temporary fencing just before events commence is one such initiative that will help greatly with this issue.

One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives.

I support Splendour in the Grass and I believe North Byron Parklands will be a perfect new home for them. No where else in Australia is there a festival which has a main focus on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, waste and recycling. Byron should be so proud to host such an environmentally friendly event.

I have been to many outdoor event sites over the past number of years but have never come across a venue that has taken so much effort to develop and implement so many environmental programs. When events are not being staged at North Byron Parklands, there will be reforestation and noxious weed removal activities. When there are events at this site they will need to comply with a bunch of strict environmental policies and procedures. If only other venues could take a leaf out of these guys' book.

The future of Byron Bay. Employment, community benefits, fun. Need we say more?

In the Byron and northern rivers areas tourism is subject to busy times and quiet times. It is planned that a number of events will occur at the North Byron Parklands site each year and one of these takes place in winter when tourism businesses are struggling to cover costs. Building a dedicated events venue in the Byron Shire will have a number of very positive benefits for the tourism industry which is a good thing.

I think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me.

Overall Splendor in the Grass is Australia premier music festival and attracts hundreds of international acts, who also contribute to the economy in other areas. This event needs to be able to maintain this status so that these artists will continue to come to Australia, helping Byron to grow as well as other areas.

The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment.

Under the North Byron Parklands environmental management manual there is a particular Environmental Standard that requires events being held on the site to adhere to a number of stringent environmental controls. The controls include buffer zones, environmental inductions, fencing aspects, wildlife rescue teams and lighting requirement to reduce illumination of bush blocks. I am unaware of any other outdoor event venue requiring such tight environmental controls. Parklands will certainly be moving towards Australian best practice, if not world?s best environmental practice.

The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this.

Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. Itâ€™s up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people.

P4868	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Gloria Whale (support)	North Byron Parklands is proposing a sustainable arts and music venue that will provide significant employment opportunities to a range of people in the Byron and Northern Rivers region. Many of the jobs will suit our younger people and with an aging demographic this is vital to ensuring that there is an opportunity to up skill our youth in a growing and profitable sector. Jobs are very important. North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal. The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. P4870	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alison Taylor of Guzman y Gomez (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has numerous positives in its favour. Not the least among them are the numerous accommodation outlets within easy reach via excellent road networks. The venue is also close to airports at both Ballina and Coolangatta, a factor which will appeal to interstate and overseas visitors. There is also plenty of room on site for thousands to camp.

We have heard it many times before that living in a community which has locally based jobs provides for a health and sustainable society. Jobs in the north of New South Wales are hard to come by at the best of times so when a project comes along which will create new jobs for people it is important to support it. That is a key reason why I support the approval of the North Byron Parklands project.

The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal.

From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It's a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management.

Businesses like North Byron Parklands generate much needed jobs for our area. A lot of people I speak to are concerned about the lack of employment opportunities both within the shire and the northern rivers region. Any business that provides jobs to locals should be approved to operate.

Most outdoor events pay little attention to the environment so it is heartening to see an organisation such as North Byron Parklands who have put a considerable effort into developing specific procedures and work instructions designed to protect the environment. These guys even have an environmental incident notification system which will document all issues and the steps taken to resolve them.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

I live in the Far North Coast area and to have Splendour here means a lot for our economy, as well as giving the youth something to do. I feel incredibly proud when I'm able to say that Splendour is held where I live, and I think it is important to encourage this sense of pride in all of us.

The North Byron Parklands proposal will see the largest restoration program the region has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its highly detailed vegetation management plan which will result in 1000's of trees being strategically planted around the site. The wildlife corridor has been significantly degraded over many decades due to primary production and agriculture activities. This means the corridor is currently very fragmented and in real need of revegetation.

I cannot stress how important it is to approve this project. Even if it is considered just based on employment opportunities it should be approved. Regional unemployment is a massive issue and I think that the government needs to help businesses to operate in what is already a very tough business climate. Therefore we should be getting right behind this type of proposal.

Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

At present the North Byron Parklands site is subject to significant sediment and erosion issues. Previous land practices have seen poor top soil removal and impacts on graded lands. The North Byron Parklands proposal aims to address these existing soil impacts and also has put in place a sediment and erosion control plan during their construction and operation phases. This is to be commended.

North Byron Parklands is all about hosting lots of different events, all of which require people to work in a variety of jobs. One event can employ hundreds of people for a period of time and in an area such as Byron such job opportunities are very welcome. We should be doing all we can to make this project happen.

Most businesses that operate in Northern NSW do not have anywhere near the level of sophisticated environmental strategies, controls and procedures that North Byron Parklands is preparing to put in place. It seems that every aspect of flora and fauna management has been considered and with a robust environmental auditing component I think we will see some excellent environmental outcomes arising from this development. I am very supportive of their approach.

It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region.

From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive.

P4875	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Isabel McCarty (support)	The North Byron Parklands project has undertaken both a high level of fauna and flora assessments and a comprehensive environmental risk assessment process. As a result they have developed a management manual that covers a range of aspects including the environment. They have even developed a standalone environmental induction form for all staff and contractors that clearly stipulates what can and cannot take place while on site. These measures are very impressive indeed. Currently many things are conspiring against the tourism industry, particularly the very strong Australian dollar. Enticing domestic travellers to holiday in Australia rather than abroad is a huge challenge for the tourism sector. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along that proposes to attract 35,000 people per event to a region such as the North Coast of NSW, this must be given serious consideration by approving authorities. Add to the fact that a number of these large events will eventually occur each year, the economic and tourism benefits are substantial. Having a world class facility like North Byron Parklands in the Byron region is an awesome opportunity. Any place in Australia would welcome that.

Not only have the North Byron Parklands organisation developed what must be considered worldâ€™s best practice environmental management systems and processes, they are also planning to have an environmental education program folded into the mix for good measure. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure.

Jobs are hard to come by these days. Many businesses are struggling to make ends meet. The arts and events industry has provided a lot of employment opportunities on the far north coast and North Byron Parklands should be approved because it will be a major employer in the area.

From an environmental perspective North Byron Parklands has ticked all the boxes in terms of assessment and risk mitigation. This was also reflected when they originally applied for a one off trial event through Byron Shire Council. Not only did the Council approve the DA but none of the state government agencies including National Parks and Wildlife Services objected to the application.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parklands' environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

Jobs are hard to come by these days. Many businesses are struggling to make ends meet. The arts and events industry has provided a lot of employment opportunities on the far north coast and North Byron Parklands should be approved because it will be a major employer in the area.

In recent times visitor day trips to the northern rivers has been declining. Coupled with a downward trend in the average per head tourism spend it is clear that strategies need to be put in place to increase visitor numbers. Projects that can significantly increase tourism numbers in a short space of time include cultural event activities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands. This business is capable of attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year to the northern rivers which will be a huge boon for the area.

Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It's up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people.

North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people. One of the many environmental programs to be undertaken by North Byron Parklands is the staged exclusion of cattle by fencing of existing forest blocks which will also assist with connectivity for terrestrial fauna by allowing the development of ground-layer and mid-layer vegetation and by providing additional shelter and food resources. Deployment of nest-boxes will also assist habitat connectivity for gliders by providing shelter sites in areas with low natural hollow abundance. These are very positive initiatives. To Whom It May Concern,

The long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

The employment size of businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire reflects that the majority of businesses within the Byron Shire (60%) and the Northern Rivers Region (62%) are non-employing. The majority of these businesses are sole operators and the region needs organisationâ€™s like North Byron Parklands to provide much needed jobs.

Warm Regards,

Jake Gries

P4885	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Rick Lord of None (support)	To whom it may concern, I am strongly supportive of the proposed new location for the splendour in the grass festival at North Byron Parklands When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve. The creative industries sector is becoming a leading sector in employment opportunities in the northern rivers region and is responsible for providing an ever increasing number of people with jobs. Music and arts should be embraced in our society because of these jobs that it creates and North Byron Parklands if it is approved is set to be a big employer for the area. As such I am very much in favour in seeing this project get up and running. Jobs are incredibly important and this project has my full support. So many people in the northern rivers area rely on the tourism industry for their bread and butter. These days most businesses are geared towards the tourism dollar and if past trends are anything to go by this industry sector will continue to play a key role in the region's economic fortunes. The people behind Parklands will play a dominant role in growing and sustaining the tourism industry and we should all get behind them to make this project a reality.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

The North Byron Parklands site has undergone a number of detailed assessments to assure the site is enhanced to be able to become a "sustainable" site for cultural events in the area. It is unlikely that many other developments on the north coast have gone into this much detail and conducted such thorough assessments. This shows the level commitment the North Byron Parkland have for this site.

This proposal brings in new hope to Byron Bays local economy, small businesses that currently struggle will thrive on the additional revenue.

While it is understood that business ventures such as North Byron Parklands are focussed on turning a profit, it is also really pleasing to see they have expended a fair amount of effort on protecting and enhancing the environment in which they operate. Initiatives such as light spill and noise management and inducting all staff and contractors is a great way to protect the environment and demonstrate a commitment to sustainable best practice.

P4889	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lachlan Cameron (support)	It would be mad not to approve this new site. One of the big measures that will protect fauna at the North Byron Parklands site is the limiting of events to a minimal number each year. If such a proposal was to operate for 20 weeks a year then they may cause some environmental problems but given that it will only run for 20 days a year and the rest of the time it will be just farm land, then this has to be a strong positive. Until very recently NSW has had a less than enviable employment track record mainly due to the global financial crisis. While it looks like the state is on the mend we still need to ensure that projects like North Byron Parklands are given the green light because of the large number of regional jobs it will provide.

The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

Splendour in the Grass is by far Australia's best music festival. The new site will make it even better and also add a lot to the Byron Shire. A failure to approve will simply benefit Queensland as the event will move to Woodford on the Sunshine Coast. Approve the site!

The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment.

As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

The North Byron Parklands project is an innovative and acceptable use of this very large, former grazing and cane-growing property. If the NBP proposal doesn't proceed then it's likely that the land will revert to those uses, or could possibly be subdivided into another cookie-cutter seaside suburb. Who will continue the environmental regeneration works being undertaken by the North Byron Parklands? group? No-one. That would be a terrible lost opportunity.

How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. Great job parklands.

As a relatively young person with a young family of the area I am constantly searching for ways to broaden my horizons. I believe this proposal will offer new opportunities, new jobs, new experiences and new ways to develop.

The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes.

For many young people in the local area, getting a job has proved to be very hard. This is because other than retail and tourism there are few large employers about. Bad luck if you do not want to make a career in pouring coffee or cleaning rooms. This project will offer a whole range of people with new prospects in securing a job in the creative industries, an industry that is on the rise in this area. We really do need more substantial employers.

It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region.

P4893	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Josh Pryor of Northpoint Toyota (support)	North Byron Parklands comprises a number of people with envious event management track records. These people have hosted many, many events that have attracted millions of people. If the North Byron Parklands venue can attract a large number of people to the area each year (which it is estimated to do) then the local tourism industry stands to benefit significantly. Given the past few years which have been tough for these operators, surely this is a welcome opportunity.

The North Byron Parklands people have obviously spent a lot of time developing up systems and processes to manage the environment in which they operate. It impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. P4894	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from krystal richards (support)	While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Byron Shire and the wider northern rivers region has been a fast growing area for the creative industries sector. Huge numbers of people have moved into the region with expectations of finding work in this sector and more than ever there is a need to ensure that projects that directly and indirectly benefit this growing sector are supported. The Parklands proposal if approved will become a dominant force in expanding the creative industries sector and will provide substantial job opportunities.

Having read the environmental assessment report I can say without reserve that I strongly support the proposal put forward by North Byron Parklands. The application covers off on all of the important issues such as noise, traffic and ecology. It is so pleasing to see a development that has considered and responded to such a diverse range of issues. I firmly believe that the government should approve this application.

Having attended Splendour at both Belongil Fields and Woodford, I can say they were both fantastic venues for very different reasons but I have a strong soft spot for Byron. The vibe is different and very suited to the Splendour crowd. I love that the town centre is in walking distance meaning you could come and go as you please if in need of supplies (this wasn't possible at Woodford because of the 2hr traffic jams). It was also much easier to leave the venue on the Monday.

Although I loved the natural atmosphere of Woodford, the set out is preferable at Byron because of the closeness of stages, which I know was a big talking point among the crowd this year.

Thanks!

P4897	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Candice Herse of Advanced personnel Management (support)	One of the most significant benefits for the environment coming out of this application is the proponent's willingness to transfer a net 28ha of very high quality bushland to National Parks that would see an expansion of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. Ignoring the significant value of the land proposed to be handed over, it has to be acknowledged that this is probably the only opportunity to expand this nature reserve as it is bound by private landowners who are unlikely to give away their land.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

The local area containing the Parklands site has an ancient meeting place for Aboriginal people to come to together for cultural purposes. The local indigenous stakeholders have been consulted and do not object to the Parklands proposal. It is fitting that the Parklands proposal will now serve as a cultural meeting place for all people. Holding events requires a sound understanding of a whole range of logistical and safety aspects. The team behind North Byron Parklands have been responsible for putting together numerous large events over the past decade. In each case they have successfully managed important aspects such as noise, ecology, lighting, traffic and crowd and safety management. The systems and procedures they have developed will assist any event being held at the North Byron Parklands site which I believe will help result in successful events.

The environmental assessments completed for the North Byron Parklands proposal identify a number of threatened species which in the most part are winged creatures. It is most likely (based on research elsewhere) that these creatures will move away from any light and noise disturbances for no longer than for the period they occur. This is particularly true if there are specific food resources available on the North Byron Parklands site. So, once an event is finished it is more than probable that these animals will return and enjoy the quietude that will prevail at this site for the vast majority of the year.

To Whom It May Concern,

The North Byron Parklands proposal is likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. This is shown by the level of environmental assessment that has been conducted across the site by North Byron Parklands. All assessments indicate that the proposal will have minimal environmental impacts.

With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs.

The tourism business in Byron Bay this past winter has been very slow. With the loss of Splendour in the Grass to Queensland a much needed income stream during winter evaporated. The North Byron Parklands proposal would see a number of major events coming to the region and with it a significant increase in demand for tourist accommodation and activities. The project should be carefully considered by the government due to the much needed injection of funds into the local tourism industry. Many families would benefit from this proposal.

With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management.

Yours sincerely,

Rohan Watt

Dear Sir/ Madame

The importance of cultural events and their ability to build awareness of natural and cultural diversity is important for the community (local and global).

The potential adverse impact of the Parklands usage on flora and fauna has been largely mitigated by virtue of the event site occupying only existing grassland areas of the site and avoiding vegetated parts of the site. Further, the significant increase in habitat afforded by the additional 11.1 ha of revegetation and 48.1 ha of additional plantings also mitigates against adverse impact upon flora and fauna species.

Best regards

Michael

P4903	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Alex Dooley (support)	Three words. Jobs, tourism and culture. All of these are in rapid decline in the northern rivers region and in NSW. Its time to stand up and support these vibrant industries that promise to do so much for so many. The application has the necessary checks and balances in place to make any event operate in a sensitive and responsible manner. Its to time approve the North Byron Parklands proposal. It is really important to note that any environmental pressures will be greatly reduced as a result of only using a percentage of the site for events. The areas that they will use are the grassy open spaces meaning that no activities will occur in bush land or forest blocks. It is just another example of good environmental management. P4904	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Simon Dunn of Byron Bay Web Hosting (support)	It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning. They are surely going to great lengths to look out for the environmental aspects. Most of the jobs on the North Coast rely on industries such as tourism and retail trade. To help expand the employment base there is a strong need to nurture an array of other industries such as artistic and creative industries. North Byron Parklands is a project that will greatly assist in providing a diversity in job prospects and on this basis should be actively supported by government and the wider community.

It's plainly obvious this a major source of work and income for our region. The whinging of a few small minority groups about the noise which most likely won't even affect them is not worth listening to when you look at the benefits it brings to the shire. The projected visitor nights generated by the North Byron Parklands in its fifth year of operation is in the order of 97,000. This is a massive accommodation boon for hotels, motels, apartments and camping facilities in the region and does not even take into account the other forms of tourism expenditure that such visitors will make. Tourism is a key industry in northern NSW and should be supported in order to maintain and grow the sector into the future.

This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

This project will surely make our region one of the worlds most sought after holiday and music festival destinations. Bring it on!!!

P4905	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Ty Noble (support)	The Marshallâs Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities. Apart from extensive consultation with indigenous groups and various elders the North Byron Parklands group has already established a long history of working with and employing local indigenous bush regeneration teams to plant thousands of trees across their site. This tree planting program has been a great way to involve traditional land owners in helping to restore what is currently quite a degraded site. P4906	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Lester Rajapakse (support)	If Woodfordia in Queensland can be highly respected as an enviro-friendly venue which hosts a number of festivals with large crowds, then surely North Byron Parklands can achieve the same level of acceptance and respect if given the chance. North Byron Parklands is proposing a sustainable arts and music venue that will provide significant employment opportunities to a range of people in the Byron and Northern Rivers region. Many of the jobs will suit our younger people and with an aging demographic this is vital to ensuring that there is an opportunity to up skill our youth in a growing and profitable sector. Jobs are very important. P4907	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Phoebe Quirk (support)	The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process. Much of the agricultural and forestry industries of the northern rivers has significantly declined over the past decade and many people have been forced into lower paid sectors such as retail and tourism. Now more than ever there is a need for diversifying the employment base and the North Byron Parklands proposal will do exactly that. With job positions projected to be more than 200 there is a very real need to approve such a project.

In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures.

The North Byron Parklands will offer new experiences for people to explore and enjoy. What a great way to bring our community together.

It seems they most likely disturbance for the environment will be light and noise and also traffic. Having reviewed North Byron Parklands' environmental, health and safety management manual it is clear that they have put a lot of energy into assessing and mitigating any potential environmental risks associated with these activities. The work they have done for managing the environment is above and beyond what one would expect for such a low impact activity.

In regards to employment so many traditional industry sectors have left the mid and far north coast of NSW. This has resulted in a significant structural change to our employment base. A new shift towards service industries and importantly the creative industries means that the necessary infrastructure and planning decisions are required to capitalise on this trend. North Byron Parklands is one such project that will strengthen the North Coast's existing creative industries base and will generate significant part time and full time employment, all of which is much needed in these areas.

The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. North Byron Parklands can be a showcase for our local talents.

As far as most events go in terms of protecting the environment, they put in place things like recycling bins and the like. North Byron Parklands is proposing a bunch of environmental controls that go way above and beyond such simple measures. I am extremely impressed with the environmental programs they are going to commit to and have every confidence that the environment will be more than adequately protected.

In relation to environmental management one of the biggest impacts on fauna in this region is dogs. It is pleasing to note that the environmental, health and safety management manual strictly prohibits dogs from entering the site. Just this on initiative will help to reduce pressure on the environment, not to mention the host of other excellent environmental programs they have documented.

Skilling up the region is vital and this proposal delivers in so many ways. It is multi-faceted, delivering high quality events, a cultural centre, sustainability initiatives and ongoing community consultation. The training and work experience opportunities offered by such a proposal are highly valuable to a regional workforce.

P4910	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Yvette Chapman of Redland City Council (support)	Environmental audits are a requirement for all major events. If we consider that eventually there might be up to three major events in a given year one can start to get an idea of the breadth and depth of environmental information that will be captured by these environmental audits. North Byron Parklands will be able to build up an impressive database of fauna and flora observations and will then be able to adjust or modify their policies and procedures to better protect environmental values moving forward. If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably. P4911	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from David Gustafson (support)	Splendour in the Grass is one of the few festivals in Australia that has, over several years, gained an International following on the music festival circuit. I fail to see why people in a popular tourist haven such as Byron Bay would fail to see the cultural and financial benefits of keeping Splendour within the Byron Shire. Being a country that is relatively remote from Europe and the USA, Splendour has given many an international band an insight into how amazing an Australian large scale camping festival can be, and also give 17000 people or so (more this year at Woodford!) an opportunity to see these bands that rarely come to our shores.

If you consider that businesses involved in the tourism industry that will directly benefit from the North Byron Parklands project stretch from Ballina in the South to Tweed Heads in the North, not to mention all the inland towns, then it becomes very apparent that this project will benefit a very wide area. Supporting the tourism industry should be a key concern for the government and approving projects of this nature would help the industry considerably.

On the subject of employment the north coast has a long history of hosting many different types of events. These events provide jobs for so many people and in an area where paying the rent or mortgage is tough it is critical that these events are allowed to continue. Without a permanent event area these jobs will be lost to the north coast. As such this project should be approved on the employment prospects it brings, let alone any other positives.

A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure. I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

P4915	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stuart Myerscough of Comscentre (support)	With regards to the wildlife corridor it has been significantly degraded over many decades due to such activities as primary production and agriculture. As such it is currently highly fragmented and in need of revegetation. The Parklands proposal will see the biggest rehabilitation program the area has seen for the past 50 years as a result of its detailed vegetation management plan which will result in thousands of trees being planted in strategic areas. Many who attend Splendour choose to stay a few days before or after the festival and make more of a holiday of their time in the area. The spin-off from such visitors must be extremely valuable to the many other tourism-related businesses in and around Byron Bay. It therefore stands to reason that a venue hosting a number of other events throughout the year would create many more opportunities, including employment, for the local community and the local economy. Tourism is one of the biggest employers in the northern rivers area and the North Byron Parklands proposal is projecting that it will bring thousands of people to the area each year. Increasing visitor numbers to the area is the surest way to help grow these tourism businesses particularly when the proposal shall bring large numbers of people to the area in traditionally slow times.

P4916	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Mike Wright (support)

The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant.

With such a massive projected increase in the population of the north coast how are people expected to find meaningful work? It is only by governments thinking outside of the traditional tourism and accommodation industries and assisting other sectors to operate that such jobs can be made available. Parklands covers an industry that can provide lots of local jobs.

The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment.

Why should the thoughts and feelings of a few control the outcomes and futures of so many.

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

Four of the owners of North Byron Parklands each have a long and successful history in hosting events. The size of these events have ranged from 5,000 to 50,000 people and have occurred at a number of venues across NSW. The skills, systems and processes they have developed over the past 12-15 years will no doubt be employed to ensure all events held at North Byron Parklands are done so in a professional and safe manner.

I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire by small minded local politics. P4918	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Aaron Porter of Student of ANU (support)	The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes. The employment size of businesses within the Northern Rivers and Byron Shire reflects that the majority of businesses within the Byron Shire (60%) and the Northern Rivers Region (62%) are non-employing. The majority of these businesses are sole operators and the region needs organisationâ™s like North Byron Parklands to provide much needed jobs. There are literally thousands of tourism businesses within 75 kilometres of the proposed North Byron Parklands event site. Most of these businesses are family owned and operated and as such are likely to benefit income wise from this proposal. P4923	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Julian Wood of St Teresa'a Catholic College (support)	The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported.

The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

How many fantastic cultural events and opportunities has NSW lost to other states, particularly to Queensland and Victoria over the past decade. Lets not make the same mistake again by letting the North Byron Parklands project slip through our fingers. They have the necessary controls, they have an amazing cultural vision and they stand to tip the artistic balance back into the favour of this State. We should all get behind it.

From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. Itâ€™s a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us.

The North Byron Parklands site has a long history of agricultural activity that has degraded much of the site over the past 50 years. While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process.

This proposal has endless opportunities including networking with Southern Cross University and SAE, furthering our regions creativeness, training and work experiences.

Currently many things are conspiring against the tourism industry, particularly the very strong Australian dollar. Enticing domestic travellers to holiday in Australia rather than abroad is a huge challenge for the tourism sector. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along that proposes to attract 35,000 people per event to a region such as the North Coast of NSW, this must be given serious consideration by approving authorities. Add to the fact that a number of these large events will eventually occur each year, the economic and tourism benefits are substantial.

The Byron region can market itself as a hub for events and creativity if this proposal is approved. They would be very fortunate indeed to have the training and skills benefits of such a proposal.

The North Byron Parklands proposal brings so many positive benefits to the northern rivers region that based on planning merit alone, this application must be approved. Whether one considers employment, income generation, environmental protection measures or a massive boost to the region's tourism economy, this application exceeds all expectations. On this basis this proposal should be approved by the state government.

P4926	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Beck McNab (support)	In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

With jobs hard to come by in regional areas such as the north coast it is really important that projects that can provide ongoing employment opportunities are considered seriously by government. I believe that North Byron Parklands is one such venture that can offer many people a job opportunity.

Tourism is a massive income generating activity for Byron Shire and the northern rivers region. The Parklands proposal will bring tens of thousands of people to the area, all of whom will need accommodation and food. It is so important that this project be approved because the positive economic impacts are so significant.

Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable.

P4927	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Laila Amirsardari of Brisbane Powerhouse (support)

It is understood that the long history of agricultural activities at the North Byron Parklands site has lead to the degradation of much of the site over the past 50 years. Regeneration work is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable and the North Byron Parklands team plan to plant a significant number of native trees to achieve this. This proposal should not be ignored.

In relation to employment and wages the Byron local government area has one of the State's lowest average wages, around $31,000 per annum. A proposal like Parklands will bring much needed employment opportunities top the area and will likely provide a large number of positions that are well paid. The Shire and the region need these opportunities.

It is important to keep the Splendour in the Grass Festival in the Northern NSW region to allow local employment opportunities for those within the arts genre in this region. While it has been wonderful having the festival closer to my home over the past 12 months, I can understand the impact that this change has had on local businesses.

North Byron Parklands accept that work must be done to maintain forestry and avoid degradation due to activites presented on said land and are happy to accomodate instruction to allow maintenance.

I would hope governing bodies will take this flexibility into account and will understand the importance of this assistance. By working together we would hope that festivities, a strong understanding environmental impact as well as action on said impact can be achieved simultaneously.

The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported. Recent statistics provided by the Australian Bureau of Statistics indicate that the majority of business owners in the shire and the northern rivers area do not employ people, rather these businesses are operated by self employed people. As such it is obvious that other larger organisations and businesses are required to employ people in a are in much need of job opportunities. North Byron Parklands is one such organisation proposing to generate up to 200 full time equivalent positions. Such a project is extremely important to this area. Having read the environmental assessment report I can say without reserve that I strongly support the proposal put forward by North Byron Parklands. The application covers off on all of the important issues such as noise, traffic and ecology. It is so pleasing to see a development that has considered and responded to such a diverse range of issues. I firmly believe that the government should approve this application.

P4929	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jennifer McCloy (support)	Byron Bay is a fantastic home for Splendour in the Grass, and Splendour in the Grass is a fantastic festival for Byron Bay.

Local businesses love having the festival in Byron Bay due to the revenue it produces.

Local residents have the opportunity to see international acts play on their home ground.

Local tourism, and Aussie tourism, is boosted by having this internationally recognised festival held in such an iconic Australian town.

Festival-goers unanimously agree that Splendour in the Grass last year was simply not the same.

SPLENDOUR MUST BE HELD IN BYRON.

The Byron Shire Council identifies the creative industries sector as one of nine key focus areas which foster the prosperity of the shire through sustainable job creation. The shire has a long history of creative endeavours and this needs to be built on by supporting such proposals as that put forward by North Byron Parklands. Generating a large number of jobs for the area, it is extremely important that it is approved. Doing so will provide a broad spectrum of the local community with jobs that would otherwise not be available.

The Parklands project is going to attract tens of thousands of people to stay in the wider area. Many of these attendees will extend their stay in the region before and after various events and this will generate a direct positive impact for accommodation providers as well as food and beverage establishments within the local area and region. So many people are employed in the tourism industry so having a world class events venue would be extremely advantageous.

Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

I write to support the submission of the North Byron Parklands.

Although based in Sydney I spend time in the Byron area and personally know many locals and how the businesses in the area suffered this year with the loss of the event in the 'off season'.

With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals.

With respect to the mapped wildlife corridor it should be pointed out that many parts of it identified as high conservation have in fact been cleared by previous land owners. The North Byron Parklands proposal has not only committed to helping restore this corridor, they have also committed to doing so in accordance with the Byron Shire Council wildlife map. This means having the opportunity to actually realise 'on-ground' what the currently inaccurate council map purports is in existence. The end result will be a greatly improved corridor that actually has some functioning capabilities.

I have also worked in various capacities on Splendour In The Grass over several years and have first hand experience of the organisers commitment to the environment, the safety and enjoyment of festival attendees, and their sensitivity to the local area the festival is held in. I have no doubt of their commitment to the area and believe their plans would bring significant positive benefits to both the land itself and the social and cultural fabric of the area. I support their submission wholeheartedly!

I believe that the application for the permanent use of the site at North Byron Parklands for music festivals should be approved.

The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment.

When you consider that the North Byron Parklands team has planted over 7,000 trees across key parts of the site to improve habitat and fauna migration opportunities (and many of these plantings are now 4 metres plus), it is pleasing to note that they will be planting tens of thousands more trees as part of their managed parklands approach to revegetating the site. This is a huge windfall for an environment which is currently predominantly cleared pasture land.

The projected visitor nights generated by the North Byron Parklands in its fifth year of operation is in the order of 97,000. This is a massive accommodation boon for hotels, motels, apartments and camping facilities in the region and does not even take into account the other forms of tourism expenditure that such visitors will make. Tourism is a key industry in northern NSW and should be supported in order to maintain and grow the sector into the future.

P4932	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Jonathan Borowski (support)	One of the most significant environmental controls being put in place by North Byron Parklands is the limiting of major events to 12 event days each year. Effectively this will mean 2 or 3 events over 2 or 3 days each once the venue is up and running to capacity. What does this mean for the local ecology? It means that disturbances of light, noise and traffic will only occur for a fraction of time each year. This plus the numerous other environmental controls means that the impact on fauna and flora will be temporal and minimal in nature. The people behind North Byron Parklands are professional event operators with decades of combined experience in hosting successful events. Having sold millions of tickets to the dozens of events they have held, it is extremely beneficial that such experienced personnel will be available to guide and manage events proposed for North Byron Parklands. P4933	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Todd Spokes of Personal (support)	When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve. I know of many businesses that rely on events for a large part of their income. These businesses employ local people and locally based jobs are hard to come by. We should support Parklands as it will be a large employer in the region.

Having read the North Byron Parklands submission and attended many events over the past number of years I am blown away by the level of detail and the huge range of control measures that this development offers to ensure smooth and successful events. The North Coast of NSW needs a development of this nature and it should be approved by the NSW government.

For many years the North Byron Parklands site has been used for intensive agricultural activities and land clearing, impacting on the site dramatically. North Byron Parklands has planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year to restore the site. This has to be seen as a great result for the local environment. The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.Â Â Â Â Â

It is widely acknowledged that the operators of the Woodfordia venue where Splendour in the Grass was held in 2010 know how to set up and manage a sustainable, enviro-conscious venue. It is my understanding that the highly respected operators of that venue, the Woodford Folk Festival, fully support the plans for North Byron Parklands and are actively advising the NBP owners on the best way forward. This is a major stamp of approval for the whole project, given that Woodfordia stands to lose the very valuable Splendour business should NBP come into being

From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive.

Byron and the surrounding areas relies substantially on a range of small businesses and cottage industries to employ the people that live in this community. There are not many large employers such as what North Byron Parklands would become should it be approved. I think we need to approve and support these types of projects in regional areas to ensure there are enough job choices available to people.

All along the NSW coastline tourism businesses provide employment and income to hundreds of thousands of individuals and families. This is certainly the case in the northern rivers region where the proposed North Byron Parklands is to be located. Such an important project as this which will see up to 150,000 extra visitors coming to the region per annum which will translate into massive business benefits for the local tourism sector.

P4939	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Carrie Hutchinson (support)	How can the people of the Byron Shire not want to bring Splendour back to its home? It provides jobs for locals who work at the site, as well as bringing people to the area who, once the festival is over, will spend their money on a few days' R&R in the vicinity. I can't imagine how much money was lost by local businesses this year, when those same people spent three or four days holidaying in Noosa and Maroochydore. I have been to many outdoor event sites over the past number of years but have never come across a venue that has taken so much effort to develop and implement so many environmental programs. When events are not being staged at North Byron Parklands, there will be reforestation and noxious weed removal activities. When there are events at this site they will need to comply with a bunch of strict environmental policies and procedures. If only other venues could take a leaf out of these guy's book. P4940	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Darren McAdam of Freelance (support)	With respect to the environment one of the risks that the people from North Byron Parklands have identified is the potential for road kill associated with traffic movements before, during and after an event. As such they have implemented a number of requirements including on site environmental inductions, speed limiting devices, signage and a wildlife rescue team. This is just one example of the sound environmental practices they are proposing. Many supposed local environmental groups have been invited to visit the North Byron Parklands and to participate in the public tree planting days that have been held over the past few years. Unfortunately none of these groups have actually converted their words into action by helping to repair this partially degraded site. The local indigenous bush regeneration team on the other hand has been responsible for planting thousands of trees in key locations and is another example of the Parklands group working with its community.

It is vitally important to the local tourism industry that the North Byron Parklands project is approved. This single project is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors to the region each and every year. The flow on effects to the tourism operators will be significant and will also help to grow much needed jobs for the region.

The Byron region can market itself as a hub for events and creativity if this proposal is approved. They would be very fortunate indeed to have the training and skills benefits of such a proposal.

P4941	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from James Coulson of Csquared Design (support)	The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant. Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure. In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet. Currently many things are conspiring against the tourism industry, particularly the very strong Australian dollar. Enticing domestic travellers to holiday in Australia rather than abroad is a huge challenge for the tourism sector. When a project such as North Byron Parklands comes along that proposes to attract 35,000 people per event to a region such as the North Coast of NSW, this must be given serious consideration by approving authorities. Add to the fact that a number of these large events will eventually occur each year, the economic and tourism benefits are substantial. Dear NSW Department of Planning,

In our country we have many issues with young people such as violence, obesity, alcohol and drugs. A lot of these problems are caused by boredom and a lack of places to go or things to do. Music festivals such as Splendour in the Grass allow these young people a chance to do something fun and exciting in a controlled environment. It is something to look forward to and ultimately gives these young people (particularly those travelling from interstate) the sort of responsibility expected of adults.

The establishment of the North Byron Parklands will generate additional employment opportunities for the management and maintenance of the venue and event organisations. I think this is a really important benefit for this region.

Byron Bay is built on its beautiful natural assets and many tourist attractions yet like many other coastal towns it suffers from seasonal swings. The North Byron Parklands proposal would significantly smooth tourism demand by attracting visitors in traditionally slow times. As tourism is so important to the town and surrounding areas such projects should be openly encouraged.

Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It's up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people.

History has proven that Splendour in the Grass has been a successful festival for everyone involved and more importantly for the town of Byron Bay itself.

To take this iconic festival away from this town would be criminal.

North Byron Parklands through their application to the Department of Planning have more than adequately shown that this is an organisation willing to go beyond compliance in terms of environmental management. What other development would have documented in such detail the plans, policies and procedures to effectively manage all issues covering the environment. Everything from lighting and erosion control through to revegetation and fauna audits has been included in their impressive management manual. So many individuals, families and businesses rely on the tourism dollar for their living. In the North Coast region a large majority of business are geared towards the tourism market. With so many people moving into capital cities the government needs to ensure that regional employment opportunities are secured whenever they are offered. Parklands have a project that will provide plenty of jobs for a range of people and it is super important that they jobs stay in our area.

The Byron and surrounding areas in the last twenty years have survived on the back of tourism. While other more traditional industries have been in decline, tourism has provided an income for countless families and individuals in the region. North Byron Parklands is a project that will generate large numbers of visitors to the region which given the recent global financial crisis is just what the sector needs. It should be approved on this basis alone.

The level of detail undertaken in the identification and assessment of likely impacts on fauna and flora across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site is impressive. There is unlikely to be many (if any) other types of development north coast that have gone to this level of detail and thoroughness. The commitments listed to preserve and enhance the ecology certainly help to put this development into the 'sustainable' development basket.

This proposal offers career opportunities and new life to Byron Bay for both young and old, there are many people in our community looking outside Byron for employment opportunities, why not offer work to them at home.

The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger. An example of this is the fact that there have been more vegetation and flora surveys conducted at the site than housing, industrial estate, and quarries assessments.

Apart from extensive consultation with indigenous groups and various elders the North Byron Parklands group has already established a long history of working with and employing local indigenous bush regeneration teams to plant thousands of trees across their site. This tree planting program has been a great way to involve traditional land owners in helping to restore what is currently quite a degraded site.

Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area. Imagine an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.Â Â Â Â Â

Jobs are very important.

The site in question if not used for a sustainable cultural arts and event venue may end up being used by whoever buys it in a manner that would place greater pressure on the environment. Here we have an opportunity to hold a low impact activity that will see the land rested for some 75% of the year. The Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities. With respect to the mapped wildlife corridor it should be pointed out that many parts of it identified as high conservation have in fact been cleared by previous land owners. The North Byron Parklands proposal has not only committed to helping restore this corridor, they have also committed to doing so in accordance with the Byron Shire Council wildlife map. The North Byron Parklands site has been subject to intensive agricultural activities and land clearing practices for many, many years. The North Byron Parklands will be the first proposed land use that will actually see a huge improvement in environmental outcomes due to planned mass plantings, fauna habitat creation and most importantly no event activities for some 260 plus days a year. This has to be seen as a major positive outcome for the local environment.

Cultural arts and music event facilities such as those proposed by North Byron Parklands will greatly assist the local tourism industry by attracting thousands of people from Queensland, Sydney and Victoria. All of these visitors will require accommodation and other services and will greatly benefit the tourism sector. This is surely a good thing.

Why not? There are other areas around Byron that cater for all types of events, how is it even contemplated when North Byron Parklands has so much to offer?

The North Byron Parklands is quite unique in that the proposed outdoor venue will be non-operation for the vast majority of the year. With only twenty event days per year this means that there is significant time for resting the site which is a huge positive for the environment. It should be considered that if this development does not proceed then some other form of development which may be far more intrusive and full time in nature may be applied for and approved in the future. This project will be good for the environment.

With so many people worried about finding a job in this current economic climate a project of this nature in a regional area is a breath of fresh air. As a community we need to get behind this fantastic concept and support it. As a government, there is a huge moral responsibility to approve it just on employment considerations alone.

I honestly do not think there is any other event venue in Australia, let alone NSW, that has so much going for it. Positioned in beautiful Byron Bay this incredible venue will stimulate so many other supportive industries to invest and grow the creative industries sector. This sector along with tourism is the life blood of regional areas such as northern NSW and I cannot see any sensible reason why it should not be approved.

Dear Council,

as an active contributor to the Northern Rivers area for both tourism and business I feel the need to express my support to allow the Splendour event back into the region.

The positive economical applications and global awareness this event creates in the region is outstanding and one a progressive council should adopt with open arms.

I fully support the SITG application to move back to the region.

Kind Regards

To Whom it may concern,

The Department would be hard pressed to list other proposals such as the North Byron Parklands one that has clearly documented the environmental controls it proposes to put in place to actively manage the environment. The environmental management manual is an excellent example of a proactive organisation who is obviously serious about ensuring that fauna and flora is appropriately considered and managed within legislative requirements.

Having a world class facility like North Byron Parklands in the Byron region is an awesome opportunity. Any place in Australia would welcome that.

Splendour in the Grass is one of the few multi-day festivals in Australia that is actually worth travelling to, and Byron Bay is the perfect setting for it. As someone who has gone to Splendour 3 times I can honestly say that it just won't be the same if it is forced to be held elsewhere.

Thank you

P4960	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Natalie Earl (support)	The average annual household income in the Byron Shire and the Northern Rivers is substantially lower than NSW (approximately $55,000 compared with $71,000) and as such employment opportunities generated by North Byron Parklands would be incredibly valuable to the Shire and the region. Most outdoor events pay little attention to the environment so it is heartening to see an organisation such as North Byron Parklands who have put a considerable effort into developing specific procedures and work instructions designed to protect the environment. These guys even have an environmental incident notification system which will document all issues and the steps taken to resolve them. P4961	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from Stacey Stobaus (support)	While there are a number of identified threatened species at the North Byron Parklands site, all of these creatures are winged species such as water borne birds, owls and various bats. Research into the effects of intermittent noise shows that such fauna will usually relocate during such episodes and will return quickly once noise abates. Further the movement of such fauna is entirely dependent on food resources. If there are no fruits and blossoms across the site then the presence of these species will be very low. People in Byron Bay are very focused on supporting and interacting within society. Enjoying and experiencing what Byron has to offer. P4962	Project Website Submission	20/10/2010	Online Submission from jolee wakefield of APN (support)	North Byron Parklands have already undertaken a number of detailed fauna and flora surveys across the proposed site. On top of this they have now committed to undertaking environmental audits for all major events (before, during after). Such information will be very valuable in terms of fine tuning the current environmental policies and procedures and will dramatically reduce any associated environmental pressures. When you have the combined expertise of event operators as those that make up the owners of North Byron Parklands it is quite evident that events that are proposed to be held at the Parklands site will be conducted in a successful and safe manner. With years of combined expertise these industry leaders will ensure that all events are conducted in a manner that ensures the management of all aspects of large and small events are adequately covered.

In relation to fauna movement across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site one huge positive that the proposed underpass will bring is that it will provide much needed north-south migration on either side of Jones Road. This road currently acts as a barrier for such fauna movement and denies many creatures the opportunity to take advantage of the RTA's expensive fauna overpass straddling the Pacific highway. This alone will provide significant fauna movement routes for many creatures.

The North Byron Parklands offers our minds to look outside the square, to see what is on offer including employment opportunities, economy profit and enjoyment.

North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. Future plantings and assisted regeneration in these areas will significantly increase opportunities for movement of terrestrial fauna. This is only one of many significant programs that will enhance the environment within and adjacent to the site.

Employment opportunities are getting harder and harder for many people in rural areas to find. With so many industries moving out of rural areas we need to encourage those businesses that want to set up in these regions with as much help as possible. I understand that North Byron Parklands will provide a large number of jobs across a very broad range skill sets. Projects of this nature should be approved on this basis alone.

P4968	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from silver groves of realtime effects (support)	Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. Thatâ€™s the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Letâ€™s get it approved.

The North Byron Parklands proposal has considered both indigenous and non-indigenous issues associated with the proposal. In particular, Parklands has worked closely with the local Tweed/Byron Aboriginal Land Council and has complemented a number of archaeological digs to help determine the significance of parts of the site. It is pleasing to see that certain areas of the site will become â€œout of boundsâ€ to protect identified areas of importance.

While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

Not only have the North Byron Parklands organisation developed what must be considered worldâ™s best practice environmental management systems and processes, they are also planning to have an environmental education program folded into the mix for good measure. A number of events proposed to be held at this site already have initiatives such as Eco Cops which are undergraduate environmental science students who promote environmental programs and accepted practices to patrons while at an event. This is a very good proactive measure.

We constantly hear about politicians doing their best to ensure a supply of good jobs for our young people, however NSW currently is experiencing very high rates of youth unemployment. Governments and politicians must become more aware of the types of projects that will generate such youth oriented jobs and the North Byron Parklands proposal is a very good example. Reported to generate in excess of 200 jobs it seems to make sense to me to approve it.

In regards to the environment the proposed North Byron Parklands site is some 256ha in size and the proponents have committed to only every using a maximum of some 100ha thus leaving large tracts of the property for wildlife functions. I think the environmental controls under their environmental, health and safety management manual will also reduce impacts and make this a leading sustainable outdoor event venue.

The future of Byron Bay. Employment, community benefits, fun. Need we say more?

Tourism is a massive income generating activity for Byron Shire and the northern rivers region. The Parklands proposal will bring tens of thousands of people to the area, all of whom will need accommodation and food. It is so important that this project be approved because the positive economic impacts are so significant.

Splendour in the Grass has provided high level training in a range of areas and has supported youth initiatives such as Splendid. With the expanded suite of festivals at North Byron Parklands the opportunities for work experience and training are invaluable.

With the documenting of environmental requirements through the North Byron Parklands management manual it is clear that a very high level of commitment has been made to protect and enhance the environment. Take for example the requirement to have a 30 metre buffer between the car park and adjoining nature reserve. This initiative will protect the nature reserve and will allow for the buffer area to slowly regenerate back to its former bushland status.

P4973	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Jared Richards (support)	Events offer a broad range of jobs to lots of individuals. From labourers to sound engineers or caterers to sign writers these jobs are very much needed in NSW. We have already lost a lot of our events to Queensland and other states and we must grasp this huge employment opportunity with both hands. The government has an obligation to approve this project. So many people in the northern rivers area rely on the tourism industry for their bread and butter. These days most businesses are geared towards the tourism dollar and if past trends are anything to go by this industry sector will continue to play a key role in the regionâ€™s economic fortunes. The people behind Parklands will play a dominant role in growing and sustaining the tourism industry and we should all get behind them to make this project a reality. The Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor on the proposed site is actually damaged, populated with harmful weeds, and is in need of restoration. North Byron Parklands has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will help improve fauna movement opportunities.

I have been a regular attendee of the Splendour in the Grass festival since its inception. The professionalism of the promoters and their team is of the utmost standard and much care has always been taken in the maintenance and preservation of the site, respect to the noise levels, traffic control of patrons whilst still creating a much sought after and amazing cultural event that NSW should treasure. Having worked in events and the music industry for some time I have seen in recent years that other States have been receiving government support through grants and winning a lot of bids to host Australian events. We should be doing all we can to keep such a high profile event of world standard in NSW especially after all the hard work that has gone into the event over the years to establish it. It would be a shame to lose it to another state.

While the current research into noise emissions and their effects on fauna is far from comprehensive, the team at North Byron Parklands have developed a host of environmental procedures and processes to manage this issue. From the use of sophisticated unidirectional public address systems to fauna monitoring programs the management systems that will be employed will greatly reduce any possible impacts on fauna. The pleasing thing to note is that fauna are only temporarily inconvenienced by noise if at all.

The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

Making new friends, learning new activities, attending new and exciting events, a place where we are all welcome and safe. Bring on North Byron Parklands.

From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive.

The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. It's about young people and being young. This is really important.

P4978	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Harry Millis of Student (support)	The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported.

Regarding employment, so many people are forced to leave coastal areas in search of a job. We need the government to play an active role in identifying suitable industries and businesses that can provide local jobs in these areas. North Byron Parklands is an obvious choice in helping to bridge this gap and should be approved to operate in Byron Shire.

North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

I think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me.

P4979	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Sid Guglielmino of Graphic Design (support)

With the documenting of environmental requirements through the North Byron Parklands management manual it is clear that a very high level of commitment has been made to protect and enhance the environment. Take for example the requirement to have a 30 metre buffer between the car park and adjoining nature reserve. This initiative will protect the nature reserve and will allow for the buffer area to slowly regenerate back to its former bushland status.

The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

The North Byron Parklands project will see upwards of 150,000 patrons coming to the region when it reaches full capacity. All of these people will need places to stay and food and other supplies. They will spend on tourism attractions and help bolster the local economy. From a tourism perspective this project makes great sense.

The North Byron Parklands proposal supports jobs and training in the areas of bush regeneration and sustainability management. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. North Byron Parklands can be a showcase for our local talents.

North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

From an environmental perspective one of the most pleasing aspects of the North Byron Parklands proposal is the distinct lack of permanent infrastructure and the need to clear trees. The most significant infrastructure relates to the underpass under Jones Road and would involve removal of about 50 trees (which are mainly Camphor). With such minimal works required to make an events venue it means that the vast majority of the site shall remain as is, which is a real positive.

Understanding the likely impacts of the Parklands proposal can be assisted from looking at similar experiences in other parts of the world. For example, “I learned that creative, progressive communities understand both the tangible and intangible effects of music festivals. With time and encouragement, communities that embrace and cultivate relationships and partnerships offering financial and operational support, ultimately realise substantial economic and fiscal impacts. Furthermore, many articles reported that quality of life improves along with the chance to attract and retain young, innovative people to a community”™. (Donna Sue Sanders “ Executive Director of the Daytona State Foundation).

P4981	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Jacqueline Guglielmino of Graphic Design (support)	With the recent global financial crisis many businesses in the area were hit hard. Employment opportunities diminished and there is a real need for viable employers such as the proposed North Byron Parklands. The jobs this group will provide are going to be extremely important to many families and individuals.

The North Byron Parklands project will incorporate a range of best practice environmental policies and procedures including a requirement to only host events in the existing cleared areas of the site. This means that all forested areas will be protected via fencing and security measures and effectively be out of bounds for event usage. This is a very positive initiative from an environmental point of view.

North Byron Parklands sounds like a great idea. I would definitely attend and no doubt a lot of my friends will. It sounds exciting and fun.

Under the North Byron Parklands environmental management manual there is a particular Environmental Standard that requires events being held on the site to adhere to a number of stringent environmental controls. The controls include buffer zones, environmental inductions, fencing aspects, wildlife rescue teams and lighting requirement to reduce illumination of bush blocks. I am unaware of any other outdoor event venue requiring such tight environmental controls. Parklands will certainly be moving towards Australian best practice, if not world's best environmental practice.

I believe that Byron Bay benefits greatly from this event! Bring Splendour Home!

While there are still some high conservation value areas of the site a great deal of regeneration is needed before the site can be considered ecologically valuable. The Parklands people are proposing significant tree plantings which will be a valuable process. The people behind North Byron Parklands are professional event operators with decades of combined experience in hosting successful events. Having sold millions of tickets to the dozens of events they have held, it is extremely beneficial that such experienced personnel will be available to guide and manage events proposed for North Byron Parklands. Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It's up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people.

Over the past 5 years the northern rivers area and Byron shire have experienced a drop in the number of domestic tourists. The North Byron Parklands proposal would help to attract a significant number of domestic tourists from south east Queensland and southern NSW and Victoria. As much of the region is built on tourism it is important that such projects are allowed to proceed.

P4985	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Claudia Guglielmino of Student (support)	North Byron Parklands is proposing a sustainable arts and music venue that will provide significant employment opportunities to a range of people in the Byron and Northern Rivers region. Many of the jobs will suit our younger people and with an aging demographic this is vital to ensuring that there is an opportunity to up skill our youth in a growing and profitable sector. Jobs are very important. I think that events like this help people grow, experiencing North Byron Parklands would be one of those growing experiences for me. North Byron Parklands has adopted the mapped wildlife corridors from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy as areas to be dedicated to restoration of tree cover. Future plantings and assisted regeneration in these areas will significantly increase opportunities for movement of terrestrial fauna. This is only one of many significant programs that will enhance the environment within and adjacent to the site.

I visited both Splendour in the Grass at Woodford and at Byron Bay and let me tell you, the atmosphere in Byron Bay was much better. I believe that just the people from Byron Bay are much better and add to so much of the festival, and the people who are going to the festival add so much to the people of Byron.

Having sold millions of tickets to the dozens of events they have held, it is extremely beneficial that such experienced personnel will be available to guide and manage events proposed for North Byron Parklands.

The level of detail undertaken in the identification and assessment of likely impacts on fauna and flora across and adjacent to the North Byron Parklands site is impressive. There is unlikely to be many (if any) other types of development north coast that have gone to this level of detail and thoroughness. The commitments listed to preserve and enhance the ecology certainly help to put this development into the 'sustainable' development basket.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

P4987	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Brenda Shero (object)	The local newspapers are full of stories about the increase of drug abuse in Byron Shire, alcohol-fuelled late night street violence, drug dealing, dangerous driving, the closure of restaurants, increase in backpacker accommodation at the expense of family accommodation, loss of long-term rental stock, affordable holiday letting superseded by party house accommodation. The list goes on. Why these changes? The drive by a wealthy minority to milk this area at any cost to others. All these elements which diminish the character and quality of our local living environment will be exacerbated by turning the shire into a dance-party drug festival centre. The owners of the Splendour franchise have chosen this shire to make themselves a load of money. They already have deep pockets and for years have been buying the goodwill of local organisations run by well-meaning but suggestible people. The reality is that the planned mega-festivals will instantly multiply the local residential population by a factor of seven and that's at the small end of the scale of Splendour's proposed activities. The Splendour development application gives no guarantee that surrounding areas will be free of noise pollution, referring only to 'acceptable levels', an open-ended, therefore impossible to police promise.

The vehicular access of the local community will be blocked off during every event conducted on the site. This will make access to Byron Bay from Murwillumbah and access to Brisbane and the Gold Coast from South Golden Beach and North Ocean Shores many kilometres longer. From my home it adds approximately 50km to the journey.

Splendour likes to insist that the local economy depends on tourism. The truth is that Splendour's private money strategy relies on tourism. This shire has been around a lot longer than the recent tourism glut and survived perfectly well and provided a far better quality of life for residents.

Attracting the party-hard, booze and drug culture to this area will destroy the community. But Splendour sees this shire as their own personal cash-cow. Splendour isn't going to let the well-being of the community stop them in their quest for millions of dollars.

Greed is no excuse. I haven't heard any other reason for this development application. Give Byron back to the residents.

Each of these events are owned and operated by members of North Byron Parklands. Their expertise in event management is second to none and will be a huge advantage in ensuring the events hosted at this site are done so in a compliant and professional way.

A business that combines ecology with events and community giving. That?s the kind of business that our young people are looking to for training and experience. Let?s get it approved.

It impressive to see that during events they propose to have a wildlife rescue crew in place in the unlikely event that an animal is in need of help. What other proposal has this level of thought and detail when it comes to considering the health of the environment? In areas such as Byron, the Tweed and the Richmond Valley employment prospects for young people are difficult to come by. Bring an employer like North Byron Parklands to the area will generate much needed jobs and give many young people to opportunity to earn a regular pay packet. With so many people relying on tourism for their income on the North Coast there is an obligation on behalf of state and local governments to help facilitate any reasonable project that will increase domestic and international tourist numbers. North Byron Parklands will become the home of a number of major events with each of these events attracting thousands of people to the area. This will greatly enhance the local tourism sector.

The level of commitment in relation to environmental monitoring before, during and after events is going to provide environmental benefits on two fronts. First it will accurately document the presence or otherwise of various fauna around event times. It will also importantly start to build a large amount of environmental data which can be used to guide and modify environmental practices into the future. With the already significant amount of environmental data captured through assessments and surveys, this body of knowledge is likely to be significant.

If you speak to anyone these days, getting and keeping a job is high up on the list. Regional areas generally do not have a range of diversified industries to choose from. Parklands is offering meaningful and interesting work, particularly for young people and should be welcomed with open arms.

How many times have we heard of organisations saying that they have incorporated environmental considerations into their business activities? Well here is a project that seems to have been built from the ground up based on ensuring that environmental impacts are mitigated or reduced and that positive environmental outcomes such as tree planting and habitat creation are maximised. Great job parklands.

Splendour in the Grass has provided a lot of mentorship and training opportunities for young people in the past. The fabulous Splendid initiative is an example of this. They really invest in young people. Even if these initiatives remain limited to Splendour in the Grass, it's important to have these opportunities for young people in the region.

Our business thrives on the local and tourists dollar. This winter 2010 was the first in 10 years that Splendour was not present in Byron. We put staff off and our winter sales were down 25%. Bring SPLENDOUR HOME..

P4993	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Nigel Raynard of Unique Images (support)	North Byron Parklands staff have already developed a solid working relationship with National Parks ground staff, local indigenous bush regeneration teams and local council ecology staff. To date North Byron Parklands has planted thousands of trees adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature reserve, installed dozens of nest boxes to improve habitat opportunities and removed thousands of metres of barbed wire fencing to reduce impediments to fauna movement. These actions have been completed prior to asking for any sort of approval for use of the land as an outdoor venue. What is truly impressive is the number of environmental programs this organisation is proposing should the application be approved. North Byron Parklands is all about hosting lots of different events, all of which require people to work in a variety of jobs. One event can employ hundreds of people for a period of time and in an area such as Byron such job opportunities are very welcome. We should be doing all we can to make this project happen. North Byron Parklands is set to play a pivotal role in strengthening the north coast tourism sector by attracting so many people to the area. These visitors will likely stay one or two days either side of the event they are attending and will no doubt spend a lot of money on goods and services and tourism related activities. This project should be supported from the Premier down, because the regions stands to gain so much from it. The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture. My business and many others rely on tourism in our area, Splendour weekend has always attracted a crowd in Byron and surrounding area. During festivals, my business has had strong trade, and the economy is being hit hard by the high Australian dollar GFC. Let's bring this festival home, and continue to promote the area a welcoming community, not as a community lead by a minority that think they know what's best for us harding working people. Festivals and event bring the community together, and bring the tourist dollar to many in our community. Those against such events only think about themselves, and not the greater community.

P4995	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Jeremy Stones of Beebox Mgmt. (support)	The level of environmental assessment that has taken place across North Byron Parklands is greater than for any other development in the Northern Rivers region. Not even councils or government agencies responsible for managing environmental values has undertaken such in-depth studies. All such assessments indicate that the proposal will not only have minimal environmental impacts, it is actually likely to improve wildlife corridors, fauna habitat and consolidation of fragmented forest blocks. These are very positive outcomes. In the Byron and northern rivers areas tourism is subject to busy times and quiet times. It is planned that a number of events will occur at the North Byron Parklands site each year and one of these takes place in winter when tourism businesses are struggling to cover costs. Building a dedicated events venue in the Byron Shire will have a number of very positive benefits for the tourism industry which is a good thing. Employment opportunities are getting harder and harder for many people in rural areas to find. With so many industries moving out of rural areas we need to encourage those businesses that want to set up in these regions with as much help as possible. I understand that North Byron Parklands will provide a large number of jobs across a very broad range skill sets. Projects of this nature should be approved on this basis alone.

When the owners of North Byron Parklands bought the property they took on board a court order to rehabilitate Yelgun Creek which was badly degraded by the former owner. This creek system used to flow into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, feeding it with flood waters and providing the varied hydrological flows that the existing flora community required. The North Byron Parklands people will now rehabilitate the creek by removing excess siltation and undertaking riparian plantings. This will be a huge plus for the nature reserve.

With jobs hard to come by in regional areas such as the north coast it is really important that projects that can provide ongoing employment opportunities are considered seriously by government. I believe that North Byron Parklands is one such venture that can offer many people a job opportunity.

The success of towns reliant on tourism generally comes down to how many people visit the area. To maintain a sustainable business, tourism dependant regions need to not only maintain visitor numbers, they need to grow them. North Byron Parklands represents the types of businesses that are required to increase visitor numbers and if this proposal goes ahead it will be a very positive thing for the NSW north coast.

P4998	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Susan O'Halloran (support)	I have been to many outdoor event sites over the past number of years but have never come across a venue that has taken so much effort to develop and implement so many environmental programs. When events are not being staged at North Byron Parklands, there will be reafforestation and noxious weed removal activities. When there are events at this site they will need to comply with a bunch of strict environmental policies and procedures. If only other venues could take a leaf out of these guys' book. As part of Parklands proposed construction phase they have developed a range of measures to mitigate environmental impacts. These include erecting signage, supervision of minor tree removal by a qualified ecologist, compensatory planting, fauna culverts and the installation of sediment and erosion control systems. This is just for the construction component of the project. The environmental controls proposed for the operation phase are even more detailed and impressive. North Byron Parklands have conservatively projected that their three major events each year will attract more than 100,000 visitors to the region each year. With a currently depressed tourism sector, such a proposal is a welcome shot in the arm. The direct and indirect economic benefits flowing the tourism sector and other related industries will be immense.

P4999	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from Samantha Clode of triple j magazine (support)	It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning.

North Byron Parklands is all about hosting lots of different events, all of which require people to work in a variety of jobs. One event can employ hundreds of people for a period of time and in an area such as Byron such job opportunities are very welcome. We should be doing all we can to make this project happen.

19/10/2010 Online Submission from Monika Lackmann of solidgoldhell.com (support)

In addition to the plethora of environmental programs proposed by North Byron Parklands once the site becomes operational, I note that they will also undertake in-depth ecological assessments prior to and during their construction phase. While it is noted that their building program is relatively small given the limited infrastructure planned, it is very pleasing to see that such ecological assessment and monitoring is to be undertaken.

Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities â young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

The trustees of North Byron Parklands are people with great business acumen as well as being extremely considerate of the environment, cultural and regional issues. I wholeheartedly support them in their proposal for this events and cultural area.

P5003	Project Website Submission	19/10/2010	Online Submission from melanie Tsao of music/arts fan-ex mtv networks employee (support)	Having a world class facility like North Byron Parklands in the Byron region is an awesome opportunity. Any place in Australia would welcome that. Many supposed local environmental groups have been invited to visit the North Byron Parklands and to participate in the public tree planting days that have been held over the past few years. Unfortunately none of these groups have actually converted their words into action by helping to repair this partially degraded site. The local indigenous bush regeneration team on the other hand has been responsible for planting thousands of trees in key locations and is another example of the Parklands group working with its community. The Byron region can market itself as a hub for events and creativity if this proposal is approved. They would be very fortunate indeed to have the training and skills benefits of such a proposal. The North Byron Parklands idea is inspiring for young people. There is precious little around, particularly in regional areas, which is inspiring for them. The proposal is all about the environment, events, culture and celebration. It's all about young people and being young. This is really important. P5004	Project Website Submission	18/10/2010	Online Submission from James Thomas of Sole Trader (support)	From a cultural breeding ground perspective alone we must get the proposal approved. It's a fabulous exciting vision and we are very lucky that this proposal is before us. The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people. How many fantastic cultural events and opportunities has NSW lost to other states, particularly to Queensland and Victoria over the past decade. Lets not make the same mistake again by letting the North Byron Parklands project slip through our fingers. They have the necessary controls, they have an amazing cultural vision and they stand to tip the artistic balance back into the favour of this State. We should all get behind it. This proposal is a no brainer for the young. The jobs are vital, not just at North Byron Parklands but in all the industries which this proposal supports and makes more viable. The average annual household income in the Byron Shire and the Northern Rivers is substantially lower than NSW (approximately $55,000 compared with $71,000) and as such employment opportunities generated by North Byron Parklands would be incredibly valuable to the Shire and the region.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. These are great industries for the Byron shire. Not only can we nurture our event and cultural tourism industries but these green industries are areas where we can excel. P5010	Project Website Submission	18/10/2010	Online Submission from Blake Rayner of Hello Pavement (support)	While much is made of the Marshallâ€™s Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities. The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger.

For the educational institutions around the Northern Rivers this proposal is very positive. Students can study at the institution and gain on the ground experience and field work at North Byron Parklands in areas such as ecology management, event management and traffic management.

I can see only good coming from the use of this land for music and cultural events a few times a year, rather than possible housing or worse. I personally know many existing shop owners who have told me how much that week of trade is worth to them and how it has affected their turnover in it's absence.

North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

Submission 17/10/2010 Online Submission from Nicole
Glavan of Under the Wing (support)

I welcome the establishment of a cultural event site for the region. The Parklands site will host the community to come together for a wide range of community events to celebrate, to learn, for ceremonies, to exchange ideas, to demonstrate and showcase new ways of doing things. This is good for people and the planet.

Imagine an events venue that can attract tens of thousands of visitors to a rural area. Imagine an events venue that has investigated and assessed all aspects of its operation and developed best practice policies and procedures. Imagine an events venue that generates lots of employment opportunities and provides much needed income for a range of businesses. Well the events venue is North Byron Parklands and it should be approved by the government because sustainable projects like this are few and far between.Â Â Â Â Â

The current population of the Northern Rivers is approximately 294,000 people, and is anticipated to increase to approximately 376,000 people by 2036. Such an increase in population requires a suite of stable employers. North Byron Parklands can play a significant role in providing jobs to people in this region.

With up to twenty days of events each year the work experience opportunities for people in the region are very exciting. The bump in and bump out periods provide further work. We need these jobs and the training they provide, from high level event management to ticketing, technical production and traffic management.

North Byron Parklands would offer a large array of employment opportunities that I think will benefit Byron and the Northern Rivers region. Bring on the variety and the possibilities!

P5022	Project Website Submission	17/10/2010	Online Submission from Amica Sanday (object)	I am most distressed at the prospect of 20 non-consecutive days of festivals at the Yelgun site, which is located within the LAST remaining wildlife corridor between Mount Warning and the sea. It is a known habitat for HUNDREDS OF SPECIES, including koalas. Threatened bird species such as the pied oystercatcher nest near if not on the land, and endangered turtles also nest nearby. You will have received a statement, I am sure, from Splendour's own environment management consultant detailing this WILDLIFE. Now, many of these species are territorial, and, as their HABITAT has already been MINIMIZED by human activity, there is simply nowhere for them to run away to when THOUSANDS of drunken party-goers arrive at the site, and BLARING music with heavy BASE beats which are known to make people in the area physically ill, let alone small creatures. This is my main objection to the use of the site - I simply do not see how the indirect killing of harmless creatures (trying to live out their lives in the small amount of land we have left to them), just so that some young people can have a "good time" and organisers can make HUGE BUCKS can possibly be justified. We already have a festival venue in this area, just up the road from Yelgun, why can this not be used?

The supposed profit to the area and the State will be at huge cost to the people living nearby, with unimaginable traffic disruptions and great risk to any emergency which could take place, not only on the site, but in Ocean Shores or Brunswick Heads, where traffic will prevent emergency vehicles from getting to any accident sites.

The history of the event is, unfortunately, not very pretty. While the majority of festival-goers are, of course, lovely young people, there is inevitably a certain number who are there to get totally wasted; to prey on the more innocent; and to cause chaos in the whole area around. These people live out of vans; urinate and defecate in people's gardens; and are yet again a threat to the wildlife.

There is no justification for a site like this to be used in such a way. It is not just a question of the numbers attending, but the nature of the whole proposal. PLEASE DO NOT APPROVE IT IN ANY FORM.

A project like splendour will do nothing for this area except create an atmosphere I moved here to try and avoid. For the life of me I do not understand why there needs to be two mega festival sites within a few km's of each other. P5025	Project Website Submission	16/10/2010	Online Submission from Eb Howard (support)	The preservation of ecological values in and adjacent to the Parklands site is an important aspect of the proposal. Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported. The average annual household income in the Byron Shire and the Northern Rivers is substantially lower than NSW (approximately $55,000 compared with $71,000) and as such employment opportunities generated by North Byron Parklands would be incredibly valuable to the Shire and the region. P5027	Project Website Submission	16/10/2010	Online Submission from Lizzie Brown of Byron Bay Property Sales (support)	I am writing to inform the Director General of my support of the Cultural Events Site, Yelgun 09_0028 proposal. I believe this proposal is of high importance to the cultural and economical future of our town, and of maintaining our identity as a supportive centre for creative arts. Working locally in the tourism industry the financial benefits and job creation opportunities will help to strengthen my industry. The tourism industry, directly and indirectly, is a major employer and contributor to the economy of the Northern Rivers and a diversity of events throughout the year is a vital part of the tourism mix. In recent years I have felt a real shift in the identity of Byron Bay as a supportive melting pot for creativity and self expression, to more of a 'tied up in red tape' culturless and exclusive oasis for the rich.

I also have extended family who are retail business owners and have lived in Byron Bay all their lives. Their businesses rely heavily on the tourism of this town to support themselves. So not only do I want a positive shift to our identity, but a proposal like this is also vital for the security of myself and my family. I thoroughly support this proposal.

P5028	Project Website Submission	16/10/2010	Online Submission from Jasmine Fraser of Slipstream Media (object)	These kinds of events are completely unacceptable and inappropriate for the location. It is a very fragile wildlife corridor very close to a residential area, which is prone to regular flooding. I can see no benefits for the Byron Shire and the people who live here, and even though the Splendor organizers are keen to project an image of environmental awareness and cultural support, they are clearly in this for the money and having been to the festival before I can say it is mainly huge crowds of wasted people who throw litter all over the ground. I am not against festivals in general, and go to many myself, but this kind of festival should be held somewhere where the noise, rubbish and traffic doesn't destroy the local flora and fauna and the peaceful residential environment. P5029	Project Website Submission	15/10/2010	Online Submission from Lucas BAR of GCAUDIOVISION (support)	I am so excited about the opportunities that a proposal of this nature can offer to both the people of Byron Shire and the north coast. It provides for employment, tourism and cultural experiences that unfortunately over the past years have been driven out of the shire. North Byron Parklands can play a massive role in putting this beautiful area firmly back on the tourist map. This application should be approved.

The size of events that could occur at Parklands is appropriate and sustainable. The few events that may reach 50,000 patrons per day in the future are not mega or huge. Other events in Australia and the rest of the world are much bigger.

The opportunity to showcase the stunning nature in the Byron region through a sustainable event venue is surely a wonderful proposition. Outdoor events bring people closer together, let us show the way Australia. Bring Splendour home!

Events are not just for young people, they are for keeping us young. For reinvigorating us and reconnecting us. Having a permanent space in nature to gather together as different communities? young people, old people, music lovers, bird watchers, is a very exciting proposition for Australia.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria.

Events are really important for young people today. Coming together is not just about getting drunk and partying. It's about helping each other and learning. Having a permanent cultural event venue in nature is the way forward for young people.

It is very telling when an organisation such as North Byron Parklands go to the considerable lengths they have to identify and assess the potential environmental impacts associated with the project. The extensive mitigation strategies they have proposed will not only see the protection of valuable ecological attributes but improve the overall environmental viability of the site. It is pleasing to see such a high level of environmental planning.

The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved.

The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

The model of a green sustainable event space which gives back to its host community is a model we need, particularly if we want to sustain a vibrant creative culture.

Splendour in the Grass is an epic event known and loved by all of Australia. Part of this was because of its location. Bryan Bay is probably the most fantastic spot in Australia and is loved by locals and tourists all year round. When you take Splendour out of Bryan you take its authenticity and vibe out of it also. While much is made of the Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

My partner is a bush regenerarator and has said this many a time in regards to the marshall's Ridge corridor and if anyone has the expert opinion it would be him as he knows this area back to front.

Having read the environmental assessment report I can say without reserve that I strongly support the proposal put forward by North Byron Parklands. The application covers off on all of the important issues such as noise, traffic and ecology. It is so pleasing to see a development that has considered and responded to such a diverse range of issues. I firmly believe that the government should approve this application.

North Byron Parklands is one of those venues that give back to the local community. This is important no matter which way you look at it. I think it would be a shame for this venue not to go ahead.

i object to this totally inappropriate festival for our area. as a resident in a supposedly family friendly town which we and council are trying to create this multiple festival idea is totally out of sinc with the aims and wishes of residents and council alike.

The council has a festival policy that allows 2 major festivals a year with a cap on the numbers between 17500 and 20000 people allowed. to allow a festival of 35000 to 50000 is totally disproportionate to the size of our shire just 17500 people.

Our infrastructure is unable to cope with the numbers coming to byron now. We already have 1 xmas holidays 2 easter holidays 3 schoolies 4 writers festival 5 blues and roots festival 6 school holidays qld and nsw [sept] and many other smaller festivals.

The town of byron and surrounding areas are overrun with tourists at these times and now there are very few times when there is a quiet period.

It doesn't matter if these events occur outside the cbd as most people coming to the shire have to visit byron cbd at least once. Most of the punters attending splendour will get into their vehicles at some time and go to byron causing huge traffic jams into town as already happens on most weekends.

In byron there are numerous night clubs when the festival closes at midnight the patrons will leave for byrons clubs causing noise and traffic kaos at the wrong time of night.

The festival recently set up in woodford where the facilities were already set up this area is an area where there is no nearby town to go to in respect of night clubs and a so called perceived young scene, therefore the patrons stay on sight.

As for money spent in the area, i have witnessed previuos splendours and most of the patrons[ages 17yrs to 35 yrs] spend their money in woolworths, the bottle shops,and some coffee shops,some do stay in local accomadation but most of this is illegal holiday accomadation which creates noise issues etc in residential areas. So as you can see the supposed millions that are injected into the community is a furfey.

As for the bribes given to local charities etc lets face it thats all they are compared to the money made by the festival.

To sum up why should we as a community of residents have this large money making mega festival thrust onto us, at the expense of residential amenity, the exploitation of our towns and infrastucture,against the wishes of our demecratically elected council and have our towns turned into basiclly a theme park all year round.There are better places for these mega festivals to go, especially multiple ones, not small towns where the residents are overwhelmed.

One last point the enviroment this area is designated natural reserve, not a place where 50000 patrons multiple times a year should be allowed to trample all over. Byron shire is about the nature a place for families to come and enjoy not thousands of alchol drug influenced punters mainly from brisbane to come and trash, not only the above but just by sheer numbers.

P5041	Project Website Submission	14/10/2010	Online Submission from Peter Croagh (object)	I object to this development for a number of reasons. Already many itinerants sleep in cars and on the beach near our house. This will be exacerbated by 50000+ party goers four times annually. Having being burgled again recently, I worry for the security of towns like South Golden Beach. The natural enviroment will be devastated. This was pastoral land with a nature reserve abutting it. There will be a constant threat to the native animals due noise and overcrowding. Most people bought in this part of the world for peace and quiet, there are a number of other areas already in use for "festivals" and "cultural events" in Byron shire, use them. Thank You... P5042	Project Website Submission	14/10/2010	Online Submission from Mathew Morris of Global Protection Agency (support)	I am an environmental scientist that has followed the approvals process of North Byron Parklands both via the Byron Shire Council and now through the NSW Department of Planning. I feel there are a number of facts that need to be pointed out regarding the physical elements of the site: - The site has been significantly degraded over the past 50 years from a range of agricultural activities; - There is significant soil erosion across the site; - More than 66% of the site has been cleared; - One of the past owners has wilfully destroyed indigenous areas of importance and severely impaired the hydrology of Yelgun Creek; - There are many areas across the site affected by noxious weeds; and - The tree cover that still remains is fragmented and provides poor corridor functions for fauna; The North Byron Parklands team have rigorously assessed all aspects of the site covering everything from traffic, light, noise ecology, soils, contamination, water, sewer, etc. Most impressively they have opted to adopt ISO 14001 Environmental Management Systems as their platform for managing environmental impacts. Further they have rolled into this system safety and community concerns. This project will bring substantial employment opportunities to the shire and to the region. Local businesses stand to gain significantly from the direct and indirect expenditure from Parklands and its patrons. Tourism operators will receive a massive boost for accommodation with an estimated 70,000 bed nights being generated in the first year. The proposal will also provide limitless training and skills opportunities for schools, TAFE, universities and other learning institutions.

The proposal also aims to redress the impacts I listed at the start of my submission by planting trees, creating habitat, repairing the degraded wildlife corridor and controlling soil erosion.

This is an outstanding project with extremely positive environmental, social and economic benefits. The benefits far outweigh the negatives and I firmly believe the NSW Department of Planning must approve this application.

P5043	Project Website Submission	14/10/2010	Online Submission from Anne Shomali of private (object)	I was very concerned to learn of the proposed festivals applied for in Yelgun Area - Splendour in the Grass is a growing festival, bringing in huge numbers of people, cars, fumes and noise to a most beautiful peaceful area of the Byron Shire. Those residing there chose to do so because of the peace and quiet for themselves and the nature surrounding them. I do not agree with festivals being allowed there, and object strongly - this world is too fast and loud as it is, time to slow down, enjoy the peace. P5044	Project Website Submission	14/10/2010	Online Submission from Susanne Hacker of private (object)	I am strongly opposed to the Splendor in the Grass organisation to be approved at Yelgun. My reasons are: 1)Fauna in our precious Billinudgel Nature Reserve will be under intolerable noise and lighting assault causing disruption of mating and predatory defence senses for vulnerable species. 2)Increased bushfire risk with up to 50,000 young and intoxicated people partying on the edge of the reserve 3)Traffic at the Splendour Festival held at Woodford was banked up for over 6km. That will close down Tweed Valley Way all the way back to Brunswick Heads. 4)there is a high risk of flooding in parking and camping areas 5)Up to 4 mega festivals per year with crowds projected to rise up to 50,000 or more for each festival plus another 4 festivals of up to 10,000per day and another unlimited number of smaller events and doof parties will more than double the entire population of Byron Shire several times per year taxing amenities, services, beaches and other public places

6) A huge increase in the worst type of holiday letting with all night partying coming to a house near me

7) and last but not least the sanity of nearby residents like myself being under threat due to massive disturbances caused by high level noise coming from the festival site and roads.

I did not move to a remote part of the Shire to have to accept this kind of intrusion.

Online Submission from Michael Bushby ()

To the NSW Planning Department

Regarding Application Number 09-0028

Recently I met a long time local fireman who expressed his deep concerns about the Yelgun site....

On a dry, windy day, one carelessly discarded cigarette could ignite the peat moss bed causing an out-of-control fire that would rapidly spread through the entire valley.

This alone is cause enough for alarm, apart from the native wildlife and social impact.

The only significant monetary profit will go to the organisers and the drug dealers who infest such events. (Make no mistake ? Splendour is an enormous outdoor rave, an extension of the club and doof party scene.)

As a festival site, Yelgun is a disaster waiting to happen, be it from fire, flood, drug overdose or wildlife wipeout.

Please do not approve this DA.

Much scientific assessment has been undertaken which highlights that the site has been heavily degraded over the past number of years and that the proposed fauna and flora management plans will greatly enhance and protect existing identified values. The North Byron Parklands Project will actually result in a positive impact on the environment and should be supported. The North Byron Parklands proposal should be approved because of the incredible opportunities it provides both the community and the business community. I can imagine that this cultural arts and music event venue as becoming the preeminent cultural hub of Northern NSW and will do a lot to attract dollars from Queensland and Victoria. This project should be approved. The demographic characteristics of the region are indicative of an aging community with a high proportion of retiree aged people and many young people aged 20 to 34 leaving the area to seek education and employment opportunities. North Byron Parklands would definitely help provide employment for many of these young people.

The opportunity to showcase the stunning nature in the Byron region through a sustainable event venue is surely a wonderful proposition. Outdoor events bring people closer together, letâs show the way Australia. Bring Splendour home!

Dear NSW Department of Planning,

Having read the environmental assessment report I can say without reserve that I strongly support the proposal put forward by North Byron Parklands. The application covers off on all of the important issues such as noise, traffic and ecology. It is so pleasing to see a development that has considered and responded to such a diverse range of issues. I firmly believe that the government should approve this application.

While much is made of the Marshallâs Ridge wildlife corridor the actual reality of this corridor is that it is fragmented, populated with noxious weeds and is great need of repair. Restoration will only come about by the landowner, in this instance being North Byron Parklands. This business has committed through its vegetation management plan and a number of other measures to reduce forest fragmentation by planting endemic species which will no doubt improve fauna movement opportunities.

I have personally seen the proposed site myself and I believe that this area would make a fantastic site for many future Festivals. The North Byron Parklands have obviously put a lot of time and effort into scouting around for a suitable site that is still accessible for music lovers everywhere.

Young people need to gather together to celebrate. Young people will gather regardless of cultural event venues. It's up to us as adults to decide that we want to support venues that support young people.

Regards,

Ash Michau

I also have no affiliation with the resident's group which is opposed to this proposal. My grounds for objection are that the Byron and adjoining Tweed shires are in dire need of essential services and that the State Government should attend to this issue as a matter of priority before even considering further large scale developments. As a GP who has lived for over 30 years about 8km north of this proposed festival site, I have worked as the sole doctor on call at both the Mullumbimby and Byron hospitals - and the feeder population for these hospitals is well known to swell by around 40,000 during the Blues Festival each Easter long weekend. I am extremely concerned that large events of the nature planned at the Yelgun site overtax local health and emergency services while at the same time reducing amenity for local residents who pay rates for the provision of public amenities. It is simply inequitable and irresponsible to countenance further festivals in the Byron Shire when the unemployment and homelessness rates in the Shire are among the highest in NSW. I wish to object to the devel[opment of the site at Jones road for festivals such as "Splendour in the Grass" This site is totalyy unsuitable being to close to the town of Ocean Shores and Brunswick Heads. The noise and traffic will seriously affect the peace of residents and the effects on local wildlife in the sanstuary is almost cetain to be derimental. There is and added risk of fire also.

This shire already has a designated site for such events at Tyagarah which should be used for such events.

P5062	Project Website Submission	13/10/2010	Online Submission from Fred Schack of Very concerned Resident (object)	We strongly object to the Splendor application because 1. The Events policy of the Byron Shire will not allow Mega Festivals it would be an insult to us as Voters to ignore our Community concerns. 2. Why can't Splendor use existing site of Bluesfest and be happy with the limited numbers attending. 3. We will be totally inconvenienced by the amount of Traffic generated on the Highway and Tweed Valley way. Example this year assessing the Woodford site with amazing traffic jams. 4. We object also because the site is in or on a Nature reserve and the amount of patrons will not respect the Bushland and the pristine Beach.

Disturbing Wildlife and polluting areas we guard to preserve the unique nature.

5.As the site is far from convenient amenities

the spill over of mostly young and happy intoxicated patrons will rumage in our quite community.rent houses and have ongoing parties(as previously in Byron)

6.We objet to four or more megafestivals with 50thousand patrons who can not acess a site designed for Rural living.

7.The fire and evacuation risk with do many people is immense and looking a the submission, escape will be a nightmare-especially after the recent precedent in germany whre somany lives had been lost.

In our opinion this submission should not be approved for this site and the options of moving to the Tyagrah site or Woodford would be a solution to this application.

Kind regards

Fred and Sue

P5063	Project Website Submission	13/10/2010	Online Submission from Paul Tisdell ()	What can one say, that this issue got this far beggars belief. Firstly, it is in the midst of the most sensitive and only wildlife corridor between Byron Bay and the Tweed. It links the coast (Billinugal Nature reserve) to Wollumbim. Wildlife and 10 to 20 thousand people at a rock concert don't mix, how hard is it to see this. Our community does not have the infrastructure to support this kind of development. The amount of people suggested for each event dwarfs the number of residents that live here. Government will not give us adequate police numbers to police our area now, what hope have we got with these events. Can you imagine what thousands of young people in party mode would do to a quiet small community. A square peg does not fit a round hole. One could list heaps of stuff, traffic etc etc but surely there is some commonsense still accessible to even politicians and their beaurocrats although I am often left wondering. P5064	Project Website Submission	13/10/2010	Online Submission from karen stuart (object)	I do not think this development is appropriate near an environmentally sensitive area such as the Billinudgel Nature Reserve (or the Green Caldera generally) particularly as there is already a festival site at Tyagarah. If there are only 4 festivals a year they will disturb natural breeding cycles, impinge on surrounding bush with loud music, bright lights, trampling people etc.- not to mention added risks caused by bushfires, flooding, waste management and traffic. That will close down Tweed Valley Way all the way back to Brunswick Heads * High risk of flooding in parking and camping areas * Brunswick Heads will be transformed into a permanent party town being the closest pub/beach locality to the site * Up to 4 mega festivals per year with crowds projected to rise up to 50,000 or more for each festival plus another 4 festivals of up to 10,000 per day and another unlimited number of smaller events and doof parties will more than double the entire population of Byron Shire several times per year taxing amenities, services, beaches and other public places * A huge increase in the worst type of holiday letting with all night partying impacting adversely on local residents amenity

As a resident of the surrounding area of the proposed event site, I would like to register my support. Apart from the financial benefits the local economy will see from it, it will create cultural vibrancy and unique employment opportunities in the local area. The North Byron Parklands proposal seems to be thorough and well considered - the environmental work being done, the consideration for the local residential and business communities...and most importantly, I feel excited for our local area when I read it!

I believe that the Yelgun site should be approved for cultural events such as Splendour in the Grass, as Byron has hosted the festival for many years now. It has had a positive impact on the economy, and helps promote the shire as a cultural tourist destination not only with Australia but globally.

As a local rate payer, I feel that the impact on our quality of life is minimal compared to the value financially, and the enjoyment that many thousands of shire residents gain from these events. My home is less than 3km from the proposed site, and I believe that it will have an insignificant impact on my daily routine during festival times.

P5070	Project Website Submission	12/10/2010	Online Submission from Paul Fisher (support)	I attended Splendour at Woodford this year and was astounded at it's success. It was by far the most successful and well planned. What a shame it would be for the Byron Shire to lose such a great event. It's clear that the QLD government have embRaced the event and are quite keen to see it stay. The economic benefits are obvious. As a Byron Shire resident, I've spoken to many local business operators about the impact (if any) of Splendour moving to Woodford. The responses have been uniform and unanimous. Every business experienced a significant downturn - at least 30% down on previous year. Finally, Byron has always been synonymous with creative expression. Seems strange that we're trying to purge Byron of something that essentially embodies the place. After considering the issue, I believe it would be a mistake (economically and culturally) to lose such an event from the region (particularly to QLD!). Yours sincerely, Paul Fisher

I have participated in tree planting on the site and studied the proposals for its environmental management. Given the history of the land use the proposal for the site is without doubt the best option to restore and expand biodiversity, in what is mainly degraded pastureland, including the gifting of significant land to National Parks and a 31% increase in native tree vegetation. I would prefer to see a tired cattle farm evolve into a well managed, re-afforested bio-diverse environment and welcome other measures deserving applause including the welcome construction of a permanent cultural centre. , I look forward to the possibility of organised small-scale community fundraising events on this site and encourage wider support for the realistic development of this valuable community asset. P5074	Project Website Submission	11/10/2010	Online Submission from Craig Brown (support)

I support this project as it will provide much needed employment in an area that already has a high unemployment rate. The precarious financial position of the Byron Shire is well documented and the very sizeable revenue this site will generate will go a long way to stabilizing this situation. Splendour in the Grass is one of Australias premier music festivals and will continue to grow in stature once a permanent home is established. This event is known internationally and the tourism value has to be recognized. Governments spend millions of dollars advertising Australia abroad but the buzz generated by a great event provides free word of mouth support and there can be no better way to get the word out about a great event set in a beautiful part of our country. I live on the Gold Coast and have watched as venue after venue is closed down and sold off to developers. This area is a cultural desert, unless one is prepared to pay through the nose to attend some half baked cabaret show at the local casino. The state government built an entertainment centre at Broadbeach yet will not book any acts likely to appeal to anyone under fifty, with a very few exceptions. this region is starved for entertainment options and i find it incredulous that there is a seeming position of opposition to the establishment of a venue that will bring much needed employment, income , and recognition. I fully support this proposal and understand that the people behind it wish to build a great environmentally sustainable and ecologically responsible site that will have enormous benefit to an area desperately in need of infrastructure that will continue to give long after the developers who are currently generating a short term income bubble have taken their profits and moved on. P5076	Project Website Submission	09/10/2010	Online Submission from Ben Sullivan of Stage and Events Production Management and Services Pty Ltd (support)	Dear Sir / Madam, I wish to register my complete support for the proposed Cultural events site at Yelgun currently being assessed by yourselves. As a person who works on outdoor events worldwide for then past 28 years I have complete faith in the team from North Byron Parklands to be suitable to create a culturaly and enviromentaly sensitive, unique, world class and much needed venue of this type in the Byron Shire. Whilst I have no direct regular dealings with the owners of the proposed venue I do attend some their events in a 3rd party capacity and have first hand experience of the quality of their productions which are of an extreemly high standard.

I have visited the proposed venue and consider it an excellent location for the varieties of events planned in the submission. I have complete faith in the enviromental integrity of Mr Matt Morris and the NBPL team to keep a secure balance with regard to the well publicised enviromental issues currently shrouding the project.

The creation of such a venue in Byron Shire - a shire with a high proportion of "creative industries" companies and freelancers would offer much needed economic stimulation not just for Byron shire but also for the whole of the Northern rivers and SE Queensland.

There are many many local people who would benefit from this event site being created here.

We need this venue here and I urge you to support this project.

Many thanks for your consideration of my opinion.

Yours Sincerely

P5078	Project Website Submission	08/10/2010	Online Submission from Glennis Wood (support)	In general I support the venue for applied usage, especially as major music events have been kept to a minimum. Since trees have been planted and drainage put in the site has much improved. I believe that the land environmental plan will only improve the site - it is, in fact, very degraded cow pasture. I have lived close by for 27 years. Three days a year is not much to put up with a bit of noise, especially when forewarned. The youth of the area not only need events to attend close by (rather than using highway to access events in Gold Coast and Brisbane), but they also need jobs. The tourism industry is feeling the loss of such an event as Splendour but will also benefit from other more cultural and low-key events at the northern end of the shire. Local groups will also benefit - Byron Council has not been able to supply enough sports ovals for youth in this end of shire nor used rates to improve access, roads, pathways etc. Name: Glennis Wood Address: 260 Crabbes Creek Road Crabbes Creek IP Address: cpe-121-216-163-211.inse2.ken.bigpond.net.au - 121.216.163.211 Submission for Job: #3210 Cultural Events Site (Project Application) https://majorprojects.onhiive.com/index.pl?action=view_job&id=3210 Site: #1982 Cultural Events Site - Tweed Valley Way and Jones Road, Yelgun (09_0028) https://majorprojects.onhiive.com/index.pl?action=view_site&id=1982

P5082	Project Website Submission	08/10/2010	Online Submission from Amanda Shoebridge of Southern Cross University (support)	I heartily support a well managed cultural event's site for Byron Bay Parklands and would be very disappointed to see an iconic event like Splendour in the Grass, which has been established over many years, move to another region. Understandably, these large scale events must be well managed so as not to cause major congestion, or flood the town of Byron Bay beyond the point of being beneficial. Having looked through this proposal however, I feel this is a well considered and viable option. The employment generated and the economic injection into the regional economy of this Cultural Parkland is considerable. The environmental benefits of a well managed area are also very positive - consider the example of the Woodford site in QLD which has been re-forested with native trees due to the management of the Woodford Folk Festival. I believe the most important considerations however, are the positive cultural and social impacts this parkland can contribute to this region. It is well known that this region is home to more employees of the creative industries outside a capital city than anywhere else in the country. A vision for this region, compiled by regional stakeholders at a Think Tank in March 2010, pointed to the creative and cultural industries, and the knowledge based industries as key growth areas to target. A development of this scale would go some way to fulfilling this vision. Maintaining and growing our cultural sense of place is also key to keeping alive the energy, diversity and creativity this region is renowned for. Having a designated space would encourage further creative and cultural pursuits in a way which has minimal impact upon the surrounding environment. In truth I find it surprising that it has taken this region so long for this region to dedicate a reasonable space for such pursuits. I believe this would be a very positive thing for this region. I believe the creative arts and music helps to bind communities, creating cohesion and community spirit. I believe this will provide an excellent and positive social outlet for the youth of our region. I believe it will support our tourism industry, which though is relatively low-yield, is very significant in terms of employment and economic impact for our region. I hope this proposal receives the support I feel it deserves.

The potential for a cultural facility for small to very large gatherings, conferences, festivals in the Byron Shire is one that should be supported.

This area has a diverse range of people that live and visit. The opportunity to host any type of cultural event will only enhance the region and the lifestyle amenity of its residents.

The proposed site is well away from any residential burroughs and will therefore make minimal impact on the surrounding residents.

Any impact will be restricted to a limited number of days throughout the year.

If it is possible to retain these cultural events in the region and not have to re-locate them to other regions, our own local community can only benefit.

As a resident of this area, I support this application.

P5084	Project Website Submission	08/10/2010	Online Submission from tory bauer (support)	Economy - North Byron Parklands will inject $192.6 million annually into the regional economy (total multiplier effect) when operating at capacity (RPS Group 2010). Employment - North Byron Parklands will create up to 210 full time equivalent jobs (RPS Group, 2010). Community Grants - The North Byron Parklands Community Grants Program will commence with the first major event held. - It will distribute over $100,000 annually to local community groups when North Byron Parklands is operating at capacity. Culture - North Byron Parklands supports the cultural tourism and creative arts industries. - The venue will provide a home for creative arts and musical expression in the Northern Rivers. Social benefits - Events generate intangible benefits such as improved social cohesion, lifestyle improvement, appreciation of diversity and increased creativity.

- North Byron Parklands provides an ethically and responsibly run nature based venue to facilitate gatherings of Australians of all ages.

Opportunities for young people

- The proposal provides training and jobs for young people in fields which are difficult to access in regional areas - such as event management, cultural heritage management etc.

- Young people will be encouraged to get involved in the organisation, hosting and coordination of events to learn new skills necessary to gain work in the creative arts and music industries.

Environment

- The event usage proposed is in grazed pasturelands covering less than 50% of the overall 660 acre site, leaving the majority for habitat use and bush regeneration.

- The proposal involves increasing the size and function of the Marshalls Ridge wildlife corridor.

- The proposal involves transferring approximately 28 hectares of bushland to expand the Billinudgel Nature Reserve.

- The proposal will provide opportunities to work with bush regenerators, universities and TAFE colleges to repair currently degraded land.

- The vegetation management plan will increase connectivity of the currently fragmented forest blocks across the site. This means it will be easier for animals to move across the 660 acre site.

- The tourism industry, directly and indirectly, is a major employer and contributor to the economy of the Northern Rivers and a diversity of events throughout the year is a vital part of the tourism mix.

Creative Industries

- The creative arts sector contributes over $190 million to the local economy.

- The region has a long history of hosting events. This has seen the creative industries sector become a strong regional employer and significant income generator.

- The proposal will ensure that Byron and the Northern Rivers region retains and attracts artists of all disciplines. These communities have been declining in Byron Bay in particular.

RE: 3A Major Project Application for a Permanent Event Site – Yelgun / Wooyung, Northern NSW - Regional Projects 09__0028

Dear Minister,

We oppose the current application for a permanent event site at Wooyung / Yelgun on the following grounds:

- It is not an appropriate use of the Part 3A legislation

The desire to bypass current 7(k) zonings legally protecting the site and widespread community opposition to the proposal has necessitated the proposal of a much too intense usage of an ecologically fragile site in order to qualify for the Minister's consideration under Part 3A legislation. However if a reduced usage was suggested it would no longer qualify for Regional Project status and would be reconfirmed to be illegal under the Byron Shire LEP 2010.

- NSW Government has spent approximately $15M of taxpayers money over the years protecting the wildlife corridor and to allow this permanent event site in the middle of the corridor would destroy the viability of the corridor and negate the work done so far by successive governments to protect it.

Although this corridor has had some farming activity on it it remains the only intact link from the coastal littoral rainforests to the world-heritage rainforests of the Caldera in the Border Ranges in the NSW north Coast

- In 2010 DECC indentified this wildlife corridor as part of a Critical Climate Change Corridor

- Noise impacts are likely to reduce viability of threatened species both on the site and using the wildlife corridor it is contained within.

The consultants Ecological Assesment Report concedes that potential noise impacts are difficult to predict or assess .As such it is necessary to rely on existing peer based research of the effects of human impact. The existing research on this subject has been summarised in the literature review titled "A Review of the Effects of Human Disturbance on Wildlife; Reference to a Proposed Permanent Event Site at Yelgun, NSW" prepared by A. Benwell and D. Scotts on behalf of the Conservation of North Ocean Shores Inc.

These studies show that contrary to common assumption, it has been found that intermittent but high intensity disturbance is identified as one of the most disturbing human activities on wildlife as the unpredictable and high-stress nature of it does not allow an adaptive response.

- Buffer zones as mitigation measures for the effects of human disturbance have been identified as unlikely to work at this site due to the topography of the site.

This effectively means that despite the best of intentions it is not possible to place a permanent event site at this location without seriously degrading the viability of the more than 50 threatened species known to use this site and the adjacent Billinudgel Nature Reserve.

- Proposal is inconsistent with the Byron Shire Events Policy

The events policy supports only 2 major events per year and was expressly introduced to support the homegrown BluesFest and Splendour in the Grass festivals while protecting the rights of the existing communities within the Shire. It seeks to support community inclusive festivals of which the Shire has many.

- Proposal is opposed by Byron Shire Council with serious concerns over safety of patrons

- Proposal is not supported by Tweed Shire Council

With the opposition to this proposal by both Byron and Tweed Shire Council's it is undemocratic for the NSW government to consider forcing a development of this size on a community when there is no demonstrated necessity or public interest in the proposal.

- Proposal is inconsistent with the Far North Coast Regional Planning Strategy which encourages economic development away from the Coastal Zone

Placing a festival site such as this away from the Coast in an area that is serviced by the trainline would encourage event-tourism outside the coastal strip and as such Casino or Kyogle Shires would seem to provide a more logical alternative.

- Event site will succeed outside Byron Shire and does not need to remain in Byron to be financially viable

The successful Splendour in the Grass event held at Woodford this year with 32,000 patrons proves this festival already has its name and does not rely on the Byron branding to hold its patronage, therefore it will not be disadvantaged by moving and is the ideal vehicle to draw event tourism into tourism poor areas.

- With 2 existing permanent Event sites in Byron Shire there is no economic necessity for a third.

The Blues Fest site at Tyagarah, just outside Byron Bay has capacity for 22,000 patrons, is not located in a wildlife corridor, has a perimeter that is easily secured and has recently gained approval for a further 11 years in the Shire with the possibility to increase patron numbers and events based on performance and adherence to approval conditions.

The Council owned Events site at Ewingsdale just outside Byron Bay is also a purpose built facility for events up to 7,000 patrons.

- Flooding Assessment shows site will be rendered unusable if a flood event occurs in the three week period prior to a major event

- Site is extremely flood liable with flooding study showing a flood warning time of less than one hour for the carpark area.

The previous flooding study submitted by the same proponents for this site and a trial event in 2008 contained the above information. This has been removed from the current flooding study and would seem to indicate the desire to reduce the Departments view of the threat to patron safety which this site contains.

- 8 events of 10,000 – 50,000 patrons per year equates to one every 6 ½ weeks and cumulatively produces too much impact on the amenity of existing neighbours and communities

- Fences necessary to stop public entering the event sites will provide a barrier limiting larger fauna species from using the wildlife corridor

With large events proposed every 6^{1/2} weeks and unlimited smaller events fencing will be required continuously on the site and fencing which can deter determined human gatecrashers will necessarily impact on use of the wildlife corridor by fauna species.

- 2009 Land and Environment Court decision has already established that the Spine Rd is prohibited in the 7(k) zoning and should not be supported.

The claim made in the Ecological Assessment that “for most of the time the property will operate as a farm” is clearly not supported by the scale of the proposal.

- Traffic Impact not possible to contain away from state significant Pacific Highway

There is no capacity on the proposed site to provide non flood-labile land which could provide the necessary on-site buffer to contain traffic and avoid backing up traffic on Tweed Valley Way and onto the Pacific Highway. All land suggested for this purpose is zoned flood liable land.

- Bushfire danger is listed as “Very High” in the NSW Bushfire Management Manual on this site.

The potential for loss of human life not only by the risk of bushfire but also due to the likelihood of panic ensuing after the smell and sight of smoke in a crowd of 50,000 is very high. In the Event and camping areas there are large areas of low-lying flat land which make it very difficult to pinpoint the source of the fire from the ground and would necessarily lead to panic by patrons. Considering this in combination with the highly flammable peat soils and the proposed bonfires in the event areas, the risk is too high and not possible to effectively mitigate with crowd control measures.

- Acid Sulphate Soils Assessment indicates high probability of contamination of surrounding wetlands by proposed site activity.

Page 1672 direct quote from the proponents application:

“The excavations proposed as part of the NBS Parklands development would result in the intersection and excavation of large quantities of potential ASM (acid sulphate material), such works would require intensive acid sulphate soil management actions in order to prevent the generation of chronically acid groundwaters and acidification by-products.”

-also as above for actual Acid Sulphate Soils

Given that this site is so often inundated it would seem a very high risk of contamination of the surrounding wetlands is also present. It would be difficult to implement management of excavation due to frequency of on-site flooding and erratic flood behaviour eg. Flooded 2 x in October this year, which is typically the driest month of the year.

- A Trial Event has been identified as an inappropriate recommendation for this proposal

It would allow for less stringent controls potentially increasing the negative impacts of the event on the wildlife corridor and would only give one-off results without providing an accurate assessment for the cumulative effects of 10 events. Byron Shire Council recognised this and have deliberately not supported a trial for this site.

For these myriad of reasons please listen to the communities who live in the Shire, recognise the rights of existing communities and reject this application which proposes too high a risk to the community for the potential economic gain of a few.

The bottomline both for the environment and the community is that this is not the right site. There are already 2 existing permanent events sites within the Byron Shire and there is simply not the necessity to justify a third.

Yours sincerely

Chris Cherry

As a resident of the Byron Shire, I wholeheartedly support the North Byron Parklands proposal, which is currently before the State Government.

There are very few opportunities for young people in this region to access creative arts industries and this venue, should it be approved, will create vital jobs for a significant number of young people who are seeking meaningful employment in the arts industries.

Jobs for young people in creative fields are difficult to access in the city, let alone regional areas. North Byron Parklands would encourage young people to get involved in the organisation, hosting and coordination of events to learn new skills necessary to gain work in the creative arts and music industries. – such as event management and cultural heritage management.□ These opportunities are priceless and vital for young people, particularly those in regional areas.

The region has a long history of hosting music, arts and cultural events. The creative arts sector contributes over $190 million to the local economy making the creative industries sector a strong regional employer and significant income generator.

The North Byron Parklands proposal will ensure that Byron and the Northern Rivers region retains and attracts artists of all disciplines and assists local people to access these employment opportunities.

Yours Sincerely,
Vivien Fantin

Australians for Animals NSW Inc. (AFA) objects to the Part 3A Application lodged by Billinudgel Property Trust for Splendour in the Grass Pty Ltd.

The grounds for our objection are as follows:-

It is simply not possible to properly assess any environmental or ecological consequences on the basis of the information provided.

- Any consent contravenes the Byron Biodiversity & Conservation Strategy.
- 33% of the site is identified as High Conservation Vegetation by Council.
- Any consent contravenes the Precautionary Principle which is included in the Byron LEP.
- Without a control experiment, any short term or long term trauma to wildlife cannot be properly established. The extent of festivals and the number of people on site will be extremely detrimental to animals.
- What kinds of damage ? Auditory ? Stress ? How will auditory damage and/ or stress be established ? What will happen to corpses found during monitoring ? What provisions for autopsies ? By whom ? What area will be monitored ? Will the Billinudgel Nature Reserve be monitored ? Who will monitor the after festival impacts on flora and fauna ? Using what methodology ?
- How will critical information as to whether reproduction, migration, communication, prey behaviour, nursing and other issues important to wildlife survival be addressed?
- The Far North Coast is the most biologically diverse region in NSW and the third most in Australia.
- Protection of this region is therefore significant both at the state and federal levels.
- The relevant documents fail to adequately address the impact on bird species particularly nocturnal avian fauna which utilise the site, their nests and feeding regimes.
- The regional context of the site and negative impacts have not been addressed.
- The impact of noise on the Billinudgel Nature Reserve can only be measured in a properly conducted study which has been authorised by an Ethics Committee *

- Noise impacts on birds, their prey, as well as disturbance of nesting sites are not adequately addressed.
- Relevant documents do not address the impacts of greatly increased traffic on the highway and its effects on avian fauna.
- The DA does not address the impact of helicopters flying in and out of the site.
- There is no indication of how often any helicopter(s) will be used.
- Pollution and noise impacts of helicopter(s) on fauna and avian fauna has not been addressed.
- The extent of earthworks (roads, tunnel etc) is massive. Disturbance caused by these works will have impacts on flora and fauna.
- Global warming will result in increased bushfire risk. The CSIRO recently warned of catastrophic bushfires because of climate change.
- The increased risk is not adequately addressed.
- The proposal conflicts with the Byron LEP 1988 and the provisions of the relevant zonings.
- The site is identified as a Biodiversity Area of State Significance on the Biodiversity map of the FNCRS.
- The site is identified as being within a Significant Groundwater area and an Environmental Assets and Rural Land, and National Parks area.
- The site is also identified as Land potentially subject to inundation.
- AFA objects to the proposed large scale events partly within a flood prone area with minimal evacuation protocol.
- The event is very large scale tourism development which would be prohibited under the current zoning.
- The festivals would generate more people than the population of Byron Shire requiring an infrastructure capable of supporting a small city.
- It is fallacious to suggest that carbon emissions will be negated by increased ticket price with funds directed to carbon free projects. The very size of the event with attendant travel, water and sewerage needs, waste and energy input completely dwarfs any minimal benefit of tree planting or funding of other projects.

In support of AFA's objection the following quotation from the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy is cited:-

8.2.3 Main Messages of the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy.

- Biodiversity conservation is fundamental to Ecologically Sustainable Development;
- Biodiversity is best conserved in situ, through restoring degraded areas, controlling threatening processes and by not introducing new pressures;
- Effective biodiversity conservation is dependent on adequate funding, sustainable landuse planning and education, with particular regard to the principle of conserving and enhancing biological diversity and ecological integrity;
- Biodiversity is essential to the survival of all life forms;
- Cumulative impacts, footprint effects and off-site impacts must be considered when assessing the environmental effects of an activity; and
- High Conservation Value vegetation and habitats as well as Identified Wildlife Corridors require conservation and restoration. Development in these areas will require detailed ecological assessment.

Noise impact on wildlife.

AFA has had considerable experience in the problems of acoustic trauma on cetaceans. As a result of launching two lawsuits against the US Government on the impact of sonar experiments on Eastern Pacific Gray Whales, and in our capacity as a member of the Federal Government's Steering Committee on the Seismic Industry and Cetaceans, we have had extensive dialogue with expert bio-acousticians.

The issues arising in relation to acoustic trauma and its impacts on terrestrial fauna are largely unknown. However, in spite of the lack of significant research, it is clear from the available evidence that fauna can suffer from temporary threshold hearing loss and in extreme cases, permanent threshold hearing loss.

It is also evident that without proper experiments which would involve tagging a very large number of animals of different species over an extended period of time, it is not possible to assert there will be no problems. Proper experiments would monitor behaviour, reproduction, communication, impact on feeding behaviour and prey species, migration, nursing, birth rates, stress and mortality.

The scientific literature makes clear that the Grey Headed Flying Fox, one of the species listed on site is protected under the Federal Environment Protection & Biodiversity Conservation Act has similar hearing to humans. Noise has been used to force bat colonies to leave areas and this fact is well documented. Research indicates the vulnerability of the Grey Headed Flying Fox at this particular time of the year to noise. Noise trauma can cause premature births and spontaneous abortion. During August and September, female Grey Headed Flying Foxes are pregnant and should not be exposed to industrial noise/music.

There is no attempt to identify how the proponent would identify acoustic trauma in the Grey Headed Flying Fox or other Endangered and Threatened Species listed in the EA.

Since a significant number of species will be impacted by the disturbance and noise, the event and the monitoring of these effects should be carried out under the auspices of a properly recognised academic or scientific institution.

Such a large scale experiment in noise, lights, traffic and disturbance on endangered and threatened wildlife would, in the real world, be subject to consideration by an Ethics Committee. It is extremely doubtful that any reputable scientific establishment would even consider such an experiment.

The Billinudgel Nature Reserve will also be impacted by noise, lights, loud music, and attendant stress. If wildlife flees the site into the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, more problems are likely to arise as animals are territorial AFA believes the exposure of listed species to these hazards is completely unacceptable, particularly in light of the extent of research which would need to be undertaken to determine whether there had been any impact.

BIRDS AND NOISE.

Compared to noise studies on humans, studies on animals have barely scratched the surface. However, recently considerable progress has been made.

Specific animal groups that have been receiving attention in recent research include: terrestrial animals, including birds (the most studied animal), mammals, and reptiles; and aquatic animals, including marine mammals, fish, and reptiles. The types of animals being studied has markedly increased over the last five years. Bird studies included woodpeckers, owls, falcons, and various species of meadow birds.

Scientific research has identified highways and attendant traffic noise as a major noise source for humans and animals, particularly bird species.

Wildlife and avian fauna on site will be exposed to both highway noise, increased traffic resulting in more noise levels and very loud noises coming from the various bands, DJs and possible drumming.

The fact that highway/traffic noise and the noise of the festival combination would reach unacceptable decibel levels has not been considered.

In contrast to the lack of research on the effects of noise on fauna, there is a considerable amount of scientific research on the impact of noise on birds. Noise can impact pairing, reproduction, communication and result in significant decreases in population. Noise is used in some countries as a bird deterrent.

Ambient noise may be detrimental to birds through direct stress, masking of predator arrival or associated alarm calls, and by interference of acoustic signals in general. Two of the most important functions of avian acoustic signals are territory defence and mate attraction. Both of these functions are hampered when signal efficiency is reduced through rising noise levels, resulting in direct negative fitness consequences. Many bird species are less abundant near highways and studies are becoming available on reduced reproductive success in noisy territories. Birdsong and anthropogenic noise: implications and applications for conservation. Hans Slabbekoorn and Erwin. A P. Ripmeester, Institute of Biology, Leiden University, The Netherlands. Molecular Biology, 2007

* Loud ambient noise affects the sex lives of birds. Man-made noise is increasing in the wild. Because birds communicate mainly by sound, loud environments interfere with their communication and reduces pairing by almost 15 per cent. (Dr. Erin Bayne. University of Alberta.)

- In wildlife considerations in planning and managing road corridors little attention has been given to the effects of disturbance by traffic on populations of breeding birds. Recent studies show evidence of strongly reduced densities of many species of woodland and open habitat in broad zones adjacent to busy roads. The density reduction is related to a reduced habitat quality, and traffic noise is probably the most critical factor. Because density can underestimate the habitat quality, the effects on breeding populations are probably larger than have been established

For ' meadow birds' which are of international importance, the decrease in population in the West of the Netherlands may amount to 16%. Because breeding birds suffer from many other environmental influences there is also a great risk of an important cumulation of effects. (Rein Reijnen, Ruud Foppen and Geesje Veenbaas. 2004)

Most research on how noise affects wildlife has involved high-level but short-duration noise--like that produced by low-flying military aircraft or helicopters. In contrast, the noise produced by highway traffic is quieter and more constant. This type of noise can interfere with the auditory signals birds rely on by making those signals inaudible, changing their perceived location, or reducing the distance over which the signal can be heard or interpreted. Birds depend on these signals for a variety of activities--contacting mates, warning of danger, monitoring their young, and detecting predators. The background noise produced by traffic, with its effect on birds' communication abilities, can render an otherwise suitable nesting area unsuitable. Under the ESA, this qualifies as degradation of habitat. Road Engineering Journal 1999

* Noise can cause certain species of animals , particularly predators, to abandon their habitat . A decrease in predatory species in an area can lead to overpopulation by other non-predatory herbivorous species which might then propagate to such a level that they would deplete vegetation in the area. Hazards associated with soil erosion are greatly increased as vegetation is depleted .

Livestock also can be adversely affected by noise. Excessive noise has been found to have an adverse effect upon both egg and milk production, and there also is evidence of reduced reproduction in the presence of noise. (Kern County General Plan, 1989)

- Assessing noise effects needs to take into account not only the species' hearing ability, but also the ability to escape the sound. Further consideration must be given to the biological costs of avoiding sounds and to habituation to noise.

(Finegold, L. S., Job, S., de Jong, R., Griefahn, B. (2004, Oct. 19). The effect of noise on public health: International congress explores impact on sleep, animals, and how communities respond. The ASHA Leader, pp. 15-16.

KOALAS.

Given the increasingly threatened status of koalas in New South Wales and South-East Queensland, any assumptions concerning localised populations can be misleading.

There has been no proper survey undertaken now for many years. Anecdotal evidence points to localised extinctions in Avalon, Wedderburn and on the South Coast. Coastal populations are severely depleted, particularly on the Mid and Far North Coast. Remnant populations on the border of NSW and Queensland and in the heavily urbanised lower part of south-east Queensland are struggling to survive.

AFA is aware of an increase in sick koalas in Byron Shire. The incidence of leukemia, cystitis, conjunctivitis and cancers in local koalas has been noted by wildlife carers.

Recent scientific research indicates a retrovirus is killing off koala populations in Queensland, particularly south-east areas. The retrovirus is present in northern NSW populations and may be responsible for the highly elevated number of sick koalas coming into care in this Shire.

Scientists at the Australia Zoo who have identified the retrovirus say they do not know how the virus is spread. In other words, the vector is unknown. Given the potential extinction of koalas as a result of this deadly retrovirus, any disturbance of known colonies should be prohibited.

Koalas are easily stressed. Given the combination of noise, lights, evidence of disturbance and stress in other forest fauna, the site is unsuitable for any noisy crowded event.

Without any knowledge of the vector of the retrovirus, exposing koalas to further risk is to be avoided at all costs. Stress lowers the immune system, thus putting koalas at unacceptable risk.

Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy identifies core Koala Habitat on the Yelgun site. AFA believes that all threatening processes listed under the Threatened Species Act can be considered legitimate threats to the site.

* Major earthworks and the building of a tunnel under Jones Road will impact Core Koala Habitat.

* Fragmentation is highly likely as a result of the extreme disturbance to the site.

* Given the exponential increase in traffic as outlined in the DA along Jones Road, road fatalities cannot be ruled out.

Given the amount of peat on site and the ongoing drought, mortalities caused by fire cannot be ruled out.

* There is no proper evidence which details current koala movements or migratory patterns.

JONES ROAD (7K Zoning).

The Australian Heritage Database, Place Details: List Register of the National Estate, North Ocean Shores-Natural Area, Jones Rd. Billindugel, NSW is listed as an indicative Place. Place ID 19922. Under Description is stated:-

The Jones Road ridge forms a major wildlife corridor allowing movement of wildlife between the Billinudgel Swamp area and the Upper Brunswick Inner Pocket and Burringbar areas. This is the only area on the far north coast which affords an unbroken link of natural vegetation between the coast and the World Heritage rainforests of the Mt Warning caldera. It is the most easterly corridor in the Byron Shire and is therefore the most easterly corridor on the Australian mainland.

There are no provisions in the Australian Heritage Database to support mega-festivals of industrial music on the National Estate or within wildlife corridors.

It is impossible to provide a safe, secure and healthy venue site for patrons, guests and workers at Yelgun. Without adequate lighting the potential for accidents is high. If dogs are permitted on site, there is a likelihood that they will attack wildlife with disastrous consequences.

Should a fire break out as a result of six bonfires being lit, the potential for accidents is high. The potential for a bushfire is also a new threat to fauna and flora as the scale of and presence of bonfires does not currently exist on the land. Billinudgel Nature Reserve would be at major risk of a bushfire. No amount of public risk insurance replace the irreplaceable ecological values of the Reserve. The CSIRO is warning that catastrophic bushfires will break out as a result of climate change.

Does Byron Shire have a task force capable of dealing with a major bushfire, the evacuation of 50,000 people with cars, caravans, buses, campers, trucks, coaches as well as dealing with the “normal “ emergencies within the shire's population ?

CONCLUSION:

AFA notes the considerable attempts made by the developers to turn all discussions on the problems inherent in the Splendour festival proposals into a focus on their “ green “credentials.

Without one single shred of scientific evidence which would support the premise that planting a few trees whilst at the same time exposing the wildlife to noise, disturbance and disruption of their habitats and breeding cycles for an open-ended length of time by crowds of up to 50,000, the proposal is absurd.

Developers have brought no credit to themselves by refusing to meet with the community unless it is on their terms; by promoting misleading information and failing to tell the community the real findings of their telephone survey ie that 96% of those surveyed want family tourism; by promising skate parks, netball courts, sports facilities etc. in other words, setting a precedent for developers to buy up community support.

The denigration of community concern by the developers is insulting.

And finally, there is no assessment of the profits which the developers project for the site and its many events.

AFA believes if these figures were put on the table, the community would know that the true focus of the developers is huge profits – at our expense and at the expense of the wildlife and environment.

Dear Sir / Madam

Re: Cultural Events Site, Yelgun 09-0028

Byron Bay Taxis & Limousines fully support Splendour in the Grass festival in their effort to establish their fabulous event on their own parcel of land in Yelgun.

The festival is important to our region for many reasons, with the primary factor being the huge boost to our economy. With tourism being the main industry in this region we cannot afford to let this event relocate to Qld, as it did this year.

This area is very seasonal and tourist revenue drops considerably through winter. The Splendour in the Grass festival comes just at the right time for the business community, as it contributes a much needed cash injection as our town struggles through the depths of winter.

Our business alone has over 130 drivers – that is 130 families who have struggled with very low winter income and can recoup some lost ground, when Splendour brings so many visitors to our area. Of course the effect is widespread and if the visitors don't come then there is no work available, not only for taxis, but in the cafes, restaurants, motels, supermarkets, petrol stations etc etc etc. Many jobs are also created at the actual festival site as well. When Splendour is based at Yelgun, areas to the north such as Pottsville, Cabarita, Tweed etc will also be greatly benefited by the increased visitor numbers.

The Splendour festival is also a fantastic cultural event and great to have such an event in our area. As travelling to the cities for concerts is very expensive and transport options are limited, regional events are to be encouraged.

As the festival site has very few neighbours and less than half the site will be used, enabling the expansion of the wildlife corridors, we feel that the environmental impact should be very minimal and the best that could be hoped for.

Don't let the few protesting voices rob the community of widespread benefit. Keep Splendour in Byron Shire.

Yours faithfully

Sandy Andrell

Administration Manager.

SPLENDOR SUBMISSION.

FROM: Robert Crossley, 9 Short Street New Brighton.

I wish to register an objection to the development application for Splendor for a number of reasons.

In summary, mega festivals like the ones proposed should be located in areas where there is adequate mass transport to cope with the people movements required, adequate accommodation facilities nearby to house the attendees, and be away from environmentally sensitive areas. This site does not fit any of these criteria.

While I support the concept of a location to hold music and cultural festivals, the proposed numbers are not appropriate for the location. A more realistic festival profile would be their suggestion without any of their major category of festival - only moderate, small and minor. Interestingly this would have allowed the Splendor festival to operate there until only a couple of years ago.

The impact on local residents is also made worse as the Blues Festival also has shifted to a nearby location, and if this proposal goes ahead, the area will be surrounded by festival sites. The demographics of the Blues festival means that the impact on local residents is less than what is proposed here.

The main issues I have are:

1. Party house phenomena. Frequent large festivals will encourage rental property owners in the local residential areas to do short term, high priced rentals to festival goers. This cannot be stopped due to Council's inability to control short term rentals in residential areas, despite a desire to do so.

The local areas of New Brighton and South Golden Beach have a fair proportion of holiday rental properties even now, but the demographics of the holiday goers is family seaside rentals in a relatively quiet, sleepy beachside area. The impact of load, party rentals is rare, but does cause concern when it does. Regular music festivals in the genre of Splendor will change the demographics of the rentals to more of a partying, schoolies-like crowd.

Even a party town like the Gold Coast is having trouble with party houses in residential areas being leased to people wishing to have parties away from their own neighbourhoods. Some of the more vocal supporters of the Splendor proposal own property in the nearby area, and envisage profiting from rentals over the festival periods. The Byron Shire Council is having trouble getting legislative support to prevent this practice as it is already a problem in Byron Bay. Allowing this development application without complementary legislation banning short term rentals in residential areas will condemn the local communities to this party house phenomena over the festival weekends. These will be at least one or more significant events per month.

2. Traffic. The traffic reports show that the existing freeway exits cannot cope with the envisaged numbers. Even the proponents own traffic consultants predict this, despite no doubt being commissioned to model a favourable scenario. Traffic will need to be diverted to the next exit and brought back along the old highway. This means that large volumes of traffic will go through the residential areas of Brunswick heads. Residents of the local residential areas will need to travel an extra 10 kms or more to get home if coming from the north. Residents going of the local Yelgun will have to deal with major traffic issues.
3. Community amenity. If Byron Bay cannot handle having Splendor run a couple of kilometres from it when the festival was a ¼ of the size of the proposed events, how are the residential communities of Billinudgel, New Brighton, South Golden Beach and Ocean Shores going to do it? There are 2 small hotels, three general stores and one supermarket to supply the needs of the visitors. The population of the festival is more than the entire Byron Shire.

4. Beach facilities. Campers will want to go to the beach nearby and will try to fit into the meagre parking available, causing road blockages as there is not enough room to park safely. Our beaches are quite dangerous, and have no regular beach patrols. People, a proportion of whom will be alcohol or drug affected, will swim in the surf, and some will die.
5. Fire. In dry years the peat underlying some of the site can burn out of control for long periods, releasing massive amounts of green-house gases from stored carbon in the peat. Camping activities or drainage are going to increase this risk dramatically. If the fires get into the Adjacent Billinudgel Nature Reserve, the effect on wildlife will be devastating. A bushfire in that area will also be extremely hazardous for attendees as the evacuation of this area would be troublesome with the numbers proposed.
6. Flooding. In wet years, flooding can quickly submerge the camping areas by up to 1m or more. The concept that you could get the number of people proposed going to the festival to evacuate from this site in time is ludicrous. The event organisers are not going to cancel an event on the treat of rain, and it only takes a heavy cloudburst to cause the flooding. The NSW planning guidelines suggest this is going to get worse with climate change.
7. Noise. The site is located adjacent to an extremely valuable natural habitat. Thoughts that frequent period of loud noise will not affect wildlife or migration are absurd.
8. Light. The site is to the west of a sparsely lit section of beach that is used for turtle nesting. Light pollution from festivals will affect nesting success.
9. Acid sulphate soils. The management plan for the acid sulphate soils is a generic diatribe of practices, no doubt copied from other reports. There is no assessment of the potential of or the impact from lowering the water-table in areas by drainage and the potential acid discharge that may result. Acid runoff into the nature reserve would be devastating to the ecology of the area (I have some expertise in this matter as am a soil scientist who did a lot of work in acid sulphate soils in the 1990's).
10. Precedent. The local Council and Courts have rejected the proposal. The fact that the State Planning Authority is involved at all is very reminiscent of the style of planning in Queensland under the then Minister for Planning, Russ Hinze in the 1980's. Queensland was rightly held to ridicule at that time – and so should NSW now. This is not a piece of public infrastructure that needs Government intervention for the good of the public, this is a private proposal to make money, and will open the government to allegations of impropriety.

Discrepancy in report noted.

Ecological Structure Plan – area shown to be proposed new habitat zone north of bus loading/ drop off is marked as event area in Event area and land use structure. Assume are calculations of new habitat zone are wrong also.

Community

- We will advise local residents prior to major events (over 10,000 patrons). Immediate neighbours will be personally contacted prior to moderate and major events. Advertisements will be placed in local papers advising of event dates and times, traffic considerations, community hotline details and other relevant information. All information will be on the North Byron Parklands website.
- During major events we will operate a telephone and web-based hotline for any community member to let us know of immediate issues.
- During major events we will operate an off-site response team to address and manage any issues. These could include event patrons walking on non-event land, illegally parked vehicles etc.
- The off-site response team will include a litter response team.
- During moderate and major events we will provide extensive on-site medical services and police services. For major events we will provide on-site ambulance services (paid for by the event).
- We will work in partnership with holiday accommodation organisations. Accommodation demands will be prioritised toward on-site camping. For off-site needs holiday accommodation precincts in Byron Shire and the Tweed Coast with 'regulated site management' premises will be utilized.
- We will liaise with local communities to either promote their community or redirect activity away toward communities seeking tourism related business. Event literature (hard copy and digital) will either be silent about a local destination (to minimise visits) or specifically target the destination (to optimise local economic activity) as desired by that community. This targeting can be total or it can work with our shuttle bus services to bring patrons at specific times of day. For example a nearby commercial centre may want event patrons for breakfast and lunch but not at night.

Traffic Management

Our comprehensive Transport Management Plan will:

- Employ incentive strategies to maximise car occupancy, thereby reducing the number of cars attending events.
- Employ strategies to maximise public transport, private bus usage, bicycles and car pooling to reduce the number of cars attending events.
- Provide public transport connections to adjacent townships and key transport nodes such as airports, bus stations and railways, where applicable.
- Manage traffic during 'bump in and bump out' and event days.
- Provide priority to local traffic movement past the site.
- Provide substantial queuing capacity thus avoiding queuing on Tweed Valley Way.
- Facilitate efficient processing and inspection of event patron vehicles within the site.
- Provide event site access for patrons over an appropriate time frame prior to events to reduce peak traffic.
- For major events, secure approval for temporary closure and access control (residents and their visitors only) of Jones Road for event days.
- Provide security services along Jones Road to ensure that event patrons and other unauthorised people do not access the road or private land.
- For major events, secure approval for access control (residents and their visitors only) of Yelgun Road for event days (if desired by residents).
- Provide security services and engage on a pay for use basis National Parks Officers in the immediate area to stop unauthorised people from accessing private property or the Billinudgel Nature Reserve.

Noise Management

We have prepared a comprehensive Noise Management Plan. This will obviously be more relevant to a music festival than other types of events held at North Byron Parklands. Acoustics have been examined in detail with respect to the potential impact of events on immediate residents and the environment. There are strict noise levels, a range of sophisticated noise monitoring systems and mitigating measures including venue control procedures if approved noise levels are exceeded.

Sophisticated noise modeling demonstrates that noise travel to nearby residential areas in the south (2.7km away) will not experience noise in excess of approved noise limits. This is due to:

- Marshall's Ridge acting as a natural sound barrier
- The use of unidirectional speaker systems.
- Stages being oriented in a northerly direction; and
- Noise attenuating barriers around the back of stages.

Notwithstanding, we will be doing all we can to monitor and manage noise concerns wherever they arise.

The Noise Management Plan covers:

- Pre, during and post event noise levels.
- The provision of attended monitoring at the boundary of residents in close proximity to the venue during the day, evening and night time of each event day.
- The engagement of an independent noise consultant who will attend, during events, the boundary of an affected property to monitor noise levels. If noise levels are found to be above approved limits the consultant will contact the stage manager(s) via radio and/or mobile phone to direct a reduction in volume. The provision of attended monitoring and unattended noise logging for ecological purposes before, during and after the event.
- Continuous monitoring of front of house music levels for all main stages. Sound engineers shall be provided with warnings when specified noise criteria is approached. Event PA's shall be designed and installed to minimise noise spillage.
- Event stage managers shall be allocated to each PA based music stage and be authorised to override mixing desks if sound exceeds the approved level (including removal of power if the music act's own sound engineer refuses to comply with direction from stage management).
- Event stage managers shall comply with all directions from the independent noise consultant to ensure that approved noise levels are met.
- A post event noise report shall be provided detailing any noise issues, remedial action, noise levels and data from unattended noise loggers.

Regional Development Australia – Northern Rivers (RDA-NR) supports and encourages the North Byron Parklands proposal for the development of a permanent sustainable cultural event venue at Yelgun in the Byron Bay Shire.

Regional Development Australia (RDA) is a nation-wide initiative based on building partnerships and encouraging all governments and stakeholders to be responsive to local priorities and needs.

RDA – Northern Rivers is a non-profit community-based and regionally focused organisation that connects people and businesses in our region to opportunities through partnerships focusing on community, environment and economy.

RDA is a conduit between government and local communities, and is both a source and a provider of information. RDA serves as strong advocates and drivers of change for their regions. RDA plays a pivotal role in ensuring the long term sustainability of regional Australia.

North Byron Parklands projects address our triple bottom line community, environment and economy on the following levels.

Community

North Byron Parklands have established a Community Grants Program which will commence with the first major event held. The program will distribute $100,000 each year to local community groups and charities when North Byron Parklands is operating at capacity. The program will be similar to the community grants initiative operated by Splendour in the Grass, which has given $284,031 to local community groups (not including ticket donations).

North Byron Parklands also proposes to develop a cultural centre to celebrate and share the significant indigenous culture and non indigenous heritage around the local area and on their land. They propose to develop a base for the Madhimagulgan rainforest restoration team. This will include a workshop where they can teach young people the skills of bush regeneration, a rainforest nursery and locally sourced seed bank.

RDA-NR believes these are important initiatives for the region and supports their development.

Planning has taken place to use parts of the site or aspects of the proposal for training purposes, in collaboration with local businesses such as SCU, SAE and Arts Northern Rivers. Informal discussions have taken place with these organisations. Students will have the opportunity to obtain work experience in a range of event and music related areas. These opportunities will range from the very informal to formal training programs.

Working together with these organisations we can become internationally regarded as a region of event excellence. The proposal supports industries identified by RDA- NR and the State government as being of foremost significance to this region – cultural tourism and the creative arts.

An Australian Government Initiative

A NSW Government Initiative

Environment

Some 66% of the 660 acre site is pasture land used for grazing. The majority of the site is not located within the Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor. The North Byron Parklands proposal involves increasing the size and functions of the wildlife corridor and is working with the National Parks and Wildlife Service to increase the site's ecological values, improve the wildlife corridor effectiveness and protect the Billinudgel Nature Reserve.

The event usage proposed is in grazed pasturelands covering less than 50% of the overall site, leaving the majority of the site for habitat use and out of bounds.

RDA- NR supports the development of events that have a sustainable and environmental focus.

Economy

The North Byron Parklands proposal will create 210 full time equivalent jobs. An estimate (RPS Group 2010) of the total multiplier effect (flow-on economic benefits to individuals and businesses) of the enterprise operating at capacity is $192.6 million annually. North Byron Parklands is proposing a world class venue which will bring gift upon gift to the Northern Rivers.

Splendour in the Grass is an event of regional significance. The activities of North Byron Parklands and Splendour in the Grass result in regional economic, environmental and social benefits. The loss of the festival would have a detrimental ripple effect across the arts, music and tourism sectors.

For our creative industries, for our children, for the environment, for our community groups and for our economy Regional Development Australia Northern Rivers supports this important proposal.

Re: Objections to a Proposed Cultural Events Site at North Byron
Parklands
Major Events Proposal 09-0028

South Golden Beach Progress Association Inc. strongly opposes Major Events Proposal 09-0028 for the following reasons:

- The scale of the proposed major festivals for this site is far beyond what is reasonable for land that is immediately adjacent to Billinudgel Nature Reserve, a prime biodiversity asset on which the state has spent $15M to protect for many years. Although the applicants mention daily attendance of 35,000 in their promotional material, their proposal clearly states that they are aiming for 50,000 people per day for major events, and those will be held at least four times a year for 3-4 days at a stretch. The Precautionary Principle must be brought into play here, especially since NBP's ecologist writes (in the EA) that the amount of noise will be "unprecedented" and overall effects of festivals "unpredictable."
- Although the applicants claim they will be using the site for only 20 days per year, they also admit that it will take days, often weeks, of preparation for events and time to clean-up afterwards. The pre- and post-event days will involve large numbers of people, equipment, and vehicles on the site. They will have to test sound and lighting equipment, erect structures, bring in supplies, etc. In addition, they are placing no limits on the number of smaller festivals, which can be just as disturbing as large ones. So the claim of "just a few days a year" is misleading.

- There is no way the promoters will be able to prevent attendees from tramping through the Reserve to get to the beach, leaving behind bottles, cigarette butts, trash, etc. Those of us who live near the Reserve see this kind of behaviour regularly in the Reserve, along with motorbikes, dogs, and kids playing with matches. We will inevitably see more of the same if 50,000 people are right next door to the Reserve for days. Byron Shire Council rangers and NPWS rangers are woefully understaffed. There is no way they will be able to patrol the sensitive areas properly.
- Camping on site will be available for 29,000 festival goers. The rest may pay for accommodation elsewhere, but many will look for cheap alternatives such as camping in their cars and vans near the site. That means the people of Yelgun, Crabbes Creek, South Golden Beach, North Ocean Shores, Billinudgel, Brunswick Heads, etc. will have to deal with illegal camping on their streets, intrusion on their properties, etc.
- The applicants' stated plans for managing fire risks, flooding, and acid sulphate soils are all grossly inadequate. The people who live near the site will be at serious risk for these reasons, too. We have grave concerns about a development of this scale within a flood plain and the logistics regarding the evacuation of tens of thousands of people in case of flooding or a fire event. None of the Local Emergency Unit had been notified of the increase in numbers of attendees from 22,500 to 50,000. These increases cannot be sustained on this site. Plus our Regional emergency services cannot be asked to try and save this many people if an emergency event were to happen as there are only two access roads and one goat track for emergency exit.
- SGBPA has major concerns as to whether the public road network will be able to adequately cope with thousands of daily traffic movements on our local roads. The carpark is situated on a flood plain and is inundated with water several times a year. In the event of a flood the potential run-off from thousands of vehicles could well be devastating to the environment of the surrounding Billinudgel Nature Reserve and waterways of the Cape Byron Marine Park.
- The demand on potable water is calculated as 26.5 L/day/person (table 6.3.1.1). This estimate is woefully inadequate as water will be required for drinking, food preparation, bathing and general cleaning. Our region has just come out of a major drought period and this extra demand places huge stress on our dams in the region which already cater for the millions of visitors that we have in the region every holiday

- The report described in Technical Paper F1 on the proposed on-site waste water management system states that the wastewater load would be 226.5 L/person/day. This volume is grossly inadequate. In fact, one could expect a figure two or three times that in reality. The proposed effluent disposal area is also inadequate in relation to the maximum daily volumes to be treated.
- The proposed noise limits are greater than those on the NSW Industrial Noise Policy. These limits do not take into regard the negative impact of the amenity of residents in the vicinity or the wildlife in the Wildlife Corridor.
- The proposal is not in line with Byron Shire Council's Events Policy. That policy calls for no more than two major music events in the shire per year. The Splendour promoters want four extremely large events, others that would be of the size Splendour used to be, and unlimited "minor" events. It is not clear what those "minor" events might be, but they are likely to include "doof" parties and other noisy events that will also disturb the wildlife and the human neighbours. The proposal also goes against Byron Council's Tourism Management Plan (2009) that calls for overcoming Byron Shire's "party town" image.
- In 2009, the applicants were stopped from proceeding with a trial festival at Yelgun by a ruling from the Land & Environment Court concerning the roads they planned to build on the part of their land zoned as 7(k) habitat. Their current proposal ignores that court ruling and calls for roads in the same place. In fact, this part of the proposal is in direct contradiction to a specific warning the Court gave concerning any future road-building the group might propose doing.
- The applicants have engaged in minimal community consultation with the people in the shire and have made no effort to respond to their very genuine concerns. In fact, it was when they discovered how much opposition there was to their ideas for a permanent festival site that they applied to the state as a Major Project under Part 3A guidelines of the Planning Act. This is not what Part 3A was intended for.

- Also, the applicants' claims of providing over 200 jobs and infusions of millions of dollars into the economy are highly questionable. Those promised benefits are based on the site operating at full capacity, but at this point, the only event they have on the books is Splendour in the Grass and there is no certainty that they will be scheduling any others. For this reason, too, the proposal should not be decided by the NSW DoP.
- For the reasons above this site will be at risk if the proposal is approved even when the precautionary principal is put in place. There are other venues that are more suited to the enjoyment and safety of this sort of event, eg.. Ewingsdale Cultural and Sporting Complex, which the Government has put 8 million into, the major events site at Tyagarah and possibly large tracts of cattle land in Casino or Kyogle.
- It is unreasonable to expect lay people to disseminate an environmental assessment of 2205 pages in only six weeks in order to be able to write a submission and cover all relevant aspects. In future in all fairness more time should be given for this process.

Yours Sincerely
Kathy Norley

The Director of projects (09_0028),

I am strongly opposed to the proposed Permanent Festival Site at Yelgun (Cultural Events Site, Yelgun 09_0028) and am submitting the reasons below as my submission to this proposed development.

The sheer size of this proposal is way out of step with the local amenity, the coastal lifestyle and culture and the high biodiversity and sensitivity of this area. It is outrageously over the top in both scale of development and the impacts on the site and the adjoining areas, which include highly significant conservation lands and Aboriginal Cultural sites.

The establishment of a permanent festival site will have an on-going impact resulting in a decline or loss of fauna and flora species and habitats. The festival site area has been recognised by many studies and reports as being of high biodiversity significance for both fauna and flora, and Aboriginal cultural heritage. The area is also part of a recognised climate change and east-west biodiversity corridor, linking the nature reserve and adjoining lands to habitats west of the highway. This is recognised by the overpass and other fauna underpasses and fencing put in by the RTA for highway upgrade. The area and the corridor are also identified in the recently adopted Northern Rivers Regional Biodiversity Plan (DECCW 2010) and links coastal habitats to the Great Eastern Ranges (GER) continental corridor. These reports are outcomes of research and assessments undertaken by the NSW Government.

It is pure stupidity that another large scale permanent festival site is sort when other sites already exist, for example Byron Shire already has one large permanent festival site allocated for the annual 'Bluesfest' event located only some 10kms from the proposed Yelgun Site. How is this to be classified as sustainable and environmentally ethical to expect another larger site be approved, the area cannot tolerate and sustain another permanent festival site!

The entire Byron population is only about 32,000 people so how is the local infrastructure, environment, and social structure suppose to cope with large and mega-festivals of up to 50,000 attendees per day. This totally unsustainable and will place huge pressure on local roads, facilities and the environment, including the local lifestyle of those people that live in the area. A festival site of this size will dramatically alter the social amenity and demographics of the Byron Shire and with negative and unacceptable impacts on all local resources such as hospitals, Police, roads and increase anti-social behaviour. Who is going to pay for this, the extra Police for example, the total over-crowding and blockages of local roads, increased rubbish to local tips etc etc.

The size and extent of this proposal gives absolutely no attention to maintaining the character and amenity of the Shire. The proposal is completely out of step with the demographics and lifestyle of this area and is not consistent with Council's policy festival sites

The whole concept of large, one stop shop festival sites is based more on greed and profit than it is on enjoyment of patrons. Effects to local businesses and the local economy will be small as the whole process is controlled by the out of town owners of the site. They are not interested in benefits to the local economy rather controlling all patrons within the festival site!

The impacts of traffic, noise, and anti-social behaviour (eg illegal camping, rubbish dumping, likelihood of more wild fires, dogs etc) as well as the on-going disturbance to biodiversity (eg fencing of the whole site will permanently alter the fauna corridor of the area) is totally unacceptable and the proposal should be refused. The proposal is totally rejected by the local residents and the council, it is totally unsuitable to the site and the locality (rural and rural residential amenity), will have permanent and unacceptable impacts on the areas biodiversity and the corridor and adjoining nature reserve. It goes no were near meeting environmentally sustainable development principles and must be totally rejected for this site.

NSW Department of Planning

To The Planner

I am a resident of South Golden Beach and a rate payer of Byron Shire Council. I strongly object to the DA of North Byron Parklands (09-0028) for its Yelgun site for the following reasons.

SITE ISSUES

(1) The land at Yelgun is flood prone which makes it totally unsuitable for its proposed use, the speed of the potential rise in flood waters has been grossly under estimated, I have lived through a 1 in 100 year event and seen the rise in level overnight which took it from driving on roads to rowing boats along them. This also calls into question the adequacy of their flood evacuation plan.

(2) The land is bush fire prone, a situation that will only be made worse through intense human intervention and the presence of 1,000s of campers staying on site.

(3) The land is an important wildlife corridor and is the last remaining corridor linking hinterland habitat with the coast in this area of the far north coast, a fact that has long been recognised by governments both state and local and their agencies, also by a host of environmental and community groups. The proposed land use is totally incompatible with the ongoing protection of the unique and endangered flora and fauna, given the land joins onto the Billnudge Nature Reserve, a fact that was highlighted by the findings against the developer in the Land and Environment Court when they tried to push a road through the site.

INFRASTRUCTURE

(1) The plan proposed by the developer of 12 events a year with peak patrons of 50,000 is totally unsustainable. Venues of this size, such as the Sydney Football Stadium (Moore Park), Telstra Stadium (Homebush), Suncorp Stadium (Brisbane), even Skilled Stadium (Robina Qld) which only holds 27,000 patrons (half that proposed) all have direct rail services, ample public transport and 1,000s of available bed nights of accommodation, appropriate levels of emergency, health and community services available to service events of this scale and all are located in major population centers not in a muddy paddock on the far north coast surrounded by small residential villages and townships.

(2) The shortcomings in transport with the lack of rail services is noted in the developers own assessment also noted is the "low numbers of vehicles in taxi and hire car networks",

(3) It is of major concern to residents that access to the limited emergency and community services available will be eroded by the demands of the developers excessively large and frequent events.

(4) "Splendor in the Grass" the developers headline festival started life as "Home Bake" and was held at the then Sydney Show Grounds in Moore Park till it outgrew that site, if they want a 50,000 patron festival the only appropriate location is in a major population center or capital city where there is infrastructure to support it.

(5) The population of the Byron Shire is approximately 29,000 people, so to say that bringing in almost twice that number (50,000 patrons) to attend frequently held events will have no disruptive or destructive impacts on the local community's amenity, lifestyle and way of life is laughable. The developers have offered no plan to manage these impacts in their assessments or technical papers and merely note the community concerns and call for dialogue, the reason for this is that they are well aware that there is nothing they can do to reduce the impacts of this completely inappropriate development on the community.

(6) When "Splendor in the Grass" was held in Byron Bay 21% of those attending walked to the site according to the developers own research , this may be possible if the event was held in a population center but not so at its Yelgun site . The bulk of those traveling will do so by car as there is only limited public transport , I also question the levels of single car occupancy used to model traffic volumes at the site and would expect them to be far heavier.

THE VALIDITY OF THE DEVELOPERS ASSESSMENT

(1) Having rung NSW Planning I am advised that what has made it possible for the developer to qualify for a determination of its DA as a "Major Event" is its own assessment that it will create the equivalent of 115 full time jobs. To qualify they had to create a minimum of 100 , how convenient , this has allowed them to bypass Byron Shire Council who as recently as this week voted to reject formally North Byron Parklands application for a trial event , this decision by the shires elected representatives mirrors community opinion .

(2) Will NSW Planning make it a condition of their consent that the developer reports their employment results to the department to be made public and if they don't achieve 100 full time equivalent jobs that their consent be withdrawn and their DA be referred back to Byron Shire Council as they would no longer qualify as a Major Event.

(3) Will any action be taken against the developers and their advisors if it is later proven that consent has been obtained thru deceptive and deliberately false assessment relating to their employment projections.

(4) What should also be made public is the method used and what they consider to be a created position obviously contractors and the self employed should not be factored in as if they weren't trading at a festival they would be trading at community market or some other venue.

KEY ISSUES RELATING TO COMMUNITY CONCERNS

(1) The developers state in their assessment that there are no key issues relating to the local community , then they go on to identify Community Issues as follow (a) The frequency and size of larger events (b) Onsite impacts. (c) Offsite impacts to local residential and beachside property communities. (d) Subsequent use by future new owners if approval was to be granted . These are the key issues for residents living the area adversely affected by this development.

(2) Both (a) and (b) have been dealt with in this submission but (c) The Offsite Impacts need to be addressed. Given that the site will only cater for 9,000 patrons as campers, local residents have quite reasonable concerns about where the other 41,000 patrons will be accommodated , the developers cater to a youth market for their events so most will be looking for moderate cost accommodation , very little of this exists in the area (again an issue of limited infrastructure) this will see large numbers of people camping illegally in residential areas, sleeping on beaches ,in parks and on residents front lawns, with all the social and health problems that come with this and the cost to the rate payers in policing and prosecuting offenders by council rangers. The other option would be to tap into Byron Shires contentious and unregulated holiday rental market. As residents we have already experienced large numbers festival patrons cramming into holiday rentals and partying non stop for days this is the case at easter with the Blues Feast and during Splendor and that was when it was held in Byron ,I can not even imagine how bad it will be with a festival site around the corner.

(3) What this really comes down to is this ,is it reasonable for a hand full of investors in this development company North Byron Parklands should profit from the total destruction of the amenity , lifestyle , social cohesion and the potential drop in property values for 1,000s of residents, that will follow if this proposal is given the go ahead.

Sincerely yours,

john rann

Of the fourteen members present –

Seven members supported these events taking place however all seven members still had concerns with -

1. Environment
2. Distance for service availability e.g. Ambulance/Hospital/Fire etc
3. Traffic congestion
4. Too many events
5. Parking on flood prone areas
6. Public toilet facilities

Four members were against the holding of events at North Byron Parklands due to -

1. Traffic congestion in Brunswick Heads
2. The possible size of the events
3. Changes to the infrastructure and security of Brunswick Heads
4. State of our local roads

Three members 'don't care'

We ask that you please carefully consider all of the residents of the northern section of Byron Shire when you make your decision on granting a D.A. for events of up to 50,000 patrons on the North Byron Parklands property.

Yours sincerely

Cultural Events Site - Tweed Valley Way and Jones Road, Yelgun (09_0028) - Yelgun

Splendour in the Grass

We strongly object to this proposal for the following reasons:

1. We purchased property in North Ocean Shores in 2002 because we wanted the advantages of living in Byron Shire, but not the traffic, noise and visitors that Byron Bay town attracts. The major festivals (Splendour and Blues) were held in Byron Bay at this time. The proposal to move Splendour to Yelgun will bring these issues to our doorstep.
2. Prior to the recent completion of the new highway between Brunswick Heads and Yelgun we were virtually marooned during peak holiday times, such as Christmas and Easter. At these times we were unable to access the old Pacific Highway (now the Brunswick Valley Way) to go north to Tweed Heads or south to Brunswick Heads. This proposal will create even greater traffic congestion in this area.
3. We are concerned that South Golden Beach and New Brighton will be targeted as free camping sites by visitors. As there are very limited amenities in these areas we foresee health and safety issues and a large increase in traffic to our local area.
4. We believe that noise from the venue will be an issue as the site is less than 3km from North Ocean Shores across the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. At present the only sound we hear at night is the surf but this natural sound will not be able to compete with the amplified sound from the venue.
5. Based on media reports of drug taking at previous Splendour in the Grass Festivals we are concerned that drug-affected motorists will be on our local roads. This problem will be exacerbated as visitors will not be able to walk to the site as they could in Byron Bay.

6. We are greatly concerned that the development of this site will cause irreversible damage to both flora and fauna due to the massive, permanent infrastructure which includes a new access road, walking track from the car park to the camping/event site (Jones Road) which will cut through the wildlife corridor with a new concrete bridge under Jones Road.
7. Brunswick Heads, Ocean Shores, New Brighton, Billinudgel will be obvious destinations for many of the 24,000 (50,000?) plus patrons. So we will inherit Byron Bay's festival problems (traffic chaos, drug and alcohol, increase in rents, disruption to locals etc etc etc.).

All these issues will have a negative impact on our lives and the lives of other residents of Ocean Shores, Brunswick Heads, New Brighton and Billinudgel. I ask that you take these points into consideration and reject the proposal.

Submission for large year round festivals in Byron Shire at Yelgun (09_0028)

To the Director of Regional Projects

This project will not provide any long term sustainability to either to our community or the environment, far from it. It actually threatens the family oriented holiday environment which many residents of Bryon Shire would like to see rather than the drunken youth culture that comes with the applicants proposed mega festivals. Secondly having mega festivals right beside a highly important Nature Reserve/wildlife corridor is an environmental disaster in the making for many fauna species.

I strongly object to this application and concept of a large festival site for Byron Shire for the following reasons.

1. Site is not suitable for mega festivals due to close proximity to Nature reserve/important wildlife corridor
2. Our shire's infrastructure (traffic & sewage) cannot handle the impact of large visitor numbers proposed by applicant.
3. The impact on the Byron shire residents having to contend with masses of young people descending on our towns will not be a pretty picture if the relatively new phenomena of schoolies week is any guide. As well as the 20 -50 days of events is setting up and dismantling time which will have a continuing impact on traffic and residents being inconvenienced. This proposed mega festival site will drive away the type of people who want to come to Byron Shire for the peace & tranquility that comes with a coastal beach holiday.
4. We already have a mega festival once a year in Byron Shire (Blues Festival) attracting over 25,000 people, so we who live here know what the impact will be if these types of festivals are going to happen all year round.
5. The proposal is in direct conflict with Byron Councils Events Policy. It has the potential to cause regular, serious traffic disruptions, flood and fire risks are extreme and evacuation issues impossible to resolve.
6. Splendor in The Grass has found a new site at Woodford near the Sunshine coast in Qld. The festival this year from all reports was very successful. It is situated 50klms from inland in open farmland away from population centre's and has minimum social or environment impact.
7. Byron Shire Council does not support this application either. It has also been rejected in the Land & Environment court. The Labor State Government must remember that our Local Council represents our community. Until recently developers were not entitled to go to state government level to have their applications overturned or taken out of the hands of the local community. This rule was changed by the current Labor government which just happens to receive large political donations from developers. Hmmmmmmmm.

I write in support of the North Byron Parklands Submission to hold Splendour in the Grass at the Yelgun Site specifically purchased for the purpose of holding this Nationally Significant Event. Until recently I taught the Events and Festivals Unit at QUT in Queensland as part of a Creative Industries Degree. I hold a Masters in the Creative Industries and have organised many community events. For the past four years I have lived in Tyagarah just North of Byron Bay and only 2 km from the Blues Festival Tyagarah Tea Tree Farm. I understand the plight of Splendour in the Grass from both a theoretical and a local's perspective.

Splendour in the Grass needs a home. They have outgrown their temporary Site of Belongil Fields and have recognised its limitations. Even the East Coast Blues Festival struggled with the Belongil Site; with its knee deep mud, traffic jams in Ewingsdale Road and the overcrowding of Byron accommodation; especially its caravan parks. The kind of crowding and its negative impacts that CONOS have repeatedly reported in their campaigning against Splendour in the Grass could be seen not only during the Blues Festival before its move to Tyagarah but on any Christmas Eve, New Years Eve or when any major Event is being held in the heart of Byron Bay. CONOS suggest that they are not against Splendour and have suggested that Splendour be held in the new Sports Fields in Ewingsdale Road. Unfortunately this will do nothing to relieve Byron Bay of congestion or the other noise or litter or drunkenness or any other issue that may arise with large public gatherings.

In a stroke of foresight in 2006 North Byron Parklands began a process of consultation with community and Council. Given their positive response from the consultation, they purchased some disused land and began a process of regeneration and Environmental Site Management. The process has been extremely transparent and has included Open Days, Community Tree Planting Days, meetings with neighbouring land owners and a continuing close relationship with Byron Council. Those opposing the Site have accused North Byron Parklands of going above the Byron Council to the State Government thus ignoring a process of local consultation and 'thumbing their nose' at our local Council.

Mac Nicolson from CONOS writes in the Byron Shire News this week

That...is demonstrative of your continued disrespect for our community after taking away our right to have this DA decided by our own Council

This is completely untrue and evidence of the scaremongering and misrepresentation that the Splendour team have suffered at the hands of their own community. After gaining permission from our local Council to run a trial Event, North Byron Parklands have been forced into a position to fight for the use of the Site that has already been approved. Over 10 Government Agencies were consulted by Council "with none objecting to [their] application" (ibid North Byron Parklands).

Splendour in the Grass needs a home.

Woodford Folk Festival is one example of a Festival that had outgrown the Maleny Oval where it was initially held and moved to a bespoke site enabling the Festival to grow and flourish into the world class Event it is today. Our very own Blues Festival is another. I have attended the Blues Festival at Red Devil Park, Belongil Fields and this year in my own "backyard" in Tyagarah. This year the Blues Festival had really come into its own, even winning the 'Event of the Year'. We live not more than 2 kilometers from the Event and had no noise pollution, no traffic problems and it was the easiest drive into town at Easter we have ever experienced. Splendour has been pushed from pillar to post, even moving to Woodford this year to host their most successful Festival yet. Bill Horowitz from Woodford has invited Splendour back in 2011 and has spoken very positively of the Event. Woodford is an extremely successful cultural event held over 5 days in a sensitive environmental Site but in the caring hands of the event managers and environmental scientists that run them, Woodford and the Dreaming Festival are created in relationship with the Land. It's my belief that Splendour, given the chance to move into its own Site will do the same. They just need the opportunity. On this basis, I urge the NSW Government Planning Department to approve this application. Bring Splendour Home.

Cultural Events Site - Tweed Valley Way and Jones Road, Yelgun (09_0028) - Yelgun

As a resident of Byron Bay, in Byron Shire Council, I oppose the proposed DA XXXX for the Northern Parklands development in Byron Shire on the following grounds:

Byron Shire Council already has an established cultural event site at Tyagarah where the Blues Festival is held each year now. This area has approval for to increase to 20,000 people per day. This is enough for a festival in this shire. Byron Shire Council's Event Policy allows 2 festivals of this size per annum. This is sufficient. Splendour should negotiate with the Blues Festival and hold their one festival each year at Tyagarah.

The real life concerns of Byron residents regarding this proposal is that they are proposing not just one Splendour, but at least 4 events of similar size (35,000 +) plus many other smaller festivals/events per year with not just the few days of each festival impacting the environment, local traffic access (gridlock), local amenities and infrastructure, but weeks of set up and removal activity each side of each event. This would double the entire population of Byron Bay at least four times a year and imposing that on both the local community and a very sensitive environment in the Billinudgel nature reserve and wildlife corridor. Planting a few trees does not justify that massive impact.

North Byron Parklands does NOT offer a sustainable event site. The natural and human environment will be disadvantaged by this proposal of North Byron Parklands. Four festivals of at least 35000 for 20 days is UNSUSTAINABLE for the local community and environment. There will be increased noise, artificial night lighting, pedestrian and vehicular traffic....which impact on wildlife, and also the music is highly likely to impact upon local residents. The human intrusion and disturbance and movement and congregation of 35000 people is hideous for 20 days per year. We do NOT want this in our Shire.

The proposal threatens the future of the Marshall's Ridge wildlife corridor that links the renown World Heritage area of the Mt. Warning caldera to the Billinudgel Nature Reserve, as well as other coastal reserves such as the Wooyung, Marshall's Creeks and Brunswick Heads Nature Reserves. More than 50 Threatened Species have been recorded for the Billinudgel Nature Reserve (BNR), with approximately 26 threatened fauna species recorded for the wildlife corridor alone. Significant areas of koala habitat occur along Marshall's Ridge and adjacent floodplain, as indicated by numerous koala records. All forest blocks within and adjacent to the event footprint are mapped as high conservation value vegetation under Byron Shire Council Biodiversity Conservation Strategy (2004). Byron Shire Council Threatened fauna habitat modelling (BSC 2004) covers almost all forest vegetation within the event footprint. Similarly all forest vegetation within the event footprint is mapped as koala habitat (2004), with the drier floodplain forest and forest red gum dominated forests of the central and eastern portions of Property 2A mapped at the highest quality habitat for koalas. Byron Shire Council wildlife corridor mapping (BSC 2004) incorporates all forested areas of the site, as well as intervening pasture areas.

While Splendour has given back money to the Community following previous festivals I view this behaviour as “buying out”, and exploiting the local community. Byron Bay is internationally renowned for its natural beauty and here we see “cashing in” on this beauty. Festivals as proposed by Splendour in the Grass will assist to destroy this natural beauty. Splendour in the Grass are in the business of making money by holding extremely large festivals without due consideration given to the effect on where the festival is held. While they say that the festival “offers local youth the opportunity to work at the festival in return for a festival ticket and gives the youth valuable work experience” they are trying to find “reasons” for their DA to be approved in the Shire. As far as them advocating “for the community to meet together to celebrate, learn, collaborate, and showcase contemporary practices” this can be done anywhere and does not need this DA approval.

No doubt the local tourism and commercial business industries benefit from festivals such as Splendour and Blues but at what cost? It is not a GOOD THING as it has a huge impact upon the local residents in Byron Bay and their amenity. They suffer sleepless nights (not everyone goes to the festival every night but parties in Byron Bay). The traffic comes to a standstill when these festivals are on. The streets are full of broken bottles from careless tourists who attend such festivals, and the town suffers vandalism attacks. It also stops other types of tourist- family oriented, from coming to the town owing to the yobbo mentality of the nights in Byron Bay when a festival is being held nearby.

Festivals of the size and frequency proposed by Splendour/Northern Parklands DO NOT benefit the entire town. They benefit the local and not so local businesses at HUGE cost to the local community.

I have lived in Byron Bay since 1997. Having Splendour at Woodford in 2010 was fantastic. Enterprising local tourist operators actually wrote to the local paper saying that they had benefited from Splendour being in Woodford as many people still wanted to stay in Byron so they spent the weekend travelling to and from Woodford.

Yours faithfully

Wendy Boyd

Mr Devine,

I would like to let you know that I am against the proposed development of a festival site in Jones Rd, Yelgun.

Not only will the development mess with the environment and its animals in the area but we will have young people run wild in the neighbourhood. The safety of locals will be compromised due to drink-driving and drug-related offences, such as thefts.

I am against the development and believe that the current venues in Byron are sufficient to host the types of festivals that are proposed. I vote NO to the festival site in Yelgun!

Marcus Pearson

Dear Mr Devine,

I am writing to express my disappointment about the ongoing fight to establish a festival site at Jones Rd, Yelgun.

I could spend pages writing facts about why the development is a terrible and selfish idea. However, I will save you and myself the time and summarise it in two points:

1. The Yelgun area is a sanctuary for wildlife. The catastrophic impact the festival site would have on flora and fauna is something that has definitely been underplayed, if not purposely overlooked, by the development team.
2. The Yegun area is a peaceful part of the Far North Coast. I grew up there and it would be a shame if I could not offer my children (I am 3 weeks away from giving birth) the environment I was so blessed with as a child and young adult

The development of Jones Rd, Yelgun into a festival site is a selfish, money-grabbing idea, which has more negative impacts than positive. There are plenty of properties in the Byron Shire which are established festival sites. Surely, the proposed Yelgun festivals can be held there. This continuing fight for the Yelgun development is about nothing more than greed and I am 100% against it!

Regards,

Dr Jennifer Hacker PhD

Major Projects Office,

Re: Proposal 09_0028 Permanent festival site at Yelgun

You have a legal, moral, ethical and social responsibility to fulfill your duty as a part of the people-elected government of Australia and to REJECT THIS PROPOSAL.

Firstly, we demand to see a copy of the state government Letters Patent 1985 issued to the NSW state governor, proving your department is properly authorized to administer such lands and proposals.

The opposition to this proposal is very strong and will not subside. To consider establishing a permanent festival site on the ONLY remaining wildlife corridor in northern NSW linking UNESCO World Heritage Listed Australian rainforest is incomprehensible, illegal, unconstitutional and unethical in every sense. The people of Byron Shire will not stand down on this, we will continue to uphold a selfless moral and ethical stand for common sense. Until the proposal is rejected, we will fight this, in growing numbers and with growing passion, determination and information.

It is time for some sensible decisions to be made by our politicians, the people of Australia are demanding it. This site has been assessed as being of state and national significance, and due to its cultural and ecological values has been designated high protection (7 (k) habitat and agricultural protection). The area has been found to be of high Aboriginal Heritage Value, and the proposal is not supported by the proper indigenous custodians of this area. This area is mapped high conservation value, Koala habitat and threatened species habitat (BCS, 2004). The adjacent wetlands has likewise been granted high level protection as SEPP 14 endangered wetland, and will receive high levels of contamination from the festival site during frequent high rainfall events. It is illegal to build roads (such as the proposed evacuation road) through this forest due to its classification as 7(k) habitat. Is it not?? The lack of GIS information and reasonable flood and fire mitigation efforts are appalling. The NSW land and environment court rejected the proposal for a smaller event due to the zoning as 7(K) land. The proposal contradicts the 2009 NSW Far North Coast Regional Conservation Plan, the 2009 Northern Rivers Regional Biodiversity Management Plan, and ignores the precautionary principle.

These are laws. Put in place by the Australian government. It is time your departments followed your own laws if there is a desire for social stability. The development application for this proposal has so many holes and inconsistencies that to approve it would be a most illegal and immoral action to take, and the people will not accept it.

Both the applicants and the state planning department will be culpable of crimes against the environment if this application is approved. The authority of state government departments on a constitutional level is questionable at the best of times. The need for this to be brought to attention and justice will be further highlighted.

The "small vocal minority" described by the applicants as opposing this development are vocal, passionate, intelligent and determined people. It is not a small minority. It is the vast majority.

Dear Mr Devine

I am shocked to discover that North Byron Parkland are not only proposing 1 festival per year but several.

This will have a serious impact on our already serious traffic problems. I am concerned about vandalism as the town is severely affected by the Splendour event with a trail of rubbish from the site all the way into town.

I am personally concerned about the presence of more young people under the influence of drugs and alcohol and the effects of this on our children and on our town.

The new proposed site is

* is part of a 'critical' climate change corridor (DECCW, 2010)

NB. links the Billinudgel Nature Reserve to the World Heritage Rainforests of the Mt. Warning caldera.

* has over 50 Threatened 'flora & fauna' species, including Koala

* has 3 Ecological Endangered Communities (EEC)

* was zoned for environmental & agricultural protection (Cleland Col, 1997)

* is a ridgeline of archaeological significance & is part of a cultural 'precinct'

Further Constraints / Considerations

* NSW FNC Bush Fire Risk Management Plan lists the area as 'catastrophic'.

Widespread, highly inflammable peat soils exist on site

* evacuation of patrons from the site not possible in a flood event (Tech. Paper WI)

* Splendour's hydrologist for 'Trial' event gives 20 min. warning for flash flood

* the State Govt. investment of approx. $14 million in conserving the area.

* will permanently change the coastal & rural amenity north of Bruns. River

* will create traffic gridlock at the Yelgun Interchange extending for kilometres

* the development is contrary to the following planning documents....

I do hope that you will listen to the concerns of the community of Byron Shire.

Yours Sincerely
Michele Ogilvie

Hi Brent,

While Splendor and the organisers may lean on short-term employment as a major advantage for the Byron Shire to support 'Splendor in the Grass', i think we all know that all Splendor is, is an excuse for young people to party hard to modern popular music.

The festival used to be known as the 'Splendor Bender'

It is all about getting your friends together for a party.

The Byron Shire council has tried to bang this proposal on the head to STOP it and try and save Byron bay from the 'party town' image that is happening thanks to Splendor, schoolies and i guess the 'blues festival.'...but Splendor Organisers are pushing it to State Government, YOU.

Last year, Splendor was hosted on the Sunshine Coast at the Woodford Folk Festival site...and it was a raging success. That site is a BEAUTIFUL VENUE that only has two events per year.

What happened to the Woodford Site they used last year??
It is a dedicated music venue, and perfect.
Why dont they use that site again???

My guess is that there are half a dozen Byron bay locals who want a local site here near Byron Bay so, they too, can capitalise on the 'party scene' and make some big money from it.

Can I also say that hosting this event near Byron Bay creates a traffic hazard. When Splendor has been on in the past, i can literally watch thousands of cars driving from the Gold Coast, south to Byron bay....you can see the headlights (en masse) on the pacific highway and it is only a matter of time before more car accidents happen, if the event site is approved.

WHY NOT keep the site near the Gold Coast so the punters do not need to travel so far? Or better still, keep it at Woodford, which is a brilliant site for the festival....

Dear Brent

I wish to make a submission opposing the application for a permanent music festival site at Yelgun, Byron Shire (Splendour in the Grass, 09_0028), currently being assessed under Part 3A (Major Projects) of the NSW EPA Act 1979.

My submission is on ecological grounds in my capacity as a professional wildlife ecologist.

I have a long-standing interest in the subject site, having undertaken fauna surveys of areas including the site in 1986, 1995, 1996 and more recently in 2007. These surveys have been made for private developers, the NSW National Parks and Wildlife Service and for Byron Shire Council.

In 1990 I made a submission to the Simpson Commission of Inquiry on behalf of the BEACON conservation group on the importance of the site for biodiversity conservation, and in particular as a critical link in a regional wildlife corridor. Later, I made a similar submission on behalf of the CONOS conservation group to the Cleland Commission of Inquiry in 1997.

In 2007-2008 in my capacity as Byron Shire Council's ecologist (2005-2008), I assessed an application for a trial festival event on the site. I have attached a copy of this assessment for your information. Although I am unsure of the relevance of this to the current application (as I have had insufficient time to undertake a detailed examination of the latter), from what I have been able to determine many of the issues remain. I have also attached a copy of a concept plan defining the conservation zoning (in pink) that I considered necessary to maintain the long-term integrity of the regional faunal corridor. This formed the basis for the Fig. 1 referred to in the attached assessment.

My opposition to the Part 3A application is that the proposal is spatially too large, will impose too high a human density on sensitive areas of the site, will result in adverse impacts over too great a proportion of the year and does not allow for unknown but likely deleterious effects to be effectively monitored and mitigated.

In particular, construction of the proposed Jones Road "cut-and-cover" tunnel appears likely to sever the corridor function of ridge vegetation in this area. The initial concept of the tunnel was intended to enhance the east-west movement of fauna along the ridge by providing vegetated corridors either side of Jones Road (above the north-south vehicular and pedestrian access), but this has now been ignored. A previous commitment to restore the corridor function of the low-lying swamp forest patches north of Jones Road, connecting to the RTA cut-and cover tunnel over the Pacific Highway, also appears to have been abandoned, with proposed use of gaps between these patches likely to exacerbate existing truncation.

Scrutiny of satellite photography (Landsat) to provide landscape scale context emphasizes the significance of the site as a link in the most important hinterland to coast wildlife corridor in far north-eastern NSW. This corridor is essential for maintaining vertebrate gene flow and population health in an area of the State of major importance to biodiversity conservation and under exponentially increasing development pressure. In my opinion, the current application should be rejected on the basis of the unacceptably high level of adverse impact it is likely to impose on the site's wildlife corridor values.

INTRODUCTION

Early discussion of ecological issues between Council, the applicants and the applicants' representatives resulted in the production by Council of a concept plan proposed to provide the basis for wildlife habitat restoration and rezoning in the North Byron Shire Parklands site (NBSP site, Fig. 1). This habitat restoration was primarily to restore the site's east-west wildlife corridor function along ridge and floodplain pathways, long identified as a crucial component of the regionally and State significant Marshall's Ridges corridor (e.g. Cleland 1977). The provision of a suitable "cut and cover" tunnel was agreed as a means of allowing partial functioning of the corridor during temporary imposition of a barrier around event times, when vehicular and pedestrian access would be required between the southern and northern sections of the NBSP site under Jones Road.

Other major ecological issues discussed included the need to clearly identify the existing Threatened communities and species values (Threatened Species Conservation (TSC) Act 1995) of the site and to provide quantitative baseline data on species from key (potentially most sensitive) groups for monitoring the partly unknown impacts of the proposal (principally noise, light and barriers to movement) and the success of habitat restoration.

A similar application to the current Development Application (DA) was lodged with Council in 2006 (later withdrawn) and comments on ecological issues were provided to the applicants in February 2007 (doc. #658691).

Despite the adoption of many of Council's recommendations in its February 2007 response, disappointingly, comments on the design of the site layout appear to have had little influence on the layout proposed in the current DA. Apart from providing a small buffer between the event area and some edges of the forest blocks designated "B", "C", "H" (Fitzgerald 2007a, and contrary to Fitzgerald 2007b), the layout (DA Illustration 4) continues to impose a series of adverse impacts on the most sensitive habitats (Fig. 2).

Ecological constraints have not been identified and forest block conservation values (provided after a request from Council, Fitzgerald 2007c) do not appear to have influenced layout design. Substantial impacts remain likely on the forest blocks designated "A", "B", "C", "D" and "G" and are also imposed on block "I". All of these blocks represent Endangered Ecological Communities (EECs, TSC Act 1995), have recognised high conservation value (Fitzgerald 2007c) and provide known habitat for sensitive Threatened fauna species.

The reimposition of potentially high impact event venues in locations immediately adjoining high conservation value forest blocks suggests that such locations are likely to be required for these venues in a future proposal for a permanent events site. Further, an approval granted to the current layout design, albeit for a single event, could be considered as setting a precedent in support of such locations for future events and providing the basis for an argument against the need to rezone these areas for conservation in a future rezoning proposal.

Apart from a small (although important) area at the western end of Jones Road (Fitzgerald 2007b), no details of an overall habitat/corridor restoration plan within the NBSP site is provided, despite a number of references to a commitment to this concept.

Few details of the Jones Road “cut and cover” tunnel/underpass are provided but the emphasis on re-establishing habitat connectivity between habitats on Marshall’s Ridges to the east and the dedicated fauna under/overpasses of the Pacific Highway and Tweed Valley Way to the west appears to be on vegetation plantings adjacent to, and “low culverts” under, the proposed access road and pedestrian pathway south of the underpass (Fitzgerald 2007a). The “cover” section of the “cut and cover” structure appears to have been relegated to a narrow bridge over the cut with only 4 to 5 m wide edges on either side of Jones Road available for revegetation (DA Appendix D).

POTENTIAL ECOLOGICAL IMPACTS OF THE PROPOSAL

The primary impacts from the proposed event and associated works on flora and fauna and their habitats in the NBSP site appear to comprise:

- a permanent fragmentation/barrier effect during events from the current design for the “cut and cover” tunnel/underpass and associated road-works;
- vegetation removal for construction of the “cut and cover” tunnel and widening of Jones Road;
- filling of parts of the southern car parking area in the south eastern section of the site (Yelgun Flat) likely to affect Billinudgel Nature Reserve;
- construction of a new drain adjacent to the northern boundary of forest block “C” likely to affect an EEC;
- the potential for impacts on the adjoining Billinudgel Nature Reserve, particularly along the south eastern boundary of the site (southern car parking area, Yelgun Flat);
- temporary fragmentation/barriers at a number of locations affecting the site’s east-west corridor function during, and for periods before and after, the event;
- temporary loud noise (>90dB) and associated vibration from music systems throughout the site;
- temporary bright light from light towers and other structures throughout the site;
- temporary smoke and heat from bonfires at three locations adjacent to forest blocks, with consequent bushfire risk;
- temporary barrier effects throughout the site from temporary human exclusion fencing; and
- disturbance effects including noise, movement and vibration from vehicular and pedestrian movements and other human activity throughout the site.

All these impacts are likely to adversely affect the habitats and essential behavioural patterns of a number of Threatened and other conservation priority fauna species known or likely to occur in the site.

ADEQUACY OF INVESTIGATION AND PRESENTATION OF ECOLOGICAL VALUES, ASSESSMENT AND MITIGATION OF IMPACTS AND MONITORING

INVESTIGATION AND PRESENTATION OF ECOLOGICAL VALUES

The assessment of the site’s ecological values through desktop review (including reference to the Byron Biodiversity Conservation Strategy 2004) and field investigations (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007b, 2007c) is generally thorough and comprehensive although some field investigations (e.g. Koala spotlight surveys, mega- and micro-chiropteran bat trapping and acoustic detection surveys) were limited (perhaps constrained by time/budget factors).

The vegetation description and classification is not quantified and suffers from omissions and inconsistencies in part, although it is sufficient for identification of the site’s ecological attributes, including the identification of EECs.

The Koala survey and Koala Plan of Management (Biolink Ecological Consultants 2007) also appear satisfactory, although lack of reference to and consideration of past records (also an issue with other Threatened species reviewed by Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007c, referred to below) has limited the analysis of findings and recommendations for impact mitigation.

However, the vegetation mapping (an essential basis for presentation of site flora and fauna attributes, development of constraints mapping and assessment of impacts) is inadequate for the scale, extent and assessment of potential impacts of the proposal. Vegetation mapping supplied (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007c) is at too small a scale for assessment purposes, is presented at a number of different scales, is inaccurate and is inconsistent with mapping supplied with site layout plans, infrastructure plans and EEC mapping (supplied after a request from Council), and with the forest block vegetation descriptions provided.

No mapping of threatened fauna (TSC Act 1995) locations is provided apart from the results from August 2007 surveys (following a request from Council, Fitzgerald 2007c), which are hard to interpret. This, together with the lack of any spatial (mapped) presentation of other recent Threatened fauna species records (eg. Council database) and of historical records (NPWS Atlas of NSW Wildlife) hinders an assessment of the value of the site's habitats for Threatened fauna, a crucial component of ecological constraints analysis.

There is also no ecological constraints mapping and the ecological/conservation values mapping (Fig. 3, supplied after a request from Council, Fitzgerald 2007c) does not appear to have been available to influence the design of the site layout. The values are also not acceptable to Council as consideration does not appear to have been afforded to past Threatened fauna records (above) and adequate weight does not appear to have been given to corridor reconnection.

EECs and Threatened Plant Species

The identification of EECs and Threatened flora species is generally satisfactory, although a small stand of "Swamp sclerophyll forest on coastal floodplains" EEC north of forest block "B" has been overlooked. As with vegetation, the mapping of the occurrence of EECs in the NBSP site is at too small a scale to be useful for assessment purposes, particularly the assessment of impacts likely from the trial event.

Threatened Fauna Species

The identification of Threatened fauna species and their habitats is also generally satisfactory but is limited by an incomplete review of past records (Council and NPWS Atlas of NSW Wildlife and records of local residents; also noted by Department of Environment and Climate Change (DECC, 2007)) and inadequate mapping of their locations. Key species in the NBSP site (species for which the site provides significant habitat) are correctly identified although those likely to be primarily affected by the proposal could have received more detailed consideration.

ASSESSMENT AND MITIGATION OF IMPACTS ON ECOLOGICAL VALUES

Assessments of likely impacts on the site's ecological values, including statutory assessments required under the TSC Act 1995, Commonwealth Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation (EPBC) Act 1999, Environment and Planning (EPA) Act 1979 and State Environmental Planning Policies (SEPPs) are contained within the various documents dealing with the site's ecology (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007b, Biolink Ecological Consultants 2007). These are generally adequate, although Council disputes some of the stated levels of impact, and mitigation measures proposed for some impacts are considered inadequate.

As stated above, no ecological constraints analysis has been presented and overlays of the proposal on ecological values have not been provided, which hinders an adequate assessment of the range and extent of impacts likely from the proposal. The assessment of impacts is further confounded by a lack of provision of detail in relation to some proposed construction activities (e.g. filling of southern car-park, construction of new drain) and proposed mitigation measures (e.g. "cut and cover" tunnel, establishment of canopy connection over vehicular and pedestrian access-ways between forest blocks "A", "B" and "C").

There also appears to be no specific assessment of the potential impacts on significant vegetation, wildlife habitat and wildlife corridor values from construction and other activities associated with the proposal within the 1ACH, 1BCH and 7KCH Zones of the site (Clauses 38A and 38B, Byron Shire LEP).

PROPOSED MONITORING OF IMPACTS

Monitoring of impacts of the trial event on flora and fauna values are proposed (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007c) but little detail is provided of the locations of monitoring stations or methods to be employed.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The presentation of the site's ecological values, particularly vegetation mapping, mapping of flora and fauna attributes (including EECs and Threatened Species records) and the ranking of relative habitat values in the current DA is inadequate for Council's assessment of the Application. Satisfactory presentation of this information, consistently and at a suitable scale, is essential in any future application for temporary events or a permanent event site in the NBSP site. Such an application must also provide adequate ecological constraints analysis and impact mapping.

A recommendation for the granting of consent on ecological grounds to the current DA for a trial ("one-off") event, which contains proposals for the construction of permanent infrastructure (Jones Road underpass, road-works), is problematic in principle, as it would pre-empt the rezoning process that Council has resolved to undertake for the NBSP site. However, the stated necessity for this permanent infrastructure to reduce the adverse ecological impacts inherent with alternative solutions for the trial event (R. Doolan pers. comm.), together with the longer-term benefits to biodiversity conservation (restoration of habitat and corridor function) promised from the development of a permanent events site (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007b and dependent on the success of the trial), are considered sufficient to override in-principle objections in this case. This is of course dependent on the provision of a suitable "cut and cover" tunnel design for the underpass under Jones Road and the adoption of other measures recommended as consent conditions to mitigate potential impacts on ecological values from the proposal.

The inadequacy of the presentation of information in the DA, particularly:

- the lack of integration of other specialist reports with the ecological report and associated impact mapping,
- the lack of provision of an ecological constraints analysis,
- the lack of detail provided for construction likely to adversely affect ecological values, together with
- the uncertainty surrounding the effects of impacts such as noise and light (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007c), have resulted in Council adopting a precautionary approach in recommending approval of the DA on ecological grounds.

As a consequence, the granting of approval to DA 10.2007.462.1 is recommended subject to the following conditions (reasons provided in italics):

RECOMMENDED CONSENT CONDITIONS

Parameters of Consent

1. Development is conditional on the adoption and implementation of all proposals and recommendations for mitigation of impacts and ecological restoration contained in the:
 - Ecological Assessment (Fitzgerald 2007a) submitted as Appendix 1A of the DA;
 - Koala Plan of Management (Biolink Ecological Consultants 2007) submitted as Appendix 1B of the DA;
 - Preliminary Vegetation Management Plan (Fitzgerald 2007b) submitted as Appendix A3 of the DA; and
 - additional ecological information (Fitzgerald 2007c) submitted following requests from Council;except where varied by the conditions listed below.
2. The numbers of patrons and staff must be limited to the levels approved for the previous event at the Byron Bay site (due to the unknown but potentially detrimental impacts of imposing high human density on a site with very high ecological values and the likelihood of greater impacts with the increase in numbers from the previous event).

3. The Tipi Forest venue with chai tent, bonfire and associated roading must be removed from their proposed locations (between forest blocks "C" and "D") and relocated in an area away from the area proposed by Council for ecological restoration and corridor reconnection (shaded pink) shown in Fig.1. An appropriate plan showing the relocated venue must be provided to Council to demonstrate satisfactory relocation of this venue (due to the venues' current location adjacent to identified core Koala habitat (buffering also recommended by DECC 2007), proximity to areas of very high ecological value and the potential for adverse effects on sensitive fauna species, particularly mega- and micro-chiropteran bats, from high levels of noise, human activity, smoke and heat, together with the potential bushfire risk (also noted by DECC 2007 and DoP 2007)).
4. The restaurants, cinema and bonfire must be removed from their proposed locations between forest blocks "A" and "B" and relocated in an area away from the area proposed by Council for ecological restoration and corridor reconnection (shaded pink) shown in Fig.1. An appropriate plan showing the relocation of these facilities must be provided to Council to demonstrate their satisfactory relocation (due to the facilities' current location in proximity to areas of very high ecological value and the potential for adverse effects on sensitive fauna species, particularly mega- and micro-chiropteran bats, from high levels of noise, human activity, smoke and heat, together with the potential bushfire risk (also noted by DECC 2007 and DoP 2007)).
5. The eastern edge of the proposed Mix-up venue must be relocated to the west to coincide with the 7KCH Zone boundary in this area, effectively creating an approximately 20 m wide buffer between the venue and the western edge of forest block "I". An appropriate plan showing relocation of the eastern edge of the Mix-up venue, removal of all activities and facilities including the wash-up station, waste and grey water tanks and toilets from the 7KCH Zone, and provision of human exclusion fencing, to provide a 20 m wide buffer to forest block "I" must be provided to Council to demonstrate their satisfactory relocation (due to the venue' current partial location within the 7KCH zone, proximity to core Koala habitat and an area of very high ecological value and the potential for adverse effects on sensitive fauna species, particularly mega- and micro-chiropteran bats, from high levels of noise and human activity).
6. A minimum 30 m buffer to Billinudgel Nature Reserve must be applied within the 1ACH Zone in the southern section of the site (Yelgun Flat). An appropriate plan showing the redesign of the perimeter of the southern car park with the placement of human exclusion fencing to delineate the 30 m buffer and the relocation of light towers, roads and tracks outside the buffer must be provided to Council (due to the need to provide a minimum buffer to the Nature Reserve to guard against unplanned events such as oil spills from motor vehicles and the input of nutrients from road materials and fill, and to reduce the impacts of noise and light on the sensitive environment of the Reserve (also noted by DECC 2007)).
7. Light towers located in the General Camping, McLennan Theatre, Campervan Camping and Mix-up Stage areas (Site Plan dated 21.6.'07) must be redirected away from forest blocks and all tower lighting must use low-pressure sodium vapour lights to minimise attraction of insects and micro-chiropteran bats. An appropriate plan showing the redirection of the above light towers and specifying the use of sodium vapour lights must be provided to Council (due to the potential for lights to disturb sensitive fauna species, particularly mega- and micro-chiropteran bats, and disrupt their essential behavioural activities).
8. All proposed bonfires (Site Plan dated 24.7.'07) must be moved to locations 100 m or more distant from any of the mapped forest blocks and other forest vegetation in the site. An appropriate plan showing the relocation of bonfire sites to at least 100 m from any forest vegetation must be provided to Council (due to the potential for bonfire smoke and heat to adversely affect sensitive fauna species, particularly mega- and micro-chiropteran bats, and disrupt their essential behavioural activities, and to minimise bushfire risk (also noted by DECC 2007 and DoP 2007)).

9. Effective traffic-calming devices must be installed on all internal roads in the NBSP site to limit vehicle speeds, particularly during set-up and pull-down periods. An appropriate plan showing the locations of traffic-calming devices placed at minimum 100 m intervals on all internal roads and details of the devices to be used must be provided to Council (due to the potential for road kills of terrestrial and arboreal fauna moving about the site).
10. No mosquito control programs using pesticides (apart from the use of personal insecticides) are to be implemented within the NBSP site without the relevant environmental assessments and submission of a separate DA to Council (due to the potential for mosquito control pesticides to adversely affect the life cycles of other invertebrate populations and small terrestrial and aquatic vertebrates, and indirectly larger vertebrate predators).
11. The compensatory ecological restoration works in the area south of Jones Road between the proposed "cut and cover" tunnel and the Tweed Valley Way/Pacific Highway Upgrade must be undertaken as prescribed in Fitzgerald (2007b) except that planting of ground cover and understorey plant species should be included in the Zone 2 of Area 1 (Underpass Area) in the first year (to facilitate early provision of cover habitat for small terrestrial fauna species).
12. Lowland subtropical rainforest plant species and moist sclerophyll plant species should be planted in areas above 10 m AHD rather than floodplain community plant species (Fitzgerald 2007b) (to facilitate restoration of appropriate ecological communities for such sites).

Prior to Issue of a Construction Certificate

1. Detailed engineering drawings must be provided to Council of the proposed "cut and cover" tunnel facilitating vehicular and pedestrian movements under Jones Road. The width of the "cover" section must be a minimum of 48 m to incorporate 20 m wide vegetated strips either side of the 8 m road formation (6 m pavement plus 1 m wide verges) of the upgraded Jones Road. Details must also be provided of:
 - plantings proposed for the 20 m wide vegetated strips, using suitable locally occurring ground cover and shrub species to provide dense cover for small and medium-sized terrestrial and arboreal vertebrates,
 - maintenance to ensure success of the plantings, and
 - fauna exclusion fencing for the edges of the cover section
 (to allow the east-west fauna corridor along the Jones Road ridge to retain function during periods when a barrier is imposed by events, also to approximate the width of the adjacent "cut and cover" tunnel crossing of the adjacent Pacific Highway Upgrade).
2. Detailed engineering drawings must be provided to Council of the concrete culverts to be installed under the sealed road and pathway connecting the southern and northern sections of the site via the Jones Road underpass. Culverts must comprise a minimum two 1 m x 1.5 m box culverts south of Jones Road and a minimum one 1 m x 1.5 m box culvert north of Jones Road. Details must also be provided of the "fauna friendly" human exclusion fencing in the vicinity of the box culverts (incorporating a minimum 250 mm continuous gap at the base of the fence or 250 mm square gaps at 10 m intervals along the base of the fence) to allow the culverts to function as fauna underpasses (to provide additional east-west fauna corridor function to compensate for the barrier effect of the sealed road, pedestrian pathway and human exclusion fencing associated with the Jones Road underpass).
3. Details of the proposed new drain to be constructed 5 m north of the northern edge of forest block "C" must be provided to Council to demonstrate that the drain will not result in draw-down of the water table in the adjoining forest block "C" (to prevent lowering of the water table likely to adversely affect an area of very high ecological value).
4. Details of all human exclusion fencing closely bordering (within 10 m of) designated forest blocks (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007c) and other native vegetation must be provided to Council. Human exclusion fencing in these locations must be “fauna-friendly”, incorporating a minimum 250 mm continuous gap at the base of the fence or 250 mm square gaps at 10 m intervals along the base of the fence (due to the need to mitigate barrier effects on small to medium-sized terrestrial and arboreal fauna moving between forest blocks and other stands of vegetation).

5. Details of a targeted fauna monitoring program must be provided to the satisfaction of Council including
 - a large scale map showing the locations of fixed monitoring stations (sampling areas likely to most significantly impacted) and details of methods to be employed at the different stations prior to, during and post the trial event to provide quantitative, replicated data to assess impacts on:
 - i) Comb-crested Jacana activity,
 - ii) Ptilinopus fruit-dove activity,
 - iii) Masked Owl activity,
 - iv) Common Planigale activity,
 - v) Koala activity,
 - vi) mega-chiropteran bat activity, and
 - vii) micro-chiropteran bat activity;
 - the incorporation of many more Anabat and Harp Trap sites for monitoring mega- and micro-chiropteran bat activity in the vicinity of event music venues than used in the August 2007 fauna survey (Fitzgerald 2007c);
 - the inclusion of the eastern-most Lot in the NBSP site (Lot 101) in monitoring for the Koala and additional seasonal surveys, particularly spring/summer (due to the lack of provision of details of locations and methods to be used in the impact monitoring proposal (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007c) and the need for quantitative, replicated data to provide confidence in results likely to influence the planning of habitat restoration and reconnection, and changes to the site layout for future events (need for additional Koala survey also recommended by DoP 2007)).
6. Details of the proposed ecological audit to identify areas of impact resulting from the trial event must be provided to the satisfaction of Council. These must include methods to be used and the proposed audit coverage, the latter to concentrate on the designated forest blocks (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007c) and Billinudgel Nature Reserve (due to lack of details provided with the proposal (Fitzgerald 2007a, 2007c)).
7. Details of nest box design and placement locations must be submitted to Council's satisfaction, with the numbers of boxes to be increased to 16 and initial locations confined to forest blocks “A”, “B”, “C” and “D”, with four boxes per block (due to the need to provide habitat for hollow-dependent fauna in important areas of the site lacking natural hollows and to provide replication for analysis of results).

PLANNING FOR FUTURE EVENTS

Planning for future temporary events or a permanent events site in the NBSP site should be based on ecological constraints mapping informed by the Council concept plan provided in Fig. 1. This should include exclusion of event venues and other high impact activities from areas such as those currently proposed for the Mix-up venue and the Staff and Contractors camping area.

A detailed vegetation management and ecological restoration plan should be produced to underpin the design of the site layout plan and provide a sound basis for restoration and reconnection of the ridge and floodplain corridor pathways of the NBSP site section of the Marshall's Ridges wildlife corridor.

Land proposed to be offered to the DECC as additions to the Billinudgel Nature Reserve should also be indicated in the plan, together with a detailed weed control program, strategies for controlling the Cane Toad and Red Fox, and habitat enhancement strategies such as the provision of nest boxes of varying dimensions to accommodate a range of hollow-dependent native fauna throughout the site.

Re: Cultural Events site 09_0028, North Byron Parklands located on Tweed Valley Way/Jones Rd, North Ocean Shores and Wooyung in the Byron shire

Dear Mr Devine

85 days of Hell - Locals tortured - Wildlife terrorised and decimated

It would appear that the proposed Cultural Events site 09_0028, North Byron Parkland's located on Tweed Valley Way/Jones Rd, North Ocean Shores and Wooyung in the Byron shire will be a massive intrusion on the health and well-being of both the local population and wildlife. A project of this nature has the potential to dictate and determine the future of surrounding land use. With a proposed 85 days of entertainment and activity each year and expected crowd sizes in excess of 30,000, along with the incessant intrusive thump, thump, and thump of the music it is not hard not to imagine both the locals and the wildlife feeling terrorised and tortured.

I have listed a number of points for consideration,

- The proposed site and surrounding area is a low activity area and home to one of the only major wildlife corridors servicing the area. I expect the wildlife will be terrorised by the raucous activity and the incessant vibrating thump thump and thump of the music. It would be reasonable to imagine a significant reduction in the use of the wildlife corridor and ultimately a reduction in local wildlife species.
- An irrevocable license to operate this enterprise will significantly limit the influence of any future community or government concerns and directives.
- Past events of this nature have been linked to a high use of illicit drugs and alcohol. The negative effects of these activities have been well documented – do we need to have our Byron community seen to condone this destructive and personally degrading behaviour.
- Large hordes of party revellers would tend to influence the type of businesses attracted to this area. To impose an enterprise of this nature and magnitude on this environment could dictate, limit and restrict more appropriate future development for the area.
- An irrevocable license to operate this enterprise will give inadequate opportunity to assess the impact of such an intrusive activity or to adequately evaluate the health and well-being of the local population and wildlife.
- Restrict the music to sound proofed enclosed venues – past music festivals have used marquees to keep the weather out why not sound proof and keep the thudding in.

RE:Proposal 09-0028
Objections

Dear Mr Devine

I strongly object to the proposal for the following reasons:

This proposal goes against Byron Shire Council's Events Policy Our community is already being inundated with tourists who care little for us ,our flora and fauna and our kids and old folk They are hear for a good time and don't mind what resources are spent to entertain and look after them Now more festivals [Large] are being proposed For whose benefit...certainly not for the welfare of our community

The scale of the festival , adjacent to Billinudgel Nature Reserve, is totally irresponsible This site is a prime biodiversity asset that taxpayers have spent millions of dollars to protect and now a festival site allowing 35,000 people to attend daily [and up to 50,000 people for major events] is being proposed adjacent to this reserve.

There are issues of Safety Plans by the applicant re fire, flood traffic problems,[how will ambulances, firefighters, get through if needed] are not adequately addressed, nor can they be with this site and it's festival activities

Camping will only be available for some...where do the rest go and how will illegal camping on beaches, reserve, local communities be controlled ? It can't be controlled !

The Land and Environment court ruled against a trial for the festival site in 2009 The current proposal does not take into consideration the courts ruling The applicant is big money and therefore will continue to use it's money power to get what it wants

Please help us and stop the application

Thanks

Re: Proposal 09_0028 - Permanent Festival Site at Yelgun

I strongly object to the establishment by North Byron Shire Parklands of a permanent, year-round festival site at Yelgun within the Byron Shire. Many of my reasons are because I live so close to the site and travel past it each day driving my children to school. The increased traffic on an already relatively busy road with only single lanes in each direction, the influx of humanity using and potentially abusing our amenities and infrastructure, illegal camping which will be hard for already stretched Council resources to police, the inevitable noise that will travel easily to the surrounding quiet residential communities are just some of the reasons on which I base my objection.

But - I really feel the main reason why this proposal should not be given approval is the wildlife significance and ecological sensitivity of the area. The noise from the heavily amplified music, artificial lights used well in to the night, crowds both day and night numbering up to 50,000 at the planned-for capacity and 35,000 per day initially for major events and traffic movements alone will most surely have a negative and devastating effect on both the environment and wildlife.

The site at Yelgun is in the middle of a conservation area that has been protected for decades by both local and state governments, and is immediately adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and an important wildlife corridor linking the mountains to the coast. It is my understanding that the Land and Environment Court ruled in May 2009 that Byron Shires Council's 2008 approval of Byron Property Trust's proposed trial Splendour festival at Yelgun was "invalid and of no effect". How then can the State rule in favour of a permanent festival site at this location, given the judicial decision about a one-off trial event?

Yours Sincerely

I would like to add my voice to the objection to any kind of public festival to be held on the proposed land at Yelgun, NSW. I agree with and support all objections expressed to the Splendour in the Grass proposal in this area.

Susan Artup

Dear Sir

I'm a resident of Far North Coast NSW & wish to lodge my objection to Permanent Festival Site at Yelgun in Byron Shire, Part 3A Major Project - Proposal 09_0028.

The site for this proposal is located in a very significant wildlife corridor on the east coast of Australia, it is considered part of a 'critical' climate change corridor (DEWW 2010).

The Land & Environment Court in 2009 found that Byron Council erred in its approval for a trial festival in this area as it is in a 7(k) Habitat zone which prohibits this usage.

In spite of this, the organisers of Splendour in the Grass would like to hold more festivals with larger numbers of people - 12 major events per year with up to 50,000+ patrons plus numerous smaller events - on this site. This many people would have the potential to wipe out any & all habitat.

Please do not allow this kind of proposal to go ahead, it is very important that these areas be allowed to remain as they are intended.

Thank you

Yours Sincerely

Mrs M Lacroix

I am writing to express my support for the Byron wet lands cultural events site.

I am a local of 32 years, and have watched and experienced the how events being held in the Byron Shire have benefited the local and surrounding communities if allowed to come to fruition.

It was a very sad moment for Byron Shire when it was announced that Splendour In the Grass was moving to Woodford.

Many jobs have been directly affected by this seemingly thoughtless move.

Splendour, being in the middle of winter (byrons quiet time) was a much needed boost in the local economy for all, big or small.

Byron Shire cannot afford to continue to be deprived of such opportunities for local business, and there workers.

This year the Blues and roots Festival was moved to Tyagrah, and the impact to the hard working traders of Byron was still felt.

I fully support the Yelgul site, and think it will only do good things for our community. The site will also benefit the eco system in the area, as I believe the planting of more native flora will in fact provide an even better environment for fauna. That's better than a herd animals trampling the area isn't it?

Thank you for your time and I hope the right decition will be made.

RE: Major Project Application: Cultural Events Site - (09_0028) -Yelgun

I hereby submit my objection to the destructive proposal (09_0028) to allow the inundation of upwards of 35 to 50 thousand people onto a rural site for entertainment purposes.

I use the term destructive advisably because if this proposal is approved it will destroy the environmental values of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and its surrounds and it will destroy the peaceful and harmonious amenity of the residents in the nearby neighbourhoods.

My objections are grounded in the following facts and arguments:

- Environment.
- Residential Amenity. (noise, traffic, intrusion on private property, demands on essential services, drugs and alcohol, fire hazard, social impact)
- Economic Value.
- Due Process.

Environmental Issues.

The proposed site is adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature Reserve.

One lot of the site is proposed as the carpark. Through this lot runs Yelgun Creek and the lot becomes a flood plain during wet weather. All the contaminants that will be deposited on the lot (e.g. oil, diesel, petrol, human waste, etc.) will ultimately end up in Yelgun Creek and subsequently the wetlands of the Nature Reserve. These wetlands and Yelgun Creek ultimately join Marshalls Creek which has protected habitat and sanctuary zones of the Cape Byron Marine Park.

What input has the Cape Byron Marine Authority had in determining the advisability of this proposal and what advice has it provided to the Department as to its impact on the marine environment? Surely such a study needs to be undertaken before any decision is made.

Contrary to claims that may be made by the proponents, they will NOT be able to stop attendees intruding into the Nature Reserve. Attendees can hear the surf nearby and consequently they will endeavour to reach the beach by the shortest route which is through the Reserve thus destroying vegetation as they go.

The lots which are the subject of the proposal also contain a significant wildlife corridor from the Nature Reserve to the hinterland. This corridor was recognised by the RTA in their design of the Yelgun to Chinderah Freeway by providing a wildlife overpass to continue the corridor from east to west for wildlife movement so as to overcome the barrier created by the Freeway.

The importance of the corridor in the Shire was cited in the "Byron Flora and Fauna Study - 1999" as a significant factor in preventing fauna species loss; consequently "it is important that options for future revegetation are left open in areas of strategic habitat and linkage importance" (p.84).

The strategic importance of this corridor has been listed on The Australian Heritage Database under the "Register of the National Estate" as an indicative place of hinterland to coast wildlife corridors (re: ID 19922 and the bibliography therein).

It seems rather pointless that various State Authorities have adjudicated on and recognised this area of environmental significance over numerous years only to have all that effort negated by a single decision on an unnecessary development.

It is inconceivable that any reputable environmental scientist could claim that there would be no or little impact on the environmental values and the biodiversity of the nearby Billinudgel Nature Reserve when it is known that human habitation near and intrusion on reserves and protected bushland is amongst the most serious threats to the flora and fauna therein. Because it is not possible to be exact about what impact there may be on the Billinudgel Nature Reserve from the activities intended for the site, it would be best practice to exercise the "precautionary principle" in these matters and exclude the intended activities from the site.

Residential Amenity.

- Noise - Events that will be held at this site, viz., rock 'n' roll concerts, will have massive sound amplification at maximum decibels. The site is on rural land with productive farms nearby on which farm animals roam and graze. The noise levels from the concerts will be detrimental to the well-being of all animals in the vicinity. For farmers, their chooks won't lay, their cows won't milk and their beef cattle and other farm animals will be spooked by the noise. Who will compensate farmers of the district for their loss of production through the disturbance to their livestock? For native wildlife in the Reserve, in addition to being unnerved by the noise, their reproductive cycle will be interfered with and eventually the Reserve will be completely denuded of any significant fauna. The major part of the land has been agricultural land, zoned as such, and should remain so. The Department should not facilitate the diminution of good productive agricultural land in the region - as it is becoming more scarce. The residents in the near vicinity, especially Yelgun, Crabbes Creek, Fern Beach, South Golden Beach and North Ocean Shores, will have their sleep disturbed and will have to put up with loud music instead of enjoying the normal peaceful ambiance of their area.

- Traffic - The RTA intends to close the Yelgun interchange on event days so that vehicles traveling to the site from the North will have to proceed a further 6 or so kilometres along the Freeway to the Brunswick Heads/Mullumbimby off-ramp. There they will be joined by the traffic coming from the South and all will then proceed via Tweed Valley Way to Yelgun. Tweed Valley Way is the access road for all residents of Ocean Shores, Brunswick Heads, North Ocean Shores, New Brighton, Fern Beach and South Golden Beach for egress to the Pacific Highway to go either North or South. On event days and days leading up, gridlock will occur on Tweed Valley Way with vehicles banked-up from Yelgun to probably the bridge over the Brunswick River or further. Public reports of the traffic chaos that occurred at Woodford this year where the "Splendour in the Grass" was held where vehicles were in a queue some 6 kilometres long, heralds what is in store for the residents in the townships mentioned.
- Intrusion onto Private Property - The intended site will have a limit on the capacity for campers who wish to camp onsite. For others, those who do not want to pay the cost of a campsite and those who are unable to secure one, will spill-over to the surrounding area. I invite the Department to examine what used to happen when "Splendour in the Grass" was held in Byron Bay at Belongil Fields. Patrons parked and slept in their vehicles on the streets, on other people's property, in council parking bays or wherever they could find open space. One can envisage that the total surrounds of the site, i.e. farmland paddocks, roadside rest areas, nearby township streets and the Nature Reserve itself will become dormitories for event patrons.
- Demands on Essential Services - With the influx of between 35 and 50 thousand patrons to major events at the site, this will put extreme pressure on the available essential services in the Shire. Services like ambulance, hospitals, doctors, police, fire and emergency services and National Park and local council rangers. The intended site is close to urban areas of upwards of 8000 residents. It will be very unfortunate indeed for any resident requiring urgent need of any of those services (especially medical such as ambulance) to find that because of the gridlock on the access road they are unable to receive timely service. The Shire is generally poorly served by these services in that they are inadequately resourced and manned, so instead of being there for residents they will be diverted to attending the demands placed on them by concert goers.
- Drugs and Alcohol Issues - The type of events that will be held at the site, viz., young people attending rock 'n' roll/pop concerts, will be a mecca for drug dealers in all sorts of illegal drugs. Byron Shire has already been cited in a recent report of the NSW Bureau of Crime Statistics and Research as a high use area for some types of illegal drugs. Bringing upwards of 50,000 pop fans into our community on event days will only exacerbate this problem not alleviate it. Alcohol use will also be a problem as the promoters of each event will have exclusive right to sell alcohol onsite. Consequently, there is likely to be excessive drinking at the events leading to intoxicated youths roaming the neighbourhood in the early hours of the morning.
- Fire Hazard - Peat fires in recent years have been experienced in various areas of the site. These types of fires are particularly problematic as they are difficult to extinguish and can smolder for months on end. There is a strong likelihood that activities on the proposed site and nearby will ignite these fires causing smoke distress to nearby residents.
- Social Impact - Where is the comprehensive social impact assessment of this development? The applicant's engagement in community consultation has been very limited and then mostly about publicly encouraging patrons and prospective patrons to send letters of support to the Department. A much better evaluation of the community attitude can be gauged by reference to "Byron Shire Council's" Events Policy" where community input to its formation was sought and given resulting in a policy that limits the number and size of these types of events in the Shire. The present application would not qualify to satisfy the stated aims of that policy.

Economic Value

The proponents of the application have cited dollar values they contend will contribute to the economy of the region and the nation.

Such figures generally are somewhat dubious at best and are not subsequently verifiable as there is no way of measuring outcomes that can be directly attributable to the proposed activities.

The site itself will be a closed community, so attendees will look for their daily needs/supplies from the services provided onsite. What proportion of supplies etc. that are sourced from local suppliers will never be known.

Also, such estimates rarely take into account (and thus are never deducted from the benefits) what costs there are to the local community such as infrastructure wear and damage, costs of additional essential services, clean-up costs of nearby neighbourhoods and the impacts on the local council budget let alone the damage to the estate of the region. Who is going to compensate the Byron Shire residents for the increase in rates over time that will inevitably rise once this site becomes operative in the manner proposed.

The proponents also cite various figures regarding employment, most of which will be part-time. Since Byron Bay is the backpackers capital of Australia, most of these part-time jobs will be taken by the backpackers who are transiting through the Shire at the time of each event. They are also most likely exaggerating the full-time opportunities for local residents since they already conduct their administrative requirements from a local base and the majority of those jobs are probably already established and occupied.

Due Process

I invite the Department to consider the history leading up to the submission of this development proposal.

Originally, the lots involved in the application were to be used for a single annual event i.e., "Splendour in the Grass" (essentially a rock 'n' roll/pop music festival) and an application for that purpose for consent was lodged with Byron Shire Council. The application was refused consent on appeal to the Land and Environment Court. The Department should consider the advice and decision given by the Court in that matter as it still has relevance to the current application.

Subsequent to this decision, and perhaps to overcome the difficulties it presented, an application has been lodged under Part 3A of the Act for a supposedly "sustainable cultural event venue" to accommodate 35 to 50 thousand patrons in a number of major events as well as smaller numbers in a series of minor events. The application has little to do with providing a so called "world class cultural venue" for the region and more to do with enabling promoters to hold an annual rock/pop festival which has now morphed into providing a number of rock/pop festivals.

One wonders under what criteria this application is being considered within Part 3A of the Act as it is certainly not a "critical infrastructure project" nor can it be seen as a significant major development of value to the Shire.

The Department should be assessing this application more from the point of view of protecting the site as of environmental significance than one of a "critical infrastructure project". There are more than enough venues available throughout Byron Shire for rock/pop music where patrons are able to engage in their preferred entertainment any day of the week.

The proponents of this application have been publicly advertising for people to write in support of the proposal; so naturally patrons who enjoy these festivals and the type of music will do so. What they are supporting is an event(s), not the establishment of a site where the events are held. Any such supporter of the applicant who do not live in postcodes 2482 and 2483 (especially the latter) ought to be ignored as they are not directly affected by the development. They will follow the festival wherever it is located as was shown this year (2010) when it was held at Woodford and attracted 32,000 patrons.

Conclusion

This proposed development does not represent a "critical infrastructure project" nor can it be considered as an essential development for Byron Shire.

Byron Shire Council is currently constructing a "Byron Regional Sport and Cultural Complex" costing $16.8 million, so a so called "permanent sustainable cultural event venue" at Yelgun would be superfluous to the Region's needs.

The promoters of "Splendour in the Grass" successfully conducted their festival in 2010 at Woodford (an already established site) and it seems only logical for them to continue utilising that venue for their event in the coming years.

OBJECTION TO PROPOSAL 09-0028 ("Cultural Events Site" at Yelgun)

Northern NSW
8th November, 2010

Dear Mr Divine

I am writing to inform you that I am 100% opposed to this proposal

I have lived in North Ocean Shores for 18 years. I came to this area for a peaceful lifestyle and if this mega festival site goes ahead I feel, that firstly the quality and the peace and quiet of my life will be severely disrupted.

I am disturbed and very concerned about the massive size of this development.

This is precious, necessary and important wildlife corridor. I understand there are at least 26 threatened species. This is well known to be high quality habitat for koalas. These animals require our protection.

I am very concerned about raising the flood level in north ocean shores as the last big flood, the flood waters came to 2 cm below my back door.

The thumping noise from the festival will be horrific and incredibly disturbing. The continual noise of trucks moving music equipment, food, sewerage will destroy the quality of my life.

It is devastating to imagine that up to 4 times each year this huge number of between 30,000 - 50,000 visitors with their cars & buses will invade our community and create total havoc, with continual traffic jams on the highway. Also the potential illegal parking and camping, littering and general unruly behaviour is something that will be distressing to this area.

So for these reasons I TOTALLY OPPOSE the proposal for this mega festival site at Yelgun. The splendour festival was held at woodford festival site in Queensland this year. This woodford site is TOTALLY welcoming this festival and is all set up and running in a safe and professional manner. It makes perfect sense to have these mega festivals there, where they are wanted and welcomed.

This mega festival site is NOT WELCOME in our very small Byron Bay community.

We need and are looking for your support to protect us from the detrimental effects a mega festival site would have on our precious community, wildlife & lifestyle.

PLEASE help our community

Yours sincerely
Penny Valentine

Dear Sir,

Please be advised of my STRONGEST disapproval for ANY proposed introduction to a music festival anywhere NEAR my area, Ocean Shores, N.S.W.

It would take 100 pages to confirm my reasons, NONE of which have been mentioned in ANY newspaper and would be ADDITIONAL to those already written about.

Submission to NSW Government Planning Department in response to the proposal by Splendour in the Grass to maintain a large, permanent festival site at Yelgun, in the far north of the Byron Shire

As a resident of North Ocean Shores, the closest community to the proposed site, I wish to register my complete objection to the above proposal on the following grounds:

- Gigantic size of envisaged festivals..... dwarfing the existing population and straining beyond breaking point the infrastructure of Byron Shire. These festivals, from experience, always bring in their wake anti-social behaviour and huge traffic problems. We already have a festival site at Tyagarah and a large sports complex under construction in Byron. Why do we need yet another?
- Noise.....this is one of the most critical threats to the amenity of both the community and the wildlife, causing extreme physical and mental stress to both.
- Inappropriate location.....this is in view of environmental considerations (both flora and fauna), close proximity to the residential community of North Ocean Shores and to an unspoilt beach via the Billinudgel Nature Reserve (National Park) and the accompanying risk of unauthorised camping, fires and general littering. As the National Park is out of bounds to dog walkers, why is it acceptable that even a fraction of the 35,000 festival participants can trample through it undeterred?
- Byron Shire Council has already turned down a similar proposal; ditto the Land and Environment Court.
- What part of no don't they understand?

Dear Sir /Madam.

I believe the proposed DA for a permanent multi event site at Yelgun is not in the best interests of Byron Shire or its residents because ;

1 With no limit to the number of events under 300 there could be one event every weekend, and every one one of these could be amplified music.

2 Minor and Moderate events in total could take up 4 weekends (4 x 2 days each)

3 Major events including the three day Splendour event could take up another 10 weekends (2x 3 days and 3 x 2 days)

Thus there is every likelihood that there could at least be an event every two or three weeks.

This is totally unacceptable to the residents of that area. They all had a choice of where to live, they chose to live at Yelgun and the surrounding area for its tranquillity and beauty. If they wanted to be bombarded by amplified music then they would have moved to the heart of Byron.

IT IS JUST NOT FAIR THAT THESE PEOPLE SHOULD HAVE THEIR LIVES, THEIR PEACE RUINED BY THIS CORPORATE RAIDER.

Economically Byron Bay will not significantly gain by having this DA approved, most people will stay on site because it's too much hassle getting into the car or bus to go to town. Parking in Mullumbimby will be gridlocked, Woolworths would possibly be a big profit winner but that won't help the local community.

Splendour has already found a willing home in Woodford, the local mayor is very eager to have them back forever. Let them have it.

The only reason Splendour wants to come back to Byron is that they spent millions on that piece of land thinking and betting that they could turn over the council and its residents. They gambled, they lost the bet, it's that simple.

We all need Byron, Brunswick and Mullumbimby to retain their special family first ambience for all Australian and foreign visitor families, to feel safe without the threat of drink and drugs. Drink and drugs are major causal problems of violence and anti social behaviour for our society and it's getting worse.

We must continue to attract these families because we need them to return year after year. They are the true economic backbone for our long term sustainability.

Our council must say NO to this proposal. There is no economic advantage in this proposal, only social disadvantage .

Please don't let Byronshire become the party town of Australia.

Yours sincerely

Andrew Player

Please don't allow the organization associated with Splendour to receive approval for their DA. I have been going to Kings Beach for about 30 years and was shocked at the devastating damage done to pandanus trees there coinciding with previous Splendour events. All living branches from some trees were ripped off to create windbreaks and fire sites on the sand contained broken bottles and junk. This area does NOT need nor can it sustain ongoing damage from hordes of narcissistic festival goers.

Thank you.

Dear Director,

Re: Submission on Proposal 09_0028 (Cultural Events Site at Yelgun)

I am writing to you in relation to Proposal 09_0028 submitted as a Part 3A Major Project to the NSW Planning Department and currently on exhibition for comment. The proposal calls for establishing a continuous year-round festival site on the property, North Byron Shire Parklands at Yelgun, Byron Shire.

In relation to this application I submit to you that you consider;

- The Proposal is at odds with the Land & Environment Court Decision in May 2009 that Byron Shire Council's 2008 approval of BPT's proposed trial Splendour festival at Yelgun was "invalid and of no effect". It is inconsistent for the government to now rule in favour of a permanent festival site at this location, given the judicial decision about a one-off trial event.
- Plans to develop a permanent festival site at Yelgun run counter to Byron Shire Council's Tourism Management Plan (May 2009) which specifically indicates that Byron's "party" image needs to be overcome.
- The intention to hold multiple large music events on the Yelgun property runs counter to the Events Policy that Byron Shire Council has put in place. That policy calls for a limit of two major amplified music festivals each year in the shire. The policy intelligently aims to balance the desires of mega-event promoters with the needs and wishes of the residents and ratepayers of the shire.
- The property in question is part of the Billinudgel Range, which is identified in DECCW's Far North Coast Regional Conservation Plan as "one of the few remaining coast to ranges habitat corridors in the Far North Coast Region and ... home to a number of threatened species" (p 36). The Conservation Plan also notes that "it is likely that the area contains significant Aboriginal heritage values."
- This proposal contradicts the 2009 Northern Rivers Regional Biodiversity Management Plan. The property in question is part of a "priority area" identified in the DECCW's 2009 Northern Rivers Regional Biodiversity Management Plan on page 54. The designated wildlife corridor within this area is supposed to "play an ameliorative role for fauna species" in response to the predicted effects of climate change. The negative impacts and disruptions that would result from a permanent festival site on this property would negate the intended protection of wildlife in the area. Noise from heavily amplified music, artificial lights well into the night, and crowds in the thousands should not be allowed in an area of such environmental and ecological sensitivity.

- The site at Yelgun is in the middle of a conservation area that has been protected for decades by local and state governments and is immediately adjacent to Billinudgel Nature Reserve and Marshalls Ridge Wildlife Corridor, areas the government worked hard to establish.
- I feel that the impact of such events on the local community including people movements, vehicle movements, noise, and disruptions for major events would be far more than the 12 days a year claimed by the proponents. [Two key promoters stressed that by the time Splendour at Woodford opened for business in 2010, they had been on site for 2 and 3 weeks, respectively, to oversee the setting up of what they described as the “little city” that would be the event site. (See <http://www.messandnoise.com/articles/4026422>).]
- There is a need for application of the precautionary principle here particularly with regard to the diminishing koala population of the NSW North Coast.

Yours Sincerely

Re Northern Byron Parklands Proposal for a Permanent event site at Wooyung/Yelgun

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to object to this proposal on the following grounds:

- The Northern Rivers area of NSW has been identified as being a “International Hotspot” for biodiversity. It is an area that needs to be respected, nurtured and protected.
- The Yelgun site is adjacent to the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and I believe the negative impacts on the both fauna and flora in the reserve as a result of numerous events would be significant.
- I understand that a significant part of that area and the Parklands site is on subterranean peat which I believe is a fire risk. The last peat fire in North Ocean Shores, (about 2000/01) burned for weeks and did considerable damage to the southern section of the Billinudgel Nature Reserve.
- There are at least 4 significant musical events held on an annual basis in this area, of which Splendour in the Grass is one. The Blues and Roots Festival this year won an Australian Award for their event co ordination which included having a demonstrated commitment to eco friendly management. This committee now has a permanent site at Tyagarah. I would like to see the Northern Parklands committee work with the Blues & Roots management to use this designated facility for their event.
- I strongly oppose The Northern Parklands proposal to host more mega music festivals and introduce smaller “Doof” style music events.

I chose to live in this Shire 18 years ago and at this Ocean Shores address 12 years ago, because of the natural beauty of the area. I value living in a quiet semi rural setting. Having the North Byron Parklands site hosting numerous very large and loud music events will negatively impact on my life here and also the value of the property we have invested.

Dear Sirs & Madames.

As owner of the above property, I would like to voice my opposition to the NBSRP proposal for a permanent Festival site at Yalgan.

The destruction to the environment will be incalculable. As for the destruction & devastation of the communities of Ocean Shores, South Golden Beach & North Ocean Shores I need to think. There would be no economic benefit for the local businesses, as all food drink and merchandizing will be in situ and brought in from outside.

This area is not suitable for events of this magnitude. To have tens of thousands of drug & alcohol fuelled revellers, looting round the North of our beautiful shore is too dreadful to contemplate.

Fingers crossed that common sense will prevail.

Dear Major Projects Office:

I have only recently learned about the proposed year-round "cultural events site" at Yelgun (Major Projects Proposal 09-0028) and have been able to learn about only parts of the material that is on exhibition. Reading it all will be impossible! However, I understand enough of what is being proposed to be completely against it.

I strongly object to all of the following:

- the increased traffic that will have negative impacts across the north of the shire
- the enormous crowds that will be on the site on and off throughout the year (and that will disturb our quiet residential neighbourhoods)
- the damage that will inevitably occur to the Wildlife Corridor and Nature Reserve that are right next door to the proposed festival site
- the greatly increased risk of fire that could well threaten homes in the vicinity, thanks to their allowing smoking and camping on site and having bonfires
- the inadequate plans for evacuation in an emergency, including the use of the Ocean Shores Country Club as an evacuation centre
- the inadequate plans for dealing with flooding (on a site that is highly prone to frequent, unpredictable flooding)

Bottom line: This is the wrong activity for this site. The applicants don't have to have festivals on this site. They were at Belongil Fields for many years and went elsewhere this year (Woodford). They can and should find a different site that is better suited to what they want to do.

I do not have the time to send a detailed response to you expressing my opinion and am thus sending you this letter that has been prepared by others. However, it expresses my feelings exactly!

Re: Proposal 09_0028 - Permanent Festival Site at Yelgun

I strongly object to the establishment of a permanent, year-round festival site on the property called North Byron Shire Parklands in Yelgun, Byron Shire for the following reasons.

Massive, rapid flooding occurs on the Yelgun site, especially where the promoters have planned to locate their campgrounds and their parking lots. Event attendees will be at serious risk in periods of heavy rain from the inevitable overflows of North Yelgun Creek, Marshalls Creek, and the Capricornia Canal, all quite near to the site. The property in question floods easily, quickly, and unpredictably.

Given the high concentration of peat on the property the risk of fire at the event site and in Billinudgel Nature Reserve is high. Increasing that risk is the fact that several bonfires are planned by the event organisers and that smoking and camping on site are to be allowed.

If this development is approved a huge burden will be placed on Byron Shire. Council will have to provide infrastructure to accommodate the thousands of non-rate-paying visitors that a permanent festival site will attract to the shire, especially to the infrastructure-poor north of the shire: roads maintenance, drainage, public amenity blocks, waste disposal, water and sewage, etc. will all be severely taxed by the proposed numerous events

Yours Sincerely

Objections to Proposal 09_0028 - Permanent Festival Site at Yelgun

I strongly object to the establishment of a permanent, year-round festival site on the property called North Byron Shire Parklands in Yelgun, Byron Shire for the following reasons.

The negative impacts and disruptions that would result from a permanent festival site at North Byron Parklands would negate the intended protection of wildlife in the area. Noise from heavily amplified music, artificial lights well into the night, and crowds in the thousands should not be allowed in an area of such environmental and ecological sensitivity.

The proposed buffer zones between events areas and wildlife habitats are not large enough, and the nature of the events, which will bring a "massive increase in human disturbance", will pose significant risks to the wildlife in the area.

The Land & Environment Court ruled in May 2009 that Byron Shire Council's 2008 approval of Byron Property Trust's proposed trial Splendour festival at Yelgun was "invalid and of no effect". The state should not now rule in favour of a permanent festival site at this location, given the judicial decision about a one-off trial event.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to you to express my concern regarding the above proposal that is before you at this time.

I respectfully ask that you reject this proposal for the following reasons:

The proposal is to use the site for the vast majority of the weekends throughout the year, some 85 days per annum which equates to over 23% of the days in the year, nearly 1 in 4, this is totally unacceptable in a rural area next to an important local wildlife corridor. The wildlife corridor is apparently the only link between the coast and inland forests on the eastern seaboard! The negative effect on the wildlife in the area cannot be overstated.

As a family, we moved to the area to enjoy a peaceful rural existence and the noise from such activities over such a long period of time every year will affect my family's quality of life in a negative way.

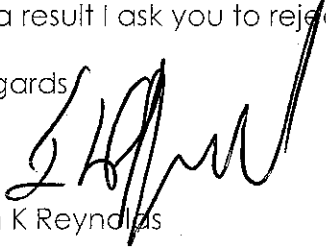

The site is far from any amenities such as shops and services, therefore the multiplier effect for the local community is very much overblown, given most of the stall holders will not be local. If the site was closer to existing businesses then the claimed multiplier would be believable. They are not.

The proposed site is very flood prone and would cause major problems for the already stretched local emergency services if floods occurred during any event. Even a 1 in 5 year flood will see the site under 1m of water!

If this was a once a year proposal then the negative impact would be very much reduced, but it is not.

As a result I ask you to reject this proposal on behalf of the local community and wildlife.

Regards

Iain K Reynolds

Submission to Environmental Assessment for a Proposed Cultural Events Site at Tweed Valley Way and Jones Road, Yelgun, Byron LGA - MP 09_0028

Introduction

The Clarence Environment Centre has maintained a shop front in Grafton for more than 20 years and has a proud record of advocacy for the environment both locally and across Australia. The above proposal is typical of the never-ending stream of inappropriate proposals that is placing intolerable strains on what little remains of the NSW North Coast's remarkable biodiversity.

History

In May 2009, the Land & Environment Court found that Council's approval to hold a 'trial' Splendour in the Grass festival @ Yelgun was prohibited in a 7(k) Habitat zone under the B,LEP and ruled it "invalid and of no effect".

It concerns us that the proponents cannot accept this verdict and continue to persist with this proposal, not just in its previous form, but now vastly expanded.

Not only was the proposal previously rejected by the Land and Environment Court, but it fails to meet standards set down in numerous statutory and non-statutory planning laws and strategies, and the Cleland Commission of Inquiry in 1997. These include:

- Byron Flora and Fauna Study, BSC, 1999
- Byron Shire Biodiversity Conservation Strategy, 2004
- Far North Coast Regional Strategy, NSW Planning 2006
- The Great Eastern Ranges (GER) Initiative, DECCW, 2007
- Border Ranges Biodiversity Management Plan, DECCW, 2008
- Northern Rivers Biodiversity Management Plan, 2010
- Draft North Coast Regional Conservation Plan, 2010
- Byron Shire Council Events Policy, 2010

Despite all of the above, the proponents have lodged a new application (for more festivals and a larger no. of patrons) to the State Government for determination. We believe this is unacceptable.

Biodiversity Comment.

Biodiversity plans and strategies at federal, state, regional, and local government levels all accept that current biodiversity loss must be reversed. The onset of climate change has added a new dimension to the threats that the region's unique flora and fauna now face. To this end, all these strategies have identified the need to allow natural migration in the face of climatic changes, and have identified wildlife corridors that must be enhanced to facilitate such migration.

It must be noted that the proposed development site is located in the most easterly wildlife corridor in Byron Shire, the most easterly wildlife corridor on the Australian mainland. Therefore, rather than being used for rowdy rock concerts, pumping out an amplified, 'head-banging' cacophony of sound, sometimes day and night for three days on end, this area should be actively regenerated to provide the identified need for a safe haven for wildlife.

In 1997, the NSW Planning Minister, Craig Knowles, directed a Commission of Inquiry into the rezoning of lands at North Ocean Shores/Yelgun. Commissioner Cleland recognised both the natural and cultural significance of the area and its connectivity to the Billinudgel Nature Reserve. As a result the majority of the land was zoned for environmental protection.

The impacts of the earlier, far less intrusive, "Splendour in the Grass" proposal have been identified and published in the "Review of the Effects of Human Intrusion and Disturbance on Wildlife; Reference to a Proposed Permanent Cultural Events Site at Yelgun, NSW" by A. Benwell & D. Scotts, 2010. That document identifies the likely impacts on fauna species & the Reserve System.

Apart from the site being part of a 'critical' climate change corridor (DECCW, 2010), linking the Billinudgel Nature Reserve to the World Heritage Rainforests of the Mt. Warning caldera, the site is known to provide habitat for over 50 Threatened 'flora & fauna' species, including Koala, and has three Endangered Ecological Communities.

As well the site:

- was zoned for environmental & agricultural protection (Cleland CoI, 1997)
- is a ridgeline of archaeological significance & is part of a cultural 'precinct'
- has significant bushfire constraints, listed in the NSW FNC Bush Fire Risk Management Plan as 'catastrophic', with widespread, highly inflammable peat soils existing on site
- has significant flooding problems meaning evacuation of patrons from the site will not be possible in a flood event (Tech. Paper WI), with the proponent's hydrologist (for 'Trial' event) admitting there would be only a 20 minute warning of flash flooding

On the social side the proposed event

- will permanently change the coastal & rural amenity north of Brunswick River
- will create traffic gridlock at the Yelgun Interchange extending for kilometres
- and will cost taxpayers millions of dollars.

In conclusion

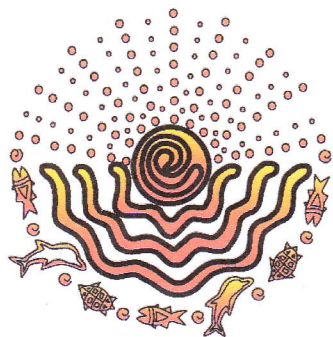

The Clarence Environment Centre fully supports the previous determination by the Land and Environment Court in respect to the development of the 'events' site, and believes the current proposal is nothing short of mischievous. How can a proposal to more than double the impacts of a plan that has already been rejected by the court be viewed otherwise.

Therefore we call on the planning Minister to reject this proposal.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment

Yours sincerely

John Edwards
Honorary Secretary.

Dear Sir / Madam

Development Application No. 09_0028 – Cultural Events Site - Yelgun

We write in support of the above development application and ask that the Department of Planning consider the application positively on the economical, cultural and social aspects. We have taken the time to view the application on exhibition and having lived in the area and attended 'Splendour in the Grass' regularly can see how professional and passionate the organisers are in providing a quality event. The yearly buzz around SIG is fantastic. The organisers provide 'local' ticket sales so that locals are not excluded by the annual madness surrounding ticket sales and provide job opportunities on the site over the duration of the event.

Cape Byron Lodge is a locally owned small hostel located in Byron Bay. We, along with most other businesses in the Byron Shire suffered financially this year with the loss of 'Splendour in the Grass' to Woodford in Queensland over what was a very quiet winter. That in addition to the effects of the 'global financial crisis' affected our business greatly.

We have read the information provided in the development application believe the economic benefits of this application will enjoyed both locally and regionally. Not only will the proposal create jobs by employing up to 200 people (a large portion of these locals), the flow-on of the events planned will benefit ours and many other businesses in the area.

Over the last few years the proponents have worked hard to turn a large percentage of their site from what was once desecrated farmland into a continuation of the neighbouring Billinudgel Nature Reserve. It is hard to believe that they will undo all of this good work by not adhering to the strict environmental management standards they have set upon themselves. In the past they have provided an excellent environmentally friendly event, with a vested interest in their own site this will only improve and be built upon with the other events planned.

Splendour in the Grass has historically given community grants to local groups and charities and our community will continue to benefit from the ongoing Community Grants Program.

This site in providing a range of events will also provide a much needed social benefit for the youth (and music lovers) of the shire. Growing up locally, there was not a lot of events such as this that we were able to attend. This application not only brings the return of SIG and other events, it also brings with it opportunities in training and jobs in a range of exciting cultural and creative fields.

In closing, we hope you support the application by North Byron Parklands, not only for Splendour in the Grass but also the range of other activities and environmental works they have planned. They have purchased a farmland site and over the last few years made many improvements and are now looking at the future. Please give them the opportunity to use the site for the benefit of the shire and region.

Kind regards

Objections to Proposal 09_0028 - Permanent Festival Site at Yelgun

I strongly object to the establishment of a permanent, year-round festival site on the property called North Byron Shire Parklands in Yelgun, Byron Shire for the following reasons.

The negative impacts and disruptions that would result from a permanent festival site at North Byron Parklands would negate the intended protection of wildlife in the area. Noise from heavily amplified music, artificial lights well into the night, and crowds in the thousands should not be allowed in an area of such environmental and ecological sensitivity.

The proposed buffer zones between events areas and wildlife habitats are not large enough, and the nature of the events, which will bring a "massive increase in human disturbance", will pose significant risks to the wildlife in the area.

The Land & Environment Court ruled in May 2009 that Byron Shire Council's 2008 approval of Byron Property Trust's proposed trial Splendour festival at Yelgun was "invalid and of no effect". The state should not now rule in favour of a permanent festival site at this location, given the judicial decision about a one-off trial event.

Yours Sincerely

After reading the environmental report and talking to people that will be affected by this development I think that it is necessary to create not just an acceptable negative impact but we need a positive impact on the environment. I am a Road Ecologist in Brisbane and we monitor the crossing of animals in wildlife corridors. If some of the project finance could be put towards greater facilitation of movement of animals in the area, as it is an important wildlife corridor people would see the project as more beneficial to the area.

Thank you for your time and I hope you strive to create a positive addition to the area.

Dear Mr Devine

Submission Re: Proposal for a Cultural Events Site at Tweed Valley Way and Jones Road, Yelgon, Byron LGA- MP 09_0028

I am strongly opposed to this proposal on a number of grounds. Major adverse environmental and social impacts make this proposal unacceptable to the local community.

In a previous hearing in the Land and Environment Court the proposal was refused on the grounds that the activity was not permitted in the zone of the current LEP. It does not comply with the Events Policy of The Byron Shire Council.

Twenty plus days of festivals (and many more days of preparatory and post work) would have a major and cumulative environmental impact on the flora and fauna of the area. The Government has already spent in excess of $15m on environmental repair and conservation in the area to protect the linkage and connectivity of the wild life corridor so it would be totally counter productive to allow such potential adverse impacts. Whilst the proponents have done some regeneration and replanting of the site, it is not possible to protect the area from major damage from the influx and effects of up to 50,000 people at any one time: the noise, excessive light, the rubbish generated and vehicular movements on site cannot be controlled. It would also be almost impossible to control or restrict the movement of so many people.

It would be a major security concern to surrounding residents.

Both Council and residents have concerns about flooding issues. The major flood prone land is to be used for the car park. But in this area torrential rainfall of in excess of 100mm can and does fall in a relatively short time. This would create absolute chaos if an event were to be in progress.

Adverse impacts on the wider community must also be considered. When organisers staged a festival as a single weekend event there was major disruption to town because of traffic congestion. This congestion would cause problems in Ocean Shores and Brunswick Heads as well as in Byron Bay as festival goers travelled to and from accommodation or other venues. Excessive rubbish has also been a major and costly problem as Council has to use its resources to clean up around the town. Major disruption to residents has occurred in numerous ways; traffic congestion and the inability to travel to work; excessive noise from party goers after festival hours in rented accommodation; and in some cases drunken trespass on private property.

Again security is a problem as organisers are unable to control the behaviour of festival goers outside their venue. Drunk and disorderly behaviour is unfortunately the norm for many.

Other community infrastructure is placed under major strain. The resources of the local hospital are predicated on resident numbers and do not provide for high numbers of self inflicted injuries or health problems caused by irresponsible behaviour by tourists. Having had cause to use the local hospital in high youth tourism periods, I can personally attest to the work overload and stress of the staff and the extreme distress and frustration for locals unable to get appropriate attention. Ambulance and police similarly would not have the capacity to cope with such numbers in the very possible event of an emergency. Other emergency workers would be overstretched.

Businesses claim it will be economically good for the town, however these businesses are not the ones who fund the clean ups and suffer the inconveniences and security threats. The amenity of the residents must be taken into account.

I repeat: one festival is bad enough but to propose a site dedicated to so many festivals and events is unacceptable. Byron Bay has a reputation as party town and we as residents suffer the consequences. Many of the older residents are moving out because of the major adverse impacts.

Any economic benefits must be considered in perspective. Governments spend a fortune promoting tourism and the wonders of this so called peaceful and beautiful area, but if you change the demographics of the tourists who frequent the place and concentrate on one sector only, you destroy the balance of the tourist type. If the focus is too heavily on the young partygoers whose behaviour often causes problems, then you lose the international and family tourist market which will again impact on the economic well being of the area.

The Federal Government is about to launch a massive campaign pushing “experience” tourism in the “Green Caldera” in the area, aimed at the overseas tourist. We cannot afford to become a “party or events town” with the concomitant problems which, as has happened in other party and festival destinations around the world, like Ibiza in Spain, destroys the very attractions that appealed in the beginning.

I urge you not to approve this application as it would have a major deleterious impact on our Shire- the environment, the amenity of the residents, and in the long term on the tourist industry as a whole.

J. Conlan

I would like to register my strong objection to this proposal.

In doing so, I would like to inform you of the reality of living with such an event, and of some of the social and economic consequences of year round tourism on both community and government.

I was a resident of Sunrise Beach Estate, Byron Bay, a couple of kilometres from Belongil Fields where this event used to be held.

Noise levels were extreme, and went on beyond midnight. (We were 5 kms from the Blues Festival and still badly affected) We were then woken time and again by people talking loudly, or arguing as they made their way back to their vehicles. Bear in mind that everybody is intoxicated and/or drug affected so social consideration is a blind spot.

Parking. The applicants will argue that they provided parking. The reality was that hundreds chose to park in our suburb and walk/stagger, rather than pay. Sometimes they even parked across our driveways.

Accommodation Despite plenty in the town and nearby camping grounds, many camped in their cars outside our homes – for the entire festival!

Traffic was a nightmare at the best of times, during the Splendour Festival -impossible – as well as the days before and after. We were housebound.

Security was always a concern with a number of strangers camped outside not only our home, but every home. We elected to stay in town despite noise, traffic, parking and invasion, to safeguard our property .

Despite the above issues, and the cleanup that ensued, we tolerated it. It was, we figured, only once a year.

I'm sure residents of Ocean Shores and Yelgun would not complain either if it was only once a year. The proposal you have before you is for year round festivals. And on a massive, massive scale.

Ocean Shores , the nearest town, has one public toilet. There is not one proper car park at any of our beaches. There is one small motel. There are no foot paths and there is almost no street lighting. In short, infrastructure does not service the residents, let alone ten times our population here in tourists! Whatever claims of parking, accommodation and services the applicants claim to provide, the reality is that the demand for these is borne by the nearest community.

It would be socially and economically irresponsible to impose this on our shire. There is no infrastructure to support them and we already know what the ramifications are – it is evident in the town of Byron Bay where they have year round tourism. It has become a '24hr party town.' There is no social amenity for residents.

Holiday Letting in residential areas has destroyed peace and quiet, privacy and security. Worse still, it has fractured the community. This has an economic as well as a social cost. Small services in the name of neighbourliness, now have to be performed by other agencies. Our police, ambulance, hospital and mental health services are permanently overstretched. With the population of the entire shire doubling with each of these events, the need for these services will exponentially increase the cost to the government if this development went ahead.

Our Council officers are constantly being diverted to deal with vandalised toilets, rubbish bins, streetlights and streetscapes. And these kinds of never-ending costs are borne by the ratepayers, not the developers. Just this week there is a plea from Council for information regarding the vandalising and stealing of mature trees. Three out of every five have had to be replaced. The cost is to be borne by the community at large (ie not those who profit from tourism) and staff are becoming demoralised. And the community has had a gutful.

Then there is the vandalising of our dunes in the name of 'private entry' onto our beaches and the threat of flooding and possible catastrophe that that poses. It seems inevitable that people at this site will find the shortest possible route to the beach. Remember that festival goers are a population who are in an altered state and normal social considerations do not prevail.

I am not painting a bleak picture here, merely recounting my own experience and that documented by our local governance. In nearly two decades of observation I have come to the conclusion that there are a few who profit from tourism – festival or otherwise – but mostly it the social and economic cost to the host community and increased demand on government services that far, far outweighs any argued benefit.

I urge you to reject this DA.

Yours faithfully

Lorrie Cruickshank

To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Jildou Boschma (32yrs) and I live together with my partner, Jess Wagner (31yrs) and our two children Naiya (5yrs) and Evie (3 1/2yrs)
We are a so called 'young family' and bought our house about 7 years ago on Balemo drive Ocean shores. My partner is a builder and I'm an Art therapist, currently working in retail in Byron Bay.

I am scared, I am worried.

I'm worried for our peaceful way of living and my children's and our safety.

I have travelled the world and have been to many festivals. I love music. So does my partner and our children. I know what goes on at festivals, they can be beautiful and inspiring, but often there is a lot of drugs and alcohol involved: I have seen and witnessed it with my own eyes in different parts of the world, here in Australia and most definitely here in the Byron shire. I know what the intoxication does to people, especially to the younger ones (Splendour and doof parties especially attract a younger crowd). Irrational and radical behavior, fights, and often they do things they would normally not do. For example; put up camp in the Billinudgel nature reserve, make a fire and on a dry day, that might get out of control: our house is directly opposite the nature reserve, only one small road separates our house from the trees. I'm very worried.

The traffic: we are very close to the tweed valley way, which is the only way out of Ocean shores; Woodford was banked up over 6 km!!! We would literally be stuck! How do we get to our work, to our schools? What about safety? How would the emergency services come to our street, any street, and our homes if needed??

Not to even talk about the noise! The amount of events they are seeking approval for: THIS INFORMATION COMES DIRECTLY OF THE LETTER THEY HAVE GIVEN TO ALL THE SHOP OWNERS AND ALL RESIDENTS IN BYRON BAY:

*Minor events-less than 300 patrons- no daily limits proposed

*Small events-300 to 3000 patrons- no more than 4 events per year.

*Moderate events 3000-10000 patrons- no more than 4 events per year

*Major events- 10000-35000 patrons- no more than 12 (!!!!!) event days per year

This means up to 4 mega festivals a year, with crowds projected (In their proposal clearly stated that they are aiming for up to 50.000 a day!!) to rise up to 50.000 or more for each festival plus another 4 festivals of up to 10.000 per day and another unlimited number of smaller events and doof parties. We came and bought a house here in Ocean shores because of its peace and quite, to raise our two girls in a beautiful and peaceful environment. You, the people who are going to decide about this (another point: They 'North Byron parklands' went straight to the state, bypassing the people who actually live here and our council!), would you like to live next to a permanent festival site?? Maybe you have young children or maybe your children have left home and you are enjoying your peace and quite, we wont be able to have our peace and quite anymore if you are going to approve this permanent festival site!!

We have already a permanent festival site at Tyagarah, we really do not need nor want another one, they (North Byron Parklands) don't care about the people that actually live here!! All they care for is, of course, the amount of money they can make, regardless whether that's going to affect the residents and the habitat, they really do not care! I'm asking you, to really take all of this and more into consideration. I'm so worried; I often wake up at night worrying about what lies ahead of us, if this festival site would get approved. We love Ocean shores, our life, our friends, the pristine beaches, the beautiful nature, our way of living: peaceful and harmonious. All of this is going to be affected. We love music and are not against small festivals, but please not a permanent large festival site immediately adjacent to the Billinudgel nature reserve and on our doorstep!! Thank you for your time.

Kind Regards,

Jildou Boschma, Jess Wagner, Naiya and Evie Boschma-Wagner

Re: Proposal 09_0028 - Permanent Festival Site at Yelgun

I strongly object to the establishment of a permanent, year-round festival site on the property called North Byron Shire Parklands in Yelgun, Byron Shire for the following reasons.

Massive, rapid flooding occurs on the Yelgun site, especially where the promoters have planned to locate their campgrounds and their parking lots. Event attendees will be at serious risk in periods of heavy rain from the inevitable overflows of North Yelgun Creek, Marshalls Creek, and the Capricornia Canal, all quite near to the site. The property in question floods easily, quickly, and unpredictably.

Given the high concentration of peat on the property the risk of fire at the event site and in Billinudgel Nature Reserve is high. Increasing that risk is the fact that several bonfires are planned by the event organisers and that smoking and camping on site are to be allowed.

If this development is approved a huge burden will be placed on Byron Shire. Council will have to provide infrastructure to accommodate the thousands of non-rate-paying visitors that a permanent festival site will attract to the shire, especially to the infrastructure-poor north of the shire: roads maintenance, drainage, public amenity blocks, waste disposal, water and sewage, etc. will all be severely taxed by the proposed numerous events

The Minister for Planning
Department of Planning NSW

Dear Sir,

Re: Objection - Cultural Events Site Tweed Valley Way & Jones Road, Yelgun Application No. 09_0028

We wish to register our objections to the above development application for the following reasons:-

1. Lack of Infrastructure - the proposed site at Yelgun is unsuitable for a festival venue.
 - There are no shopping or other facilities in the Yelgun area. Festival camping patrons would have to drive to Billinudgel, New Brighton or Ocean Shores for basic grocery supplies. The small villages are not equipped for large numbers of visitors, especially in regard to carparking which is virtually non-existent in Billinudgel and New Brighton. The expected increase in numbers of vehicles on our service roads and residential roads is a major concern. The residential roads north of the Brunswick River are badly neglected and in dire need of maintenance. More vehicles will only add to the problem. The increase in traffic movements generated from regular festivals/events will present a huge imposition on residents in terms of costs for road maintenance and will substantially increase risks for all road users. We've been residents of Ocean Shores since 1988 and well remember the days before the highway was re-routed when we were landlocked each school and public holiday, being unable to access the highway (the only way in and out of Ocean Shores) for extended periods of time. We do not wish to experience the frustration of having our service roads blocked with festival traffic and to be landlocked every second weekend.
 - Festival/events patrons who don't camp will require accommodation of which there is a severe shortage in this area. Non-camping patrons will have to drive to and from events and accommodation. There is NO public transport in this area.
 - The nearest police station is at Brunswick Heads which is not manned 24 hours and shares staff with Mullumbimby.
 - The nearest hospital is at Mullumbimby, a 20 minute drive from Yelgun. When "Splendour in the Grass" was held at Byron Bay, many festival patrons presented at Byron Bay hospital throughout the duration of events, stretching resources beyond their limits. Mullumbimby hospital is very small and unlikely to be able to cope with a similar situation.

- The nearest fire services are based at Billinudgel and Brunswick Heads, both being voluntary services. The chances of bush fires at the Yelgun site and surrounds resulting from campfires are greatly increased. When the peat at Yelgun catches fire, it burns for weeks, creating threat and discomfort to residents and wildlife. An increased demand on our voluntary fire services would endanger other communities in the Shire in bush fire season.
 - The proposed carparking site is subject to flooding. We have seen that paddock under water many many times. Where will thousands of cars be parked in flood and heavy rain conditions?
2. Zoning. The application must surely fail on grounds of zoning alone. The Yelgun site is within the wildlife corridor and this could only spell disaster for our wildlife. It is sickening and saddening to see so many road kills in the area as it is. Events of the size and frequency proposed would see the district's wildlife absolutely decimated. Australia has an abysmal record of wildlife conservation. We must not facilitate destruction of wildlife.
 3. Noise. With the introduction of B-doubles onto the Pacific Highway, roadworks for two years whilst the highway was being re-routed, the unbearable noise of the ripple strips on the highway (since removed) and high pitched whine of truck engines travelling at 110km+ per hour, Byron Shire residents north of the Brunswick River have suffered enough! The adverse effects on our health are very real. We don't want party music till 3am every second weekend adding to our burden. Residents are entitled to peace and quiet enjoyment of their homes.
 4. Safety. We suspect large numbers of festival goers will continue to use accommodation at Byron Bay and consequently a greatly increased number of drug affected drivers will be on the roads. We ask the Minister to seriously consider the implications this will have on our communities, police and emergency services.

Please refuse Application No. 09_0028.

Yours faithfully

Bill & Pam Priest

As a rate payer and long time resident in this area, I am asking to please consider this application with sensitivity and to consider those people who live close by.

As you know, the Land and Environment Court had an issue with this application and it was knocked back.

The local Byron Shire Council has issues with this application and sent in a submission stating their views why it should not proceed.

As a resident living close by, in an area populated by elderly retirees and young families, this application, if it were to receive consent would have a terrible impact on my family and I in many ways.

Points that I would like to highlight are:

1) Environmental impact on on fawner through loud constant noise through the night, plus impact of tens of thousands of youth affected by alcohol and drugs.

2) Health and Safety reason in the fact that the majority of those youth cannot stay onsite, and therefore have to get into their vehicles and drive to Byron, Brunswick Heads etc under the influence.

The capacity of the Local Authorities are completely inadequate to cope with the huge amount of traffic on the roads.

3) The local residents who work or are retirees, will have to bear the enormous brunt of thrill seekers in an affected state, hooning around the local suburbs early hours of the morning.

When the Splendour Festival used to be in Byron Bay, the locals were terrorised, had to cop loud after festival parties, vandalism, broken bottles, shitting and pissing in the streets etc.

4) In the application, the traffic arrangements according to RTA, will be that patrons attending the festival will use Tweed Valley Way, which will impact enormously on the Ocean Shores, South Golden Beach and New Brighton residents. They will not be able to access their suburb, homes etc or go in and out, due to these arrangements.

Please take these considerations seriously, we have not got a lobbyist, nor the power of money or political influence. At most, a proposal like this should happen only once a year.

Regards

Sam Bender

Re: Submission on the Proposed Cultural Events Site at Tweed Valley Way and Jones Road, Yelgun, Byron LGA - MP 09_0028

As a local resident of the subject locality I object to this development proposal on the following grounds.

Socio effects

Given the large scale, and frequency of events, of the proposal, it is inevitable that local residents will be adversely and strongly affected by large numbers of event patrons who will outnumber residents. This proposal is likely to significantly and adversely change the character of the population centres in the north of the Shire (Brunswick Heads, Ocean Shores, and New Brighton and Sth Golden Beach.

Due to a small rate-base and the Shire's enormous popularity as a tourist destination, Byron Shire currently suffers relatively poor levels of public infrastructure and maintenance of same. The proposal would substantially increase the level of use of public infrastructure.

The effects on residents of large scale festivals previously held at Byron Bay were well reported in the local media on many occasions. These effects were never able to be controlled by the event organisers or local council.

Noise levels

The noise levels appear to exceed those of the NSW Industrial Noise Policy and are likely to greatly affect the amenity of residents including those at residential areas of the north of the shire.

Planning and Law

Previous state government investigations

The Cleland Commission of inquiry should to protect the environment by zoning most of the site for environmental protection.

Policies and planning documents

Byron Council's Events on Public and Private Lands Policy prohibits these type of festivals that exceed the policies parameters regarding frequency, location and attendance. The policy aims to maintain the character and amenity of the shire.

The proposal seems at odds with a number of state government initiatives (eg Australian Heritage Commission, Register of National Estate, 1994
Cleland Commission of Inquiry, 1997
Far North Coast Regional Strategy, NSW Planning 2006
The Great Eastern Ranges (GER) Initiative, DECCW, 2007
Border Ranges Biodiversity Management Plan, DECCW, 2008
Northern Rivers Biodiversity Management Plan, 2010).

Project Justification

Byron Shire already has two major venues that should be used for such festivals (Ewingsdales Sports and Cultural site and the Blues Festival site). A third site is not justified: There is no justification for a venue of the scale proposed.

Land and Environment Court, 3A, and other court rulings

The current application has not addressed the issues that led to the Land and Environment Court rejecting the original proposal. The court viewed the access road (the "Spine Road") through 7K zoned land was prohibited by the zoning.

It is a concern that the proponents may view Part 3A planning legislation as a way of circumventing the courts ruling/ views.

It is a concern that the present proponents appear to have not complied with previous court rulings that they 'inherited' by title ie rehabilitation of Yelgun Creek and rehabilitation of rainforest clearing and protection of rezoned lands as a result of the Cleland inquiry.

Traffic and Parking

Retaining the parking area as pasture land will result in major problems even during moderate rain events. The parking area will become an inaccessible quagmire threatening patron vehicles and evacuation attempts.

Traffic is proposed to move from the Brunswick Head interchange through Ocean Shores and through the Yelgun interchange. This is likely to result in major gridlocks and demonstrated at previous Splendour In The Grass events at Byron Bay and Woodford (Qld.)

Given the short flood warning times and the effect of even moderate rain effects it is likely that patrons will be unable to evacuate (especially in light of the inebriated state of many patrons particularly "P" platers).

Conflict with agricultural use

The application fails to demonstrate how the site can meet the functions of agriculture and as a festival events site as they appear to be incompatible and mutually exclusive.

Waste and potable water

The waste water loads, and the size of the effluent irrigation area (which seems to extend into the carpark area), appear to be greatly under-estimated (at 26.5L/person/day). Also the high level of the ground water appears problematic (within the 1 in 100 years flood area and within 40m to waterways).

Potable water use seems to be underestimated (26.5L/per person) given the need for showers also.

Flooding

The 1 in 100 years levels of the depth of flood water appear to be underestimated by about 0.5m. There is inadequate time for warning of a flood event (20min for a flash flood).

Ecology and archaeological significance

The locality has 50 Threatened flora and fauna species; three Ecologically Endangered Communities; is part of a Cultural 'precinct'; and is a major wildlife corridor linking the coastal wetlands with the hinterland.

It is not known how the intermittent and cumulative use of the site will impact on the natural fauna. Permanent changes to fauna assemblage are likely. Too little monitoring has occurred to determine temporal and special data comparisons. Reference should be made to the "Review of the Effects of Human Intrusion and Disturbance on Wildlife; Reference to a Proposed Permanent Cultural Events Site at Yelgun, NSW" by A. Benwell & D. Scotts, 2010 identifies likely impacts on fauna species & the Reserve System.

Fire

Peat and bush fires are a known occurrence and are likely to be more frequent given the additional risk posed by the presence of large numbers of patrons.

Economic benefits

There is no precedent to justify the economic benefit claimed. It seems most of the economic benefits are temporary and part-time employment opportunities.

Extensive community opposition

The proposal is opposed by about local and regional 30 community associations.

Yours sincerely

Richard Whitling

Dear Major Projects Office:

I have only recently learned about the proposed year-round "cultural events site" at Yelgun (Major Projects Proposal 09-0023) and have been able to learn about only parts of the material that is on exhibition. Reading it all will be impossible! However, I understand enough of what is being proposed to be completely against it.

I strongly object to all of the following:

- the increased traffic that will have negative impacts across the north of the shire
- the enormous crowds that will be on the site on and off throughout the year (and that will disturb our quiet residential neighbourhoods)
- the damage that will inevitably occur to the Wildlife Corridor and Nature Reserve that are right next door to the proposed festival site
- the greatly increased risk of fire that could well threaten homes in the vicinity, thanks to their allowing smoking and camping on site and having bonfires
- the inadequate plans for evacuation in an emergency, including the use of the Ocean Shores Country Club as an evacuation centre
- the inadequate plans for dealing with flooding (on a site that is highly prone to frequent, unpredictable flooding)

Bottom line: This is the wrong activity for this site. The applicants don't have to have festivals on this site. They were at Belongil Fields for many years and went elsewhere this year (Woodford). They can and should find a different site that is better suited to what they want to do.

I do not have the time to send a detailed response to you expressing my opinion and am thus sending you this letter that has been prepared by others. However, it expresses my feelings exactly!

I have examined and studied in depth the Environmental Assessment and found very clearly and to my satisfaction that the Cultural Events Site (Concept Plan) and the Cultural Events Site (Project Application) Application Number: 09_0028 DGRS Issued: 25/08/2009 does not comply with NSW Government objectives of its various coastal policies, including State Environmental Planning Policy 71 (Coastal Protection), the NSW Coastal Policy and NSW Coastal Design Guidelines because of the following reasons;

1. fails to improve public access and
2. fails to protect sensitive areas such as wetlands and rainforests for reasons listed on pages following our introduction.

Introduction to my submission

This Cultural Events Site (Concept Plan) and the Cultural Events Site (Project Application) Application Number: 09_0028 DGRS does not qualify under a Part 3A development because it is not critical infrastructure. Unlike a residential development, retail or industrial development, hospital or other such critical development, this cultural event site does not need to be established at a particular site such as at Jones Road and Tweed Valley way. Also unlike the previous Part 3A developments that have been approved, this DA takes no notice of existing infrastructure such as adequate roads and is proposed for this locality purely because the proponents own the land at this locality.

There are hundreds of properties available throughout the region where festivals can be held that are not within a wildlife corridor or adjacent a rainforest remnant. If the proponents were interested in the protection of natural and residential environments, they would buy a property away from wildlife corridors, bushland remnants, wetlands and residential areas to establish a cultural events site. Woodford, where the previous Splendour in the Grass festival was last held is 50 km inland at the end of a road in open farmland with no close residential areas or wildlife corridors and nature reserves.

We live at 269 Jones Road Yelgun / Wooyung directly adjacent the site and traffic studies by the proponents clearly show that we would no longer be able to continue to drive to work, go shopping or have relatives and friends visit or to access our property in safety during many days of the year. This is because of the proposal to have thousands of vehicle movements throughout the year and major traffic jams during the major events.

Noise studies by the proponents clearly show that we would no longer be able to be able to sleep during many nights of the year due to deafening noise from amplified music from several stages.

Our home and property is situated at the end of Jones Road adjacent the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and if this DA was approved our amenity would be completely destroyed and our property's value would dramatically fall.

My spouse is a biologist and I have had much experience with the movement of fauna at this locality, I know as a fact that this proposal if approved would have a devastating impact on common and threatened TSC Act (1995) fauna species. This is particularly so for endangered fruit-doves and insectivorous bats that would be extremely stressed by the loud noises, be unable to feed and rapidly starve. Insectivorous bats are commonly found dead the next day after illegal musical events (doofs) are held in forested situations after a single night of amplified music.

Fruit-doves and bowerbirds are essential for the seed dispersal of the rainforest trees of the UNESCO World Heritage listed rainforests of the Mount Warning caldera. Therefore, this DA, if approved, would have an extremely detrimental affect on the UNESCO World Heritage reserve system.

My spouse's repeated fauna surveys over 45 years has shown a collapse in populations of many of the birds in our last mountain forests, many of which are now almost silent. Their winter lowland habitat and food resources have been eliminated with 99% of lowland forests destroyed. Only this last far northern NSW wildlife corridor survives that allows beautiful, iconic, shy and endangered seasonal migrants from the mountains to the coast.

The proposed 'Splendour in the Grass' permanent year round mega festival cultural site could be an extinction event for populations of these threatened species. The noise & pollution from multiple generators, stages, lights, noise, traffic & 50,000 patrons & 25,000 campers will create terrible stress for birds & other animals used to quiet habitat. Planting trees will not offset the massive environmental impacts and the corridor will have wide roads for semi trailers permanently cutting it. Pollution from people and vehicles will flow directly into the adjacent SEPP 14 endangered wetland community from the proposed parking area on Yelgun Creek.

Recent studies have proven the shocking revelation that whole ecosystems including iconic endangered wildlife protected within national parks and other reserves are dying because of the sounds produced by the ever-increasing noise generated by modern machinery. The sound from vehicles, aircraft, generators and loud music, known as anthrophony, coined by 69-year old field recording scientist Bernie Krause to describe human-made noise, is rapidly obliterating the biophony, the pristine acoustics of nature. Consequently, animal populations are failing to breed and are decimated by predators.

1.0 The proposal fails to improve public access.

1.1 The Environmental Assessment fails to adequately address the following considerations quoted below in part;

5.1 Prepare a traffic impact study in accordance with Table 2.1 of the RTA's Guide to Traffic Generating Developments;

5.2 Provide an analyses of the operational capacity, traffic amenity and safety of the Yelgun Interchange with the Pacific Highway to accommodate levels of traffic generated by the proposal;

5.3 Provide details on the connection between the proposed spine access road and the Tweed Coast Road because of the following reasons;

We have lived at 269 Jones Road Yelgun / Wooyung for 7 years & have owned the land for many years previously before we built our house. We well know that the intersection at Tweed Valley Way & Jones Road is the most dangerous intersection imaginable and this can be immediately understood at first glance. It is situated on a blind hilltop on a blind bend on a 90 km an hour major road (Tweed Valley Way).

To access Jones Road from the south the vehicle must come to a complete stop in the overtaking land at the blind hilltop with only a 40m view to the north & only seconds to spare before crossing over the southbound lane into Jones Road. Cars travelling behind from the south naturally believe that all cars in the overtaking uphill lane are in fact overtaking & not stopping to enter a minor, almost invisible road (Jones Road).

Vehicles travelling at 90 km per hour south along the Tweed Valley Way on encountered the Jones Road intersection on a blind hilltop on a blind bend have to stop to make a sudden left hand turn. Both the above are safe if traffic is low and road users know exactly what is happening, yet the DA proposes to make the Tweed Valley Way & Jones Road intersection the main access for all traffic (buses, trucks, staff vehicles) except for patron's cars that are proposed to enter on a bend opposite Yelgun Road further south. If the permanent cultural festival site is approved it will not improve public access and will make this intersection a black spot with frequent fatal accidents.

Jones Road is a single lane gravel road with a number of blind crests & bends with no room along much of the road for two cars to pass. It is lined on either side with large gum trees and high banks and there have been a number of head on collisions at low speed because if two cars are approaching each other there is no opportunity to see each other's approach at several places. The trees cannot be removed because they form the last east-west wildlife corridor critical for the survival of many NSW TSC Act (1995) listed vulnerable and endangered bird and microbat species that seasonally migrate to the lowland coastal forests from the UNESCO World Heritage rainforests of the Mount Warning caldera

If the permanent cultural festival site is approved Jones Road tourists & locals will be tempted to drive down Jones Road. The DA demands the destruction of the last east-west wildlife corridor for the first 400m from the intersection of Tweed Valley Way & Jones Road where the trees will have to be removed to create a two-lane bitumen road. The remainder of Jones Road will remain an extremely dangerous single lane gravel road with a 60kph speed limit with a number of blind crests & bends with no room along much of the road for 2 cars to pass & so will massively increase the chance of head on serious & fatal vehicle accidents & will not improve public access.

The Proposed North Byron Parklands development will have negative impacts on the functionality and viability of the local road network. The Pacific Highway is a road of national significance; Tweed Valley Way and Brunswick Valley Way are roads of regional/local significance. The Yelgun interchange is identified as the major limiting factor to the amount of traffic that can be safely handled by any future events at the site.

The proposal states: “The road network [surrounding the site] currently has spare capacity.” The two-lane bitumen road known as Tweed Valley Way/Brunswick Valley Way, and the unpaved Jones Road does not have spare capacity. Regarding the capacity of the Yelgun interchange, the proponents claim to have calculated “limits on the amount of traffic generated by the site”. However, these are estimates only, based on the much smaller festival that was held in 2007. It is not at all certain that the assumptions from that festival will hold true for the much larger festivals proposed for Yelgun. In fact, because the Yelgun site is much more remote than Belongil Fields in Byron Bay (the 2007 site), it is likely that many more people will bring their cars, trucks, and other vehicles so as not to have to rely on shuttles or taxis. Furthermore, it is unrealistic for the proponents to claim they can control the number of occupants in cars.

Therefore it does not comply with Guide to Traffic Generating Developments (RTA, 2002) and Guide to Traffic Engineering and Guide to Geometric Design Roads (Austroads, 2003, AP-G1/03).

2.0 The proposal fails to protect sensitive areas such as wetlands and rainforests for reasons listed below.

2.1 The Environmental Assessment fails to adequately address the following considerations quoted below in part;

4. Considerations of provisions arising from environmental planning instruments, Regional Strategies and Development Control Plans;
5. Considerations of the consistency of the project with the objects of the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act 1979;

6. Considerations of impacts on matters of National Environmental Significance under the Commonwealth Environmental Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999;

9.1 Assess the potential direct and indirect impacts of the development on flora and fauna taking into consideration impacts on any threatened species, populations, ecological communities in accordance with DECCW's Guidelines for Threatened Species Assessment (2005).

9.2 Assess any potential direct and indirect impacts of the development on any wetland areas within or surrounding the site, particularly SEPP 14 Wetland no.57.

9.3 Assess any potential direct and indirect impacts of the development on any endangered ecological communities within or surrounding the site.

9.6 Outline measures for the conservation of existing wildlife corridor values and / or connective importance of any vegetation on the subject land.

9.7 Address measures to protect and manage the riparian corridor both within and adjacent to the site.

9.8 The proposed car parking area is in close proximity to the Billinudgel Swamp Nature Reserve. Indicate what measures will be undertaken to prevent weed and toxic runoff into the reserve.

11.1 The concept plan area is located adjacent the Billinudgel Swamp Nature Reserve. Address any direct and/or indirect impacts of the project where it adjoins this land.

because of the following reasons;

The Ecological Assessment for a concurrent Concept Plan and Project Application Environmental Assessment Report for the North Byron Parklands project (Fitzgerald, 2010) clearly states that it is not possible to assess the impact of the proposal on endangered and vulnerable Fauna listed in the NSW Threatened Species Conservation Act (1975) and the Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999 (EPBC Act) and recorded in the NSW NPWS data banks as occurring on site and directly adjacent.

All through the report, the information emphasises that “because the disturbance regime is unprecedented for the site, and because fauna responses may include unpredicted behaviours” (Fitzgerald 2010, p.63) “impact processes and risks are more complex (fauna responses to disturbance) and unpredictable impacts may arise”.

“The episodic nature of event-related disturbances punctuated by longer periods of inactivity makes impact assessment particularly complicated. Whether particular fauna will, tolerate, become habituated or sensitised to elements of the disturbance regime is unpredictable” (Fitzgerald 2010, p.20).

The staging of any large-scale musical event at the suite will bring unprecedented noise levels and a novel disturbance regime (Fitzgerald 2010, p.42).

Because the range of activities proposed is variable in scale, duration and location, so will the ecological consequences also vary. Unpredictable synergistic and interactive effects between events and other activities at the site may also occur, if and when these overlap in time (Fitzgerald 2010, p.21).

As this inflow of people increases, the level of noise and human presence will likely alienate the event area for shy fauna. Mobile species such as Swamp Wallabies will leave the vicinity, other fauna will tend to also leave or to take shelter (Fitzgerald 2010, p.40).

It is not possible to accurately assess the “importance” of local populations for any of the vulnerable species considered above without detailed demographic data (Fitzgerald 2010, p.28).

Once amplified music commences and nightfall produces the need to illuminate car parking areas, roads and other areas, then a noise and lighting influence will operate within particular spaces. Effects of noise on fauna are extremely complicated and variable (Fitzgerald 2010, p.42).

It is not possible to precisely predict the severity of such disturbance, as species exhibit varying degrees of tolerance to humans and of habituation. At best birds will manage to find resources outside the disturbance area, or become habituated. At worst birds will leave their normal home ranges.

Birds attempting to nest close to the event areas may abandon their nests, eggs or fledglings, or may persist regardless. This is unpredictable because species and individual responses vary. Wompoo Fruit-doves Ptilinopus magnificus are reported to readily abandon nests when disturbed by humans (D. Pugh, pers. comm.) (Fitzgerald 2010, p.43).

The precautionary principle

Mark Fitzgerald Ecological Consultant repeatedly states in this report that unpredictable impacts may arise and that it is not possible to precisely predict the severity of such disturbance. The author should have mentioned the precautionary principle.

The precautionary principle became internationally recognised at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development held in Rio de Janeiro in 1992. In 1992, the Commonwealth government, all State and Territory governments, and the Australian Local Government Association agreed to the Intergovernmental Agreement on the Environment. Section 3.5 of the Agreement states that the precautionary principle should inform government decision-making processes if it is likely to have a significant impact on a matter of National Environmental Significance.

The following is taken directly from the Environmental Assessment

4.0 Ecological Impacts from the proposal

Some ecological impacts from the proposal are easily identified and quantified (e.g. traffic, human presence, noise); other impact processes and risks are more complex (fauna responses to disturbance) and unpredictable impacts may arise. Impacts from events vary temporally and spatially and for particular species and ecosystems, so that the ‘footprint’ of the proposal varies across the three proposed events and non-event times. The episodic nature of event-related disturbances punctuated by longer periods of inactivity makes impact assessment particularly complicated. Whether particular fauna will, tolerate, become habituated or sensitised to elements of the disturbance regime is unpredictable. Variable patterns of resource abundance strongly influence biodiversity phenomena at the site, for example: during flowering or fruiting events numbers of insectivorous and frugivorous fauna, including threatened species, forage widely on the Parklands site (Fitzgerald 2010, p.20).

Because the range of activities proposed is variable in scale, duration and location, so will the ecological consequences also vary. Unpredictable synergistic and interactive effects between events and other activities at the site may also occur, if and when these overlap in time (Fitzgerald 2010, p.21).

5.1 Impacts on matters of national environmental significance (Section 6)

Assessment of impacts on matters of NES is based on consideration of the first year of operation described in the Project and Concept Plan Application. This is because the prediction of impacts for subsequent years of operation is dependent on gathering information on the nature of impacts observed in year 1 of operation. While it is considered reasonable to predict impacts for the operation of year 1, the cumulative, interactive and potentially synergistic effects for fauna and ecosystems of increased patronage, diverse activities and cumulative number of events over time cannot be reliably assessed without feedback from monitoring (Fitzgerald 2010, p.25).

5.1.4 Threatened species

Fifty (50) threatened species are listed in the EPBC search results. Species known from the site and considered potentially likely to be affected by the proposal include the following:

Grey-headed Flying-fox Pteropus poliocephalus V

Stinking Cryptocarya Cryptocarya foetida V

Davidson’s Plum Davidsonia jerseyana E

Durobby or Coolamon Syzygium moorei V

(Fitzgerald 2010, p.26).

5.1.7 Importance of populations

It is not possible to accurately assess the “importance” of local populations for any of the vulnerable species considered above without detailed demographic data. It is possible that significant elements of the local Grey-headed Flying-fox population may at times be present in the vicinity of the site (Fitzgerald 2010, p.28).

5.1.11 Migratory species

Thirty (30) migratory species are listed in the search results. These include seven (7) migratory terrestrial bird species, including:

White-bellied Sea-eagle Haliaeetus leucogaster, White-throated Needletail Hirundapus acutus, Rainbow Bee-eater Merops ornatus, Black-faced Monarch Monarcha melanopsis, Spectacled Monarch Monarcha trivirgatus Satin Flycatcher Myiagra cyanoleuca and Rufous Fantail Rhipidura rufifrons (Fitzgerald 2010, p.31).

6.1 Fauna and habitats—limitations of survey

Any inventory of biodiversity is unavoidably incomplete because of ongoing variations in faunal occurrences and abundance. Flora species dormant in the seedbank or seasonally absent are also under-represented in or missing from survey inventories (Fitzgerald 2010, p.35).

6.2 Impacts on Fauna

Proposed activities on the site, which will generate impacts for fauna can be summarised into two broad categories, namely: the construction and upgrading of infrastructure, and the conduct of events. Construction phase includes widening of the western 350m of Jones Road, construction of the spine road and underpass or at grade crossing, construction of internal roads and construction of project buildings. The operation of events involves multiple activities described below. The background agricultural activities of the site are not considered here. Both categories of activities produce temporary impacts by introducing human presence to the site, but the scale, duration, location and nature of impacts vary. Some impacts from road construction may be permanent.

Construction of the spine road will create a greater local barrier effect for terrestrial fauna if an ‘at grade’ crossing is used, because of the requirement to fill both northern and southern approaches to Jones Road. The construction of the spine road north of Jones Road and the upgrade of existing farm tracks within the application area will produce disturbance by human presence and the noise from operation of machinery. Local risks of road-kill will be increased for the duration of the construction process (Fitzgerald 2010, p.39).

As this inflow of people increases, the level of noise and human presence will likely alienate the event area for shy fauna. Mobile species such as Swamp Wallabies will leave the vicinity, other fauna will tend to also leave or to take shelter (Fitzgerald 2010, p.40).

Once amplified music commences and nightfall produces the need to illuminate car parking areas, roads and other areas, then a noise and lighting influence will operate within particular spaces. A gradient for reception of such stimuli from intense to imperceptible will vary for different species, focussed on the point of origin at various stages, and influenced by the prevalent climatic conditions. Effects of noise on fauna are extremely complicated and variable (Larkin, undated). For example, if blossoms and/or fruits are present in forest vegetation then flying foxes, which normally forage on these resources may avoid areas affected by noise. If flying-foxes land to feed prior to the onset of performance or during an interval, they then may be disturbed off the forage when music resumes. This effect will vary according to distance from the point where noise originates, and will likely cease when the noise ceases, i.e. at the end of the night’s activities.

The Parklands site experiences a variable level of background noise emanating from the adjacent freeway and Tweed Valley Way, local aviation training, as well as from the Pacific Ocean. However, the staging of any large scale musical event at the site will bring unprecedented noise levels and a novel disturbance regime (Fitzgerald 2010, p.42).

During daylight hours, similar effects may operate for frugivorous and nectivorous birds. That is, wherever human presence, vehicle movements or amplified music produce disturbance effects, the resources normally exploited by these fauna may be unavailable. These effects are likely to operate for the central swamp sclerophyll forests and adjacent subcoastal floodplain forest habitats. It is not possible to precisely predict the severity of such disturbance, as species exhibit varying degrees of tolerance to humans and of habituation. At best, birds will manage to find resources outside the disturbance area, or become habituated. At worst birds will leave their normal home ranges.

Birds attempting to nest close to the event areas may abandon their nests, eggs or fledglings, or may persist regardless. This is unpredictable because species and individual responses vary. Wompoo Fruit-doves Ptilinopus magnificus are reported to readily abandon nests when disturbed by humans (D. Pugh, pers. comm.) (Fitzgerald 2010, p.43).

Movements of vehicles in and out of the site will increase the risk of road kill for fauna, again varying according to climate and management of traffic behaviour. Following the cessation of the event, vehicle movements will constitute both a barrier effect and a high risk of road kill as patrons leave the site (Fitzgerald 2010, p.44).

6.2.4 Impacts on threatened fauna species

The complex and variable disturbance regime described above is likely to affect fauna in different ways and to varying extents of severity. In part, this depends upon the seasonally available resources at the site, but also on fauna behaviour and patterns of presence at the site (Fitzgerald 2010, p.45).

15.0 Proposed offset measures for the loss of biodiversity

Biodiversity offsets are required where a loss of biodiversity is expected. Impacts on biodiversity of operating the event site include some unpredictability, because the disturbance regime is unprecedented for the site, and because fauna responses may include unpredicted behaviours (Fitzgerald 2010, p.63).

Therefore it does not comply with;

Draft Guidelines for Threatened Species Assessment (DEC & DPI, 2005) and the Threatened Species Management Manual (NPWS, 1998).

3.0 The Environmental Assessment fails to adequately address the following considerations quoted below in part;

7. An assessment of the potential impacts of the project;

1.1 Justify the proposed land uses across the site having regard for the Byron Local Environment Plan 1988;

1.2 Justify the proposal with references to relevant local, regional and state planning strategies;

1.5 Outline in detail the scale and frequency of events;

2.1 Demonstrate suitability of the proposal with the surrounding area in relation to bulk, scale, amenity (including noise) having regard to the Coastal Design Guidelines of NSW(2003) and the NSW Coastal Policy 1997.

4.3 Consider the capacity of existing infrastructure, services and facilities within Byron Shire to accommodate the temporary population increase generated by proposed large-scale events.

6.5 Provide an assessment of any flood risks

6.6 Assess the potential impacts of an increase in rainfall intensity on the flood regime of the site and adjacent lands with consideration of Practical Consideration of Climate Change – Floodplain Risk Management Guidelines (DECC, October 2007)

10.1 Provide a social impact assessment for the development.

11.2 Address any direct and/or indirect impacts the proposal may have on the surrounding and nearby residential and rural residences.

p. i/240 - iii/242 “Level of noise”

On this page is the statement: “The Site has several immediate residences that are in conflict with the proposed development. Experience at other major greenfield sites has shown that this is to be expected and respected.” To show respect for neighbours ordinarily means not engaging in actions that cause them distress. Yet there is no indication in this part of the proposal that such respect is to be shown. Indeed, the applicants clearly intend to generate whatever noise they deem as “the level of music needed for patrons” as stated on page ii/241. The applicants state: “The music levels will alter the lifestyle of the nearest affected residents ... and the conflict with their lifestyle is unable to be completely resolved”.

If unwanted noise levels cannot be resolved, the applicants should not be allowed to proceed. They should not be allowed to create repeatedly distressing situations for neighbours that, by their own reckoning, cannot be resolved. They should be saying to themselves, “Look, we shouldn’t be doing this. It’s going to disturb far too many people!” Or, “Let’s find another place to do what we want, one that’s a lot farther away from all these residential areas.” (We note that although the applicants have focused primarily on the residents along Jones Road, plenty of people in Yelgun, Wooyung, North Ocean Shores, and elsewhere are also quite concerned about this level of noise.)

p 1350, Fast onset of flooding

On this page: “The project site is affected by both local catchment flow and flooding from the broader catchment. Due to the fast onset of local flooding, this type of flooding is most likely to enforce constraints on the use of the site.”

Yet the massive scale of the project suggests no such constraints.

• Floodplain locations

The northern end of the site (event sites, camping areas and carpark) are in the Crabbes Creek Floodplain and the Mooball Creek Catchment. The southern side (carpark area) is in the Yelgun Creek Floodplain and Marshall's Creek catchment.

We note that the entire area gets frequent and unpredictable rain and is subject to flooding whenever significant rainfall occurs. It is an exceedingly poor choice of an area for staging events that involve thousands of people, vehicles, and equipment.

• Modelling of flood impacts

The consultants admit more modelling is needed upstream of the proposed Spine Road and say they have provided no modelling of flooding impacts on northern side of site on Crabbes Creek due to limitations of the hydrological model used (p 1352). Yet this is the same company that completed the Tweed/Byron Coastal Creeks Floodplain Study in 2009. They should therefore have access to information about flows from Crabbes Creek. This information is necessary to assess the impact of the proposed development adequately and has the potential to increase flooding estimates on the northern side of the property (event site and camping area). This must also be modelled.

1. Level of Risk

It is not specified anywhere in this Technical Paper how the site is classified in terms of its level of fire risk, yet this classification is a key detail that should be used in determining if appropriate measures are planned with regard to fire risk on the site. There is also no GIS mapping in this assessment to show land zoning and bushfire categories. However, the Draft Bush Fire Risk Management Plan of July 2009, devised by the Far North Coast Bush Fire Management Committee and recently adopted by the RFS, lists the likelihood of fire at Wooyung/Yelgun to be “almost certain”, the consequence to be “catastrophic”, and the risk to be “extreme.” These ratings should be taken into consideration in this Technical Paper. In addition, the properties at the end of Jones Road are classified as an area of High Fire Risk. In response, the property owners must maintain the property in certain, specified ways. The risk level/levels of North Byron Shire Parklands should be specified here and used as the basis for the hazard assessment so that the community (and the state) can properly assess this section of the EA.

2. p ii, Access/Property Access (Bush Fires Protection Measures table)

This states “Comply, with the exception of alternative access to sites beyond 200m from a through road.” This can only mean that the plan does not comply because a major event with tens of thousands of people must have an alternative access to a through road within 200 metres. The statements in columns 2 and 3 under this heading are not at all clear. It seems that they mean the landowners are exempt from the requirement of alternative access to the property for the reasons stated in column 3, “Due to the area of the site and being landlocked with predominantly grassland vegetation and larger than required APZ’s an alternative access is not considered necessary in the circumstance”. In fact, large areas of landlocked (no escape) grassland with large asset protection zones cannot possibly be used as an excuse to not have an alternative access to a through road within 200 metres. This must particularly apply with a proposal to hold events for tens of thousands of people who have access to several bars and consequently are likely to be under the influence of alcohol and possibly illegal drugs and therefore not acting especially responsibly with matches, cigarettes, and campfires.

3. p ii, Fire trails/Not Required (Bush Fires Protection Measures table)

The statement in column 3 states that asset protection zones will be around any buildings on the site but not in other areas, despite the fact that the site is immediately adjacent to Billinudgel Nature Reserve and several private properties. Shouldn't the Reserve and the private properties be considered assets that ought to be protected with APZs?

Therefore the Environmental Assessment does not comply with;

I have examined and studied in depth the Environmental Assessment and found very clearly and to my satisfaction that the Cultural Events Site (Concept Plan) and the Cultural Events Site (Project Application) Application Number: 09_0028 DGRS Issued: 25/08/2009 does not comply with NSW Government objectives of its various coastal policies, including State Environmental Planning Policy 71 (Coastal Protection), the NSW Coastal Policy and NSW Coastal Design Guidelines because of the following reasons;

1. fails to improve public access and
2. fails to protect sensitive areas such as wetlands and rainforests for reasons listed on pages following our introduction.

Introduction to my submission

This Cultural Events Site (Concept Plan) and the Cultural Events Site (Project Application) Application Number: 09_0028 DGRS does not qualify under a Part 3A development because it is not critical infrastructure. Unlike a residential development, retail or industrial development, hospital or other such critical development, this cultural event site does not need to be established at a particular site such as at Jones Road and Tweed Valley way. Also unlike the previous Part 3A developments that have been approved, this DA takes no notice of existing infrastructure such as adequate roads and is proposed for this locality purely because the proponents own the land at this locality.

There are hundreds of properties available throughout the region where festivals can be held that are not within a wildlife corridor or adjacent a rainforest remnant. If the proponents were interested in the protection of natural and residential environments, they would buy a property away from wildlife corridors, bushland remnants, wetlands and residential areas to establish a cultural events site. Woodford, where the previous Splendour in the Grass festival was last held is 50 km inland at the end of a road in open farmland with no close residential areas or wildlife corridors and nature reserves.

We live at 269 Jones Road Yelgun / Wooyung directly adjacent the site and traffic studies by the proponents clearly show that we would no longer be able to continue to drive to work, go shopping or have relatives and friends visit or to access our property in safety during many days of the year. This is because of the proposal to have thousands of vehicle movements throughout the year and major traffic jams during the major events.

Noise studies by the proponents clearly show that we would no longer be able to be able to sleep during many nights of the year due to deafening noise from amplified music from several stages.

Our home and property is situated at the end of Jones Road adjacent the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and if this DA was approved our amenity would be completely destroyed and our property's value would dramatically fall.

As a biologist and having studied in depth the movement of fauna at this locality, I know as a fact that this proposal if approved would have a devastating impact on common and threatened TSC Act (1995) fauna species. This is particularly so for endangered fruit-doves and insectivorous bats that would be extremely stressed by the loud noises, be unable to feed and rapidly starve. Insectivorous bats are commonly found dead the next day after illegal musical events (doofs) are held in forested situations after a single night of amplified music.

Fruit-doves and bowerbirds are essential for the seed dispersal of the rainforest trees of the UNESCO World Heritage listed rainforests of the Mount Warning caldera. Therefore, this DA, if approved, would have an extremely detrimental affect on the UNESCO World Heritage reserve system.

My repeated fauna surveys over 45 years has shown a collapse in populations of many of the birds in our last mountain forests, many of which are now almost silent. Their winter lowland habitat and food resources have been eliminated with 99% of lowland forests destroyed. Only this last far northern NSW wildlife corridor survives that allows beautiful, iconic, shy and endangered seasonal migrants from the mountains to the coast.

The proposed 'Splendour in the Grass' permanent year round mega festival cultural site could be an extinction event for populations of these threatened species. The noise & pollution from multiple generators, stages, lights, noise, traffic & 50,000 patrons & 25,000 campers will create terrible stress for birds & other animals used to quiet habitat. Planting trees will not offset the massive environmental impacts and the corridor will have wide roads for semi trailers permanently cutting it. Pollution from people and vehicles will flow directly into the adjacent SEPP 14 endangered wetland community from the proposed parking area on Yelgun Creek.

Recent studies have proven the shocking revelation that whole ecosystems including iconic endangered wildlife protected within national parks and other reserves are dying because of the sounds produced by the ever-increasing noise generated by modern machinery. The sound from vehicles, aircraft, generators and loud music, known as anthrophony, coined by 69-year old field recording scientist Bernie Krause to describe human-made noise, is rapidly obliterating the biophony, the pristine acoustics of nature. Consequently, animal populations are failing to breed and are decimated by predators.

1.0 The proposal fails to improve public access.

1.1 The Environmental Assessment fails to adequately address the following considerations quoted below in part;

5.1 Prepare a traffic impact study in accordance with Table 2.1 of the RTA's Guide to Traffic Generating Developments;

5.2 Provide an analyses of the operational capacity, traffic amenity and safety of the Yelgun Interchange with the Pacific Highway to accommodate levels of traffic generated by the proposal;

5.3 Provide details on the connection between the proposed spine access road and the Tweed Coast Road because of the following reasons;

We have lived at 269 Jones Road Yelgun / Wooyung for 7 years & have owned the land for many years previously before we built our house. We well know that the intersection at Tweed Valley Way & Jones Road is the most dangerous intersection imaginable and this can be immediately understood at first glance. It is situated on a blind hilltop on a blind bend on a 90 km an hour major road (Tweed Valley Way).

To access Jones Road from the south the vehicle must come to a complete stop in the overtaking land at the blind hilltop with only a 40m view to the north & only seconds to spare before crossing over the southbound lane into Jones Road. Cars travelling behind from the south naturally believe that all cars in the overtaking uphill lane are in fact overtaking & not stopping to enter a minor, almost invisible road (Jones Road).

Vehicles travelling at 90 km per hour south along the Tweed Valley Way on encountered the Jones Road intersection on a blind hilltop on a blind bend have to stop to make a sudden left hand turn. Both the above are safe if traffic is low and road users know exactly what is happening, yet the DA proposes to make the Tweed Valley Way & Jones Road intersection the main access for all traffic (buses, trucks, staff vehicles) except for patron's cars that are proposed to enter on a bend opposite Yelgun Road further south. If the permanent cultural festival site is approved it will not improve public access and will make this intersection a black spot with frequent fatal accidents.

Jones Road is a single lane gravel road with a number of blind crests & bends with no room along much of the road for two cars to pass. It is lined on either side with large gum trees and high banks and there have been a number of head on collisions at low speed because if two cars are approaching each other there is no opportunity to see each other's approach at several places. The trees cannot be removed because they form the last east-west wildlife corridor critical for the survival of many NSW TSC Act (1995) listed vulnerable and endangered bird and microbat species that seasonally

migrate to the lowland coastal forests from the UNESCO World Heritage rainforests of the Mount Warning caldera

If the permanent cultural festival site is approved Jones Road tourists & locals will be tempted to drive down Jones Road. The DA demands the destruction of the last east-west wildlife corridor for the first 400m from the intersection of Tweed Valley Way & Jones Road where the trees will have to be removed to create a two-lane bitumen road. The remainder of Jones Road will remain an extremely dangerous single lane gravel road with a 60kph speed limit with a number of blind crests & bends with no room along much of the road for 2 cars to pass & so will massively increase the chance of head on serious & fatal vehicle accidents & will not improve public access.

The Proposed North Byron Parklands development will have negative impacts on the functionality and viability of the local road network. The Pacific Highway is a road of national significance; Tweed Valley Way and Brunswick Valley Way are roads of regional/local significance. The Yelgun interchange is identified as the major limiting factor to the amount of traffic that can be safely handled by any future events at the site.

The proposal states: “The road network [surrounding the site] currently has spare capacity.” The two-lane bitumen road known as Tweed Valley Way/Brunswick Valley Way, and the unpaved Jones Road does not have spare capacity. Regarding the capacity of the Yelgun interchange, the proponents claim to have calculated “limits on the amount of traffic generated by the site”. However, these are estimates only, based on the much smaller festival that was held in 2007. It is not at all certain that the assumptions from that festival will hold true for the much larger festivals proposed for Yelgun. In fact, because the Yelgun site is much more remote than Belongil Fields in Byron Bay (the 2007 site), it is likely that many more people will bring their cars, trucks, and other vehicles so as not to have to rely on shuttles or taxis. Furthermore, it is unrealistic for the proponents to claim they can control the number of occupants in cars.

Therefore it does not comply with Guide to Traffic Generating Developments (RTA, 2002) and Guide to Traffic Engineering and Guide to Geometric Design Roads (Austroads, 2003, AP-G1/03).

2.0 The proposal fails to protect sensitive areas such as wetlands and rainforests for reasons listed below.

2.1 The Environmental Assessment fails to adequately address the following considerations quoted below in part;

4. Considerations of provisions arising from environmental planning instruments, Regional Strategies and Development Control Plans;
5. Considerations of the consistency of the project with the objects of the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act 1979;

6. Considerations of impacts on matters of National Environmental Significance under the Commonwealth Environmental Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999;

9.1 Assess the potential direct and indirect impacts of the development on flora and fauna taking into consideration impacts on any threatened species, populations, ecological communities in accordance with DECCW's Guidelines for Threatened Species Assessment (2005).

9.2 Assess any potential direct and indirect impacts of the development on any wetland areas within or surrounding the site, particularly SEPP 14 Wetland no.57.

9.3 Assess any potential direct and indirect impacts of the development on any endangered ecological communities within or surrounding the site.

9.6 Outline measures for the conservation of existing wildlife corridor values and / or connective importance of any vegetation on the subject land.

9.7 Address measures to protect and manage the riparian corridor both within and adjacent to the site.

9.8 The proposed car parking area is in close proximity to the Billinudgel Swamp Nature Reserve. Indicate what measures will be undertaken to prevent weed and toxic runoff into the reserve.

11.1 The concept plan area is located adjacent the Billinudgel Swamp Nature Reserve. Address any direct and/or indirect impacts of the project where it adjoins this land.

because of the following reasons;

The Ecological Assessment for a concurrent Concept Plan and Project Application Environmental Assessment Report for the North Byron Parklands project (Fitzgerald, 2010) clearly states that it is not possible to assess the impact of the proposal on endangered and vulnerable Fauna listed in the NSW Threatened Species Conservation Act (1975) and the Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999 (EPBC Act) and recorded in the NSW NPWS data banks as occurring on site and directly adjacent.

All through the report, the information emphasises that “because the disturbance regime is unprecedented for the site, and because fauna responses may include unpredicted behaviours” (Fitzgerald 2010, p.63) “impact processes and risks are more complex (fauna responses to disturbance) and unpredictable impacts may arise”.

“The episodic nature of event-related disturbances punctuated by longer periods of inactivity makes impact assessment particularly complicated. Whether particular fauna will, tolerate, become habituated or sensitised to elements of the disturbance regime is unpredictable” (Fitzgerald 2010, p.20).

The staging of any large-scale musical event at the suite will bring unprecedented noise levels and a novel disturbance regime (Fitzgerald 2010, p.42).

Because the range of activities proposed is variable in scale, duration and location, so will the ecological consequences also vary. Unpredictable synergistic and interactive effects between events and other activities at the site may also occur, if and when these overlap in time (Fitzgerald 2010, p.21).

As this inflow of people increases, the level of noise and human presence will likely alienate the event area for shy fauna. Mobile species such as Swamp Wallabies will leave the vicinity, other fauna will tend to also leave or to take shelter (Fitzgerald 2010, p.40).

It is not possible to accurately assess the “importance” of local populations for any of the vulnerable species considered above without detailed demographic data (Fitzgerald 2010, p.28).

Once amplified music commences and nightfall produces the need to illuminate car parking areas, roads and other areas, then a noise and lighting influence will operate within particular spaces. Effects of noise on fauna are extremely complicated and variable (Fitzgerald 2010, p.42).

It is not possible to precisely predict the severity of such disturbance, as species exhibit varying degrees of tolerance to humans and of habituation. At best birds will manage to find resources outside the disturbance area, or become habituated. At worst birds will leave their normal home ranges.

Birds attempting to nest close to the event areas may abandon their nests, eggs or fledglings, or may persist regardless. This is unpredictable because species and individual responses vary. Wompoo Fruit-doves Ptilinopus magnificus are reported to readily abandon nests when disturbed by humans (D. Pugh, pers. comm.) (Fitzgerald 2010, p.43).

The precautionary principle

Mark Fitzgerald Ecological Consultant repeatedly states in this report that unpredictable impacts may arise and that it is not possible to precisely predict the severity of such disturbance. The author should have mentioned the precautionary principle.

The precautionary principle became internationally recognised at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development held in Rio de Janeiro in 1992. In 1992, the Commonwealth government, all State and Territory governments, and the Australian Local Government Association agreed to the Intergovernmental Agreement on the Environment. Section 3.5 of the Agreement states that the precautionary principle should inform government decision-making processes if it is likely to have a significant impact on a matter of National Environmental Significance.

The following is taken directly from the Environmental Assessment

4.0 Ecological Impacts from the proposal

Some ecological impacts from the proposal are easily identified and quantified (e.g. traffic, human presence, noise); other impact processes and risks are more complex (fauna responses to disturbance) and unpredictable impacts may arise. Impacts from events vary temporally and spatially and for particular species and ecosystems, so that the ‘footprint’ of the proposal varies across the three proposed events and non-event times. The episodic nature of event-related disturbances punctuated by longer periods of inactivity makes impact assessment particularly complicated. Whether particular fauna will, tolerate, become habituated or sensitised to elements of the disturbance regime is unpredictable. Variable patterns of resource abundance strongly influence biodiversity phenomena at the site, for example: during flowering or fruiting events numbers of insectivorous and frugivorous fauna, including threatened species, forage widely on the Parklands site (Fitzgerald 2010, p.20).

Because the range of activities proposed is variable in scale, duration and location, so will the ecological consequences also vary. Unpredictable synergistic and interactive effects between events and other activities at the site may also occur, if and when these overlap in time (Fitzgerald 2010, p.21).

5.1 Impacts on matters of national environmental significance (Section 6)

Assessment of impacts on matters of NES is based on consideration of the first year of operation described in the Project and Concept Plan Application. This is because the prediction of impacts for subsequent years of operation is dependent on gathering information on the nature of impacts observed in year 1 of operation. While it is considered reasonable to predict impacts for the operation of year 1, the cumulative, interactive and potentially synergistic effects for fauna and ecosystems of increased patronage, diverse activities and cumulative number of events over time cannot be reliably assessed without feedback from monitoring (Fitzgerald 2010, p.25).

5.1.4 Threatened species

Fifty (50) threatened species are listed in the EPBC search results. Species known from the site and considered potentially likely to be affected by the proposal include the following:

Grey-headed Flying-fox Pteropus poliocephalus V

Stinking Cryptocarya Cryptocarya foetida V

Davidson’s Plum Davidsonia jerseyana E

Durobby or Coolamon Syzygium moorei V

(Fitzgerald 2010, p.26).

5.1.7 Importance of populations

It is not possible to accurately assess the “importance” of local populations for any of the vulnerable species considered above without detailed demographic data. It is possible that significant elements of the local Grey-headed Flying-fox population may at times be present in the vicinity of the site (Fitzgerald 2010, p.28).

5.1.11 Migratory species

Thirty (30) migratory species are listed in the search results. These include seven (7) migratory terrestrial bird species, including:

White-bellied Sea-eagle Haliaeetus leucogaster, White-throated Needletail Hirundapus acutus, Rainbow Bee-eater Merops ornatus, Black-faced Monarch Monarcha melanopsis, Spectacled Monarch Monarcha trivirgatus Satin Flycatcher Myiagra cyanoleuca and Rufous Fantail Rhipidura rufifrons (Fitzgerald 2010, p.31).

6.1 Fauna and habitats—limitations of survey

Any inventory of biodiversity is unavoidably incomplete because of ongoing variations in faunal occurrences and abundance. Flora species dormant in the seedbank or seasonally absent are also under-represented in or missing from survey inventories (Fitzgerald 2010, p.35).

6.2 Impacts on Fauna

Proposed activities on the site, which will generate impacts for fauna can be summarised into two broad categories, namely: the construction and upgrading of infrastructure, and the conduct of events. Construction phase includes widening of the western 350m of Jones Road, construction of the spine road and underpass or at grade crossing, construction of internal roads and construction of project buildings. The operation of events involves multiple activities described below. The background agricultural activities of the site are not considered here. Both categories of activities produce temporary impacts by introducing human presence to the site, but the scale, duration, location and nature of impacts vary. Some impacts from road construction may be permanent.

Construction of the spine road will create a greater local barrier effect for terrestrial fauna if an ‘at grade’ crossing is used, because of the requirement to fill both northern and southern approaches to Jones Road. The construction of the spine road north of Jones Road and the upgrade of existing farm tracks within the application area will produce disturbance by human presence and the noise from operation of machinery. Local risks of road-kill will be increased for the duration of the construction process (Fitzgerald 2010, p.39).

As this inflow of people increases, the level of noise and human presence will likely alienate the event area for shy fauna. Mobile species such as Swamp Wallabies will leave the vicinity, other fauna will tend to also leave or to take shelter (Fitzgerald 2010, p.40).

Once amplified music commences and nightfall produces the need to illuminate car parking areas, roads and other areas, then a noise and lighting influence will operate within particular spaces. A gradient for reception of such stimuli from intense to imperceptible will vary for different species, focussed on the point of origin at various stages, and influenced by the prevalent climatic conditions. Effects of noise on fauna are extremely complicated and variable (Larkin, undated). For example, if blossoms and/or fruits are present in forest vegetation then flying foxes, which normally forage on these resources may avoid areas affected by noise. If flying-foxes land to feed prior to the onset of performance or during an interval, they then may be disturbed off the forage when music resumes. This effect will vary according to distance from the point where noise originates, and will likely cease when the noise ceases, i.e. at the end of the night’s activities.

The Parklands site experiences a variable level of background noise emanating from the adjacent freeway and Tweed Valley Way, local aviation training, as well as from the Pacific Ocean. However, the staging of any large scale musical event at the suite will bring unprecedented noise levels and a novel disturbance regime (Fitzgerald 2010, p.42).

During daylight hours, similar effects may operate for frugivorous and nectivorous birds. That is, wherever human presence, vehicle movements or amplified music produce disturbance effects, the resources normally exploited by these fauna may be unavailable. These effects are likely to operate for the central swamp sclerophyll forests and adjacent subcoastal floodplain forest habitats. It is not possible to precisely predict the severity of such disturbance, as species exhibit varying degrees of tolerance to humans and of habituation. At best, birds will manage to find resources outside the disturbance area, or become habituated. At worst birds will leave their normal home ranges.

Birds attempting to nest close to the event areas may abandon their nests, eggs or fledglings, or may persist regardless. This is unpredictable because species and individual responses vary. Wompoo Fruit-doves Ptilinopus magnificus are reported to readily abandon nests when disturbed by humans (D. Pugh, pers. comm.) (Fitzgerald 2010, p.43).

Movements of vehicles in and out of the site will increase the risk of road kill for fauna, again varying according to climate and management of traffic behaviour. Following the cessation of the event, vehicle movements will constitute both a barrier effect and a high risk of road kill as patrons leave the site (Fitzgerald 2010, p.44).

6.2.4 Impacts on threatened fauna species

The complex and variable disturbance regime described above is likely to affect fauna in different ways and to varying extents of severity. In part, this depends upon the seasonally available resources at the site, but also on fauna behaviour and patterns of presence at the site (Fitzgerald 2010, p.45).

15.0 Proposed offset measures for the loss of biodiversity

Biodiversity offsets are required where a loss of biodiversity is expected. Impacts on biodiversity of operating the event site include some unpredictability, because the disturbance regime is unprecedented for the site, and because fauna responses may include unpredicted behaviours (Fitzgerald 2010, p.63).

Therefore it does not comply with;

Draft Guidelines for Threatened Species Assessment (DEC & DPI, 2005) and the Threatened Species Management Manual (NPWS, 1998).

The Environmental Assessment fails to adequately address the following considerations quoted below in part;

7. An assessment of the potential impacts of the project;

1.1 Justify the proposed land uses across the site having regard for the Byron Local Environment Plan 1988;

1.2 Justify the proposal with references to relevant local, regional and state planning strategies;

1.5 Outline in detail the scale and frequency of events;

2.1 Demonstrate suitability of the proposal with the surrounding area in relation to bulk, scale, amenity (including noise) having regard to the Coastal Design Guidelines of NSW(2003) and the NSW Coastal Policy 1997.

4.3 Consider the capacity of existing infrastructure, services and facilities within Byron Shire to accommodate the temporary population increase generated by proposed large-scale events.

6.5 Provide an assessment of any flood risks

6.6 Assess the potential impacts of an increase in rainfall intensity on the flood regime of the site and adjacent lands with consideration of Practical Consideration of Climate Change – Floodplain Risk Management Guidelines (DECC, October 2007)

10.1 Provide a social impact assessment for the development.

11.2 Address any direct and/or indirect impacts the proposal may have on the surrounding and nearby residential and rural residences.

p. i/240 - iii/242 “Level of noise”

On this page is the statement: “The Site has several immediate residences that are in conflict with the proposed development. Experience at other major greenfield sites has shown that this is to be expected and respected.” To show respect for neighbours ordinarily means not engaging in actions that cause them distress. Yet there is no indication in this part of the proposal that such respect is to be shown. Indeed, the applicants clearly intend to generate whatever noise they deem as “the level of music needed for patrons” as stated on page ii/241. The applicants state: “The music levels will alter the lifestyle of the nearest affected residents ... and the conflict with their lifestyle is unable to be completely resolved”.

If unwanted noise levels cannot be resolved, the applicants should not be allowed to proceed. They should not be allowed to create repeatedly distressing situations for neighbours that, by their own reckoning, cannot be resolved. They should be saying to themselves, “Look, we shouldn’t be doing this. It’s going to disturb far too many people!” Or, “Let’s find another place to do what we want, one that’s a lot farther away from all these residential areas.” (We note that although the applicants have focused primarily on the residents along Jones Road, plenty of people in Yelgun, Wooyung, North Ocean Shores, and elsewhere are also quite concerned about this level of noise.)

p 1350, Fast onset of flooding

On this page: “The project site is affected by both local catchment flow and flooding from the broader catchment. Due to the fast onset of local flooding, this type of flooding is most likely to enforce constraints on the use of the site.”

Yet the massive scale of the project suggests no such constraints.

• Floodplain locations

The northern end of the site (event sites, camping areas and carpark) are in the Crabbes Creek Floodplain and the Mooball Creek Catchment. The southern side (carpark area) is in the Yelgun Creek Floodplain and Marshall's Creek catchment.

We note that the entire area gets frequent and unpredictable rain and is subject to flooding whenever significant rainfall occurs. It is an exceedingly poor choice of an area for staging events that involve thousands of people, vehicles, and equipment.

• Modelling of flood impacts

The consultants admit more modelling is needed upstream of the proposed Spine Road and say they have provided no modelling of flooding impacts on northern side of site on Crabbes Creek due to limitations of the hydrological model used (p 1352). Yet this is the same company that completed the Tweed/Byron Coastal Creeks Floodplain Study in 2009. They should therefore have access to information about flows from Crabbes Creek. This information is necessary to assess the impact of the proposed development adequately and has the potential to increase flooding estimates on the northern side of the property (event site and camping area). This must also be modelled.

1. Level of Risk

It is not specified anywhere in this Technical Paper how the site is classified in terms of its level of fire risk, yet this classification is a key detail that should be used in determining if appropriate measures are planned with regard to fire risk on the site. There is also no GIS mapping in this assessment to show land zoning and bushfire categories. However, the Draft Bush Fire Risk Management Plan of July 2009, devised by the Far North Coast Bush Fire Management Committee and recently adopted by the RFS, lists the likelihood of fire at Wooyung/Yelgun to be “almost certain”, the consequence to be “catastrophic”, and the risk to be “extreme.” These ratings should be taken into consideration in this Technical Paper. In addition, the properties at the end of Jones Road are classified as an area of High Fire Risk. In response, the property owners must maintain the property in certain, specified ways. The risk level/levels of North Byron Shire Parklands should be specified here and used as the basis for the hazard assessment so that the community (and the state) can properly assess this section of the EA.

2. p ii, Access/Property Access (Bush Fires Protection Measures table)

This states “Comply, with the exception of alternative access to sites beyond 200m from a through road.” This can only mean that the plan does not comply because a major event with tens of thousands of people must have an alternative access to a through road within 200 metres. The statements in columns 2 and 3 under this heading are not at all clear. It seems that they mean the landowners are exempt from the requirement of alternative access to the property for the reasons stated in column 3, “Due to the area of the site and being landlocked with predominantly grassland vegetation and larger than required APZ’s an alternative access is not considered necessary in the circumstance”. In fact, large areas of landlocked (no escape) grassland with large asset protection zones cannot possibly be used as an excuse to not have an alternative access to a through road within 200 metres. This must particularly apply with a proposal to hold events for tens of thousands of people who have access to several bars and consequently are likely to be under the influence of alcohol and possibly illegal drugs and therefore not acting especially responsibly with matches, cigarettes, and campfires.

3. p ii, Fire trails/Not Required (Bush Fires Protection Measures table)

The statement in column 3 states that asset protection zones will be around any buildings on the site but not in other areas, despite the fact that the site is immediately adjacent to Billinudgel Nature Reserve and several private properties. Shouldn't the Reserve and the private properties be considered assets that ought to be protected with APZs?

Therefore the Environmental Assessment does not comply with;

REFERENCE: MAJOR PROJECT APPLICATION – CULTURAL EVENTS SITE (09_0028) – YELGUN

We make our submission in the strongest possible opposition to this development application on the following basis:-

This radical application contains a myriad of significant problems and lacks suitability associated with a totally inappropriate site location. It is deeply concerning and difficult to comprehend.

Importantly, we believe the submission of the Development Application and the Concept Plan as a Part 3A major project is highly questionable on the basis we do not believe the project meets the criteria's required to be designated as a Part 3A major project. Closer scrutiny of the applicant's economic rationale and employment claims must be applied as their reckoning is rubbery, without foundation or precedence. Related, one could also suspect the proponents have decided to use the Part 3A process in an effort to avoid the Land and Environment Court adjudication which, in brief found the internal road network for purposes of a Place of Assembly non permissible within a 7K Habitat zoning.

Pivotal to opposition of this farcical DA is the simple fact...it is not even remotely required. It is not progressive; it creates unnecessary serious problems to the burden of existing communities and will have long term negative effects on living standards and the tourism prospects for the Byron shire. The following comments are by no means the only concerns but clearly illustrate the ambitious nature of this inappropriate development application.

1. Social Impacts - On what basis can it be justified that existing lifestyles and living conditions of residents throughout the shire, but particularly in the north of the shire, be grossly compromised by massive amplified music festivals ongoing throughout the year? Total shire wide population of 29,000 residents, daily crowd attendances of 30,000-50,000 during the 4 major event periods plus smaller amplified music festivals of up to 10,000 patrons per day plus unlimited doof parties or alike. This site is not in an isolated rural area, the actual staging position is within 2000 metres of an established high density residential precinct. Not just inappropriate, totally out of order!
The DA sets out that there be camping for up to 25,000 patrons with festival crowds up to 50,000. Irrespective of the exact crowd size, logically that leaves thousands of people needing accommodation at all hours of the night. Where will they sleep and for many continue to party? How will they reach their destinations? Most will head south towards Byron Bay, the closest communities being Ocean Shores, South Golden Beach, New Brighton and Brunswick Heads. Many will push their luck to make Byron Bay. They will find accommodation in casual holiday let properties and they will illegally camp in local streets, all within the heart of our local neighbourhoods. Public disturbance, conflict, vandalism and a schoolies style atmosphere will become the norm for the residents to tolerate. It is a fact; illicit drugs and alcohol abuse go hand in hand with these festivals. Without wishing to taint all that attend, these are not the influences we desire under the nose of our children and it is not the criminal element we want infiltrating our communities.

2. Environmental Impacts – This proposal happens to severely affect the wildlife corridor which connects the Mt. Warning World Heritage Park to the coast. It is of high state significance. Evidence of this site's importance and sensitivity is the fact that in 1997 the Carr state government adopted the 'Cleland' enquiry recommendations to protect this area because of its acute importance for the wildlife that exists within and surrounding. During the construction of the new highway completed in recent years the RTA diverted the highway route purposely so as not to potentially upset any of the species existing in this specific area.

We are not experts but on the basis our state government and the RTA went to serious costs to help protect this special piece of nature how can it be now justified to allow major amplified music festivals, on the following basis, which is what the DA details:

Crowds of up to 50,000 for 12 days of the year. Crowds of up to 10,000 for a further 8 days per year. Crowds up to 3,000 unlimited days per year. Associated is the obvious need for heavy vehicle traffic to access the site particularly during the set up and set down periods either side, and over and above the festival performance days. These are not benign gatherings, this is high level disturbance and at the very least there must be ecological and species studies carried out before intrusion of this destructive nature can even be considered.

3. Traffic – At Woodford 2010 where these promoters held their most recent 'Splendour' music festival, (attracting daily crowds of approx. 32,000) traffic was banked back for at least 6km and patrons were stranded in their cars for hours. This was not an isolated occurrence; it was the norm on arrival and departure from the Woodford site. There was also significant congestion of local traffic movement in the neighbouring township of Caboolture. The arrangements and formulas that are set out in the DA to deal with the increased traffic demands are unrealistic and fanciful; it is tangible evidence that the proponents have no solution to the traffic dilemmas that will be encountered.

See following example of their methodology: "for a 70% capacity event we must ensure that car occupancy is 2.9 persons or better and use of public transport is at least 39%.... to run a 100% capacity event we need to achieve 3.2 people per car and 39% travel by public transport". Traffic will be chaotic, the banking up of vehicles from the exit ramp onto the Pacific Highway will be a flashpoint waiting for a fatality level accident and the service road between Brunswick Heads and Yelgun not to mention residential access roads in the area will be heavily congested, more than likely grid locked. How do the promoters ensure that each car has a certain number of passengers? They cannot. The promoters refer to the use of public transport. Is our public transport supposed to handle 39% of these massive crowds? What a joke. How do the local communities move through their access roads to maintain normality in their lives? Locals need to shop, work and transport children to school/sport and other recreational activities. Surely existing ratepayers deserve to be able to move freely throughout their own neighbourhoods. What level of resource will be required from emergency services? The police will need to dispatch significant numbers to direct and control over 10,000 cars daily. With the likelihood of car accidents of varying seriousness, ambulance resource, not including the ambulance resource required to tend to festival patrons over doing their drug and alcohol intake, will also need to be at hand.

4. Flood & Bushfire- Within the DA the areas designated for car parking and camping are often under water up to over 1 metre in depth. This is not an isolated occurrence it occurs on numerous occasions each year and when we flood it invariably happens very quickly. Logically these car parking and camping areas will be rendered useless long before they are covered with water. Related is the runoff of pollution into the neighbouring wetlands. This DA totally ignores these realities. The flood risks are bad enough; bushfire potential is not just a problem, the risks equate to loss of life!

In light of the recent tragic bushfire disasters experienced particularly in Victoria the Far North Coast Bushfire Management Committee was required to review north coast bushfire issues. This committee adopted the following assessments in their recently completed Far North Coast Bushfire Management Report.

With specific Yelgun site relevance, note the classifications:

Jones Road Yelgun- Likelihood: almost certain, Consequence: catastrophic, Risk: extreme.

North Ocean Shores- Likelihood: almost certain, Consequence: catastrophic, Risk: extreme.

Wooyung- Likelihood: almost certain, Consequence: minor, Risk: high.

The fire history in this particular location has been intimidating to say the least. From 1st hand experience the bushfires of 1999 and 2004 threatened our property and in both cases it was more a reprieve of nature than the capacity of our brave fire-fighters that saved the day. In 1999 there was a wind shift which swung the fire front away from North Ocean Shores residences and the fire burnt out on the beach. The 2004 fire burnt for 3 days until heavy rain extinguished the main blaze. 50 fire units, 5 helibombers and 120 fire fighters. A Declaration of Emergency (section 44) was issued by the NSW Fire Service and cost the state over 1 million to control.

Consider the volatile bushfire potential with the combination of ongoing music festivals at all times of the year mixed with massive crowds of predominately young adults in party mode. Certain carnage for festival goers and local residents alike.

5. Emergency & Health Services- Given the scale and nature of these mega music festivals there will be an extra and significant strain on all emergency services. Whether it is the police, fire-fighters, ambulance, hospitals or psychological services our residents are concerned that their own emergencies will receive less prompt attention as a result.

6. Tourism- Byron Bay and surrounding areas is a tourist Mecca and has remained extremely popular over the best part of 4 decades. It attracts all walks of life, of all ages from various parts of Australia and indeed the world. In more recent times Byron Bay, the township has tended to be reduced to being a 'party town' most attractive to festival goers and backpackers. It is difficult to adjust that trend and there will always be room for that young adult visitor but; there has to be balance; we can't be just catering to that party theme all the time. We also want to continue to attract other visitor profiles, the retired couple in their camper heading up the coast, the young married couple with toddlers and young children, everybody, whoever they might be. It has to be our strategy to encourage a diverse range of tourists, not alienate our tourist prospects with this ridiculous imbalance of mega music festivals nonstop. If growing tourism is to be sustainable in the Byron shire, some music festivals is OK but they need to be restricted in size and regularity so as we don't ultimately, as is said, 'Kill the Goose that Laid the Golden Egg'.

7. The Logic or Lack of it!- The proponents desperately want this Yelgun site to conduct their regular large amplified music festivals. They could conduct these abrasive style events anywhere, but they, like many, can see the benefits of riding on the back of the icon of Byron Bay, in this case, at their own private site. Problem, we don't need another site. We have a perfect existing large festival site at Tyagarah. It is used only once each year for 5 days at Easter for the acclaimed 'Byron Bluesfest'. It could also be utilized for an annual 'Splendour in the Grass' music festival.

We also have the Byron Sports/Cultural Centre under construction at this time which should be used for the smaller events up to 10,000 patrons; in this case returning revenue to the communities as a public facility.

Problem; the proponents no longer are satisfied with one mega music festival each year, they want to utilize a totally inappropriate site that severely affects nearby established residential areas and destroys sensitive, until now protected wildlife corridors, for multiple amplified music festival throughout each year.

Let common sense prevail. If the proponents want their own private site to conduct ongoing major amplified music festivals every year, acquire one of many suitable sites in regions more conducive. Ideally they can stay in Northern NSW and consider the likes of Casino or Kyogle. These towns will relish the boost to their tourism numbers; there are less environmental issues and less people to disturb.

The proponents cannot have it both ways.

If the so named 'Byron Parklands' development is approved by state planning there will be a significant deterioration in local amenity, irreparable ecological damage and severely compromised living standards. How could any government allow development that is far from essential, which benefits only a few, and is to the detriment of the vast majority?
