As an academic visitor to the University of Sydney in 2008, I spent several hours walking through the charming, historic neighborhood next to the Graythwaite site. This walk was a memorable high point of my visit to Sydney. I was surprised to learn recently of the proposed redevelopment of the Graythwaite site, in a way that is likely to damage or destroy its Anzac and garden heritage. I urge that a public enquiry be held to determine uses for the site that respect its historic importance and that of the neighborhood.
