I object to the development as shown in the concept plan. The height of this development is totally out of proportion to the surroundings. Local traffic, which is already very heavy at peak hours when many people avoid Lane Cove Rd by using "rat runs" through my street amongst others, would be much worse if there were large numbers of extra residents, not to mention the road restrictions around the development that would add to congestion.

We don't want another Chatswood. That is an example of a suburb where the number of people is far too high for the road infrastructure to handle. It's useless to assume that people will use public transport. The number of office workers at Optus who park in 2-hour spots and move their cars three times a day shows how many people will never consider public transport as an option, no matter what restrictions are laid on them.
